It was only a ten second visit. Inside campus one moment. Out the next. The mysterious midsummer visitors in this beautiful balloon provided a birthday wish for someone, inspiration for someone else. Like the 1987-88 school year, the surprise visit marked the beginning of an inside-out year.

The 25-year tradition of cheerleading uniforms took a modest twist. Hogs were still out as the official logo, but the cardinal and gold was brighter than ever. The old uniforms were turned inside out and stored; a new style was in. Bright colors were back.

“Perhaps we should step aside and view ourselves . . . from the inside out.”

Subtle changes like that were all around us.

Some took that thought seriously. Bound together and shaped by tradition, the picture for '88 began to take focus. We were entering the next 25 years with new spirit, new hope, new views. All too often, that new, inside view only ad-

all, 1987. The twelve year tradition of the Senior Lounge was turned inside out (and so were most of the Seniors) when the administration decided to convert the lounge into a round-tabled, proctored, study space. "It just doesn't seem fair," commented senior Dana MacNally. "Why start with the Class of '88?" But start it did. It may have been the same senior lounge, but it just wasn't the same. By Christmas week, just about all the seniors still felt the same.

Most of the spirited fans were on the outside looking in when it came to pep rallies. The several hundred gathered outside the back of the gym on Friday, October 2 at 12:00 noon to get fired up for the year's biggest battle against Fairfield Prep. While teachers gather for the October faculty meeting in the confines of the library, the back lot was alive with hog calls. It was the first outside, student sponsored rally in many years.

Even the heartbeat of the school was changing. The good old typing room, a tradition since the opening days in the early 60s, had a new look. Computers and word processors had replaced the old electric IBM typewriters. It was a new look, a new way of thinking, a new smell: plastic mostly.

Even the AP courses took a shift. Labs were added to the language program hidden inside rooms. From the world of fashions, those little white sneakers that were in throughout the 50s were in once again. Sweatshirts were even being worn inside out.

From an inside point-of-view, some of life's largest problems seemed minor.

Back Into It

Summers out, school's in

Marking the end of the good times and freedom that summer represents, the first day of school arrived all too soon for students everywhere. Joe LoPresti expressed a common feeling by revealing "I didn't look forward to the first day of school because it altered my habit of waking up at 11:00 every day." Yet this dreaded day brought a sense of excitement and anticipation back to the halls of St. Joseph High. Lisbeth Pifko admitted that "even though it means the beginning of a long and hard year, I am always excited for the first day of school. I always go sock shopping at least two weeks before school starts." Whether it was the freshmen, hoping to meet new friends, or the seniors, anxious to see old friends, this spirit was present.

The freshmen experienced the biggest change on the first day. It marked the start of an exciting period of their lives. Nevertheless, the fear of this new school and so many strangers often subdued any anticipation. Tanya Hairston stated that "although St. Joe's is like my old school in size, I was still afraid because I didn't really know anyone." Freshmen also had to deal with embarrassing predicaments such as failing to open their lockers and canvassing the third floor in search of room 314. Teachers and student councilors offered reassuring words. They gave freshmen confidence that once they overcame their initial fears, their years at St. Joe's would be both successful and enjoyable.

Perhaps the most unappealing thing about returning to school is the fact that it marks the end of lazy summer mornings lolling in bed. Seniors Mike Lawson, John Norko and Junior Wayne Blochichak struggle against their state of mental fatigue as they try to get back into the swing of things.

The sophomores returned to St. Joseph's thankful for one thing, that they were no longer freshmen. The new freshmen would provide a target for their jokes and criticisms while relieving some of the pressure the class of '90 felt when they were the youngest in the school.

Arriving for the first time in blue uniforms, the class of '89 entered their junior year at St. Joseph's. These uniforms indicated their first year as upperclassmen by distinguishing them from the freshmen and sophomores wearing red. As Upperclassmen the juniors obtained more independence and responsibility. The majority of juniors also returned with their licenses and anticipation for the arrival of their class rings.

September fourth 1987 was a truly special day for seniors. They returned hoping to make their last year at St. Joe's memorable and most of all fun. Trevor Medvecky commented "I look forward to playing football in my senior year, especially because we were undefeated as freshmen." Other members of the class of '88 had high hopes for this year, one of the most important of their lives, the one they had been waiting for. As the beginning of their last year together, the seniors' final first day of school at St. Joe's was filled with reminiscences. Senior Amy Rooney stated "I remember looking at all the new faces and wondering who I was going to become friends with." The seniors marveled that three years had passed since they first set foot in St. Joe's. However, they knew the best was yet to come. Senior year would see them choosing colleges, crowning a homecoming queen, attending the prom, and, finally, graduating.

As students received and analyzed their schedules, these many thoughts passed through their minds. Although the first day of school has a different significance for everyone, the start of a new school year also universally opens opportunities for students to grow both academically and socially. As members of the St. Joseph High School community, the students look forward to doing this growing together both inside of school and out.

Frowning at his new schedule, senior Jeff Tuccio wonders if he will be able to make it through a challenging senior year. Upperclassmen, as well as freshman, often find their schedules confusing.

Many underclassmen who lack the convenience of driving, resort to the bus for transportation to school. Jennifer DeSanti and Bernadette Yagovane approach the school for the start of a new year.

Joe LoPresti's sunglasses reflect back on summer, but his full hands remind him of the busy school days ahead.

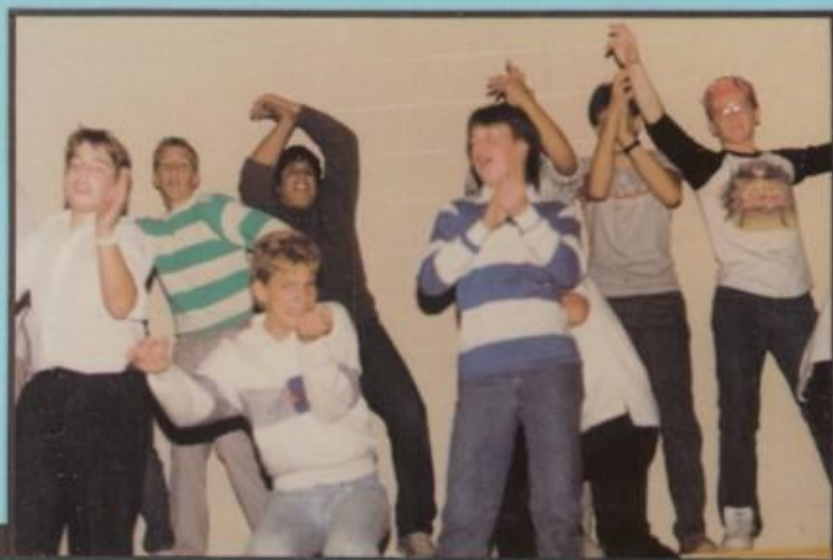

Getting to know classmates freshman year is sometimes an awkward task. However, Lisa Wheeler and Jason Uliano show how at ease they are together at the Freshman Social.

Body language is a good indication of what a person is feeling on the inside. Waiting to be coupled up for the traditional Mystery Dance, Karen Kwoka, Mary Gillick, and Jen Sheldon await the inevitable. This tradition is a slow dance bringing together boys and girls who may not yet know each other.

As the dance continued, freshman boys began to loosen up. Bryan Fedus, Ron Ragona, and Jeff Campbell lead the freshman as they rock in unison to the tunes provided by Rent-a-DJ.

A Freshman Integration

New students get into the social scene

The students entered the gym wide-eyed and anxious, but still rather apprehensive in their awkwardness. Inspired by the latest trends, almost every freshman girl was donned in the latest style of mini skirts. Perhaps this was one of the common elements which drew them together, and in their apparent unison, to flock to the top of the bleachers to escape their insecurities. The boys, stuffing hands in pockets or nervously fixing their hair, similarly huddled near the back of the gym. With the encouragement of the student councilors and the music from Rent-A-DJ, the class of '91 began to come together-smiling, socializing, and moving to the beat. The Freshman Social was held on October 14. Taking place annually, the dance provides the first informal gathering for the students to get to know one another without being intimidated by the presence of upperclassmen. "I got a good feeling about the freshman class. In past years, it has taken a lot of coaxing to get them dancing, but this year, it wasn't long before they were comfortable with each other," commented senior councilor Kathy Marsan.

Each year, councilors organize a "Mystery Dance" in hopes of linking together future couples and providing a quick way for the freshman to get to know their classmates. Usually the pair shies

"At first I was embarrassed, but that went away after a minute or two. It worked out well because now I know Todd a lot better."

away in the embarrassment of being singled out, but this year they did not hold back and the "Mystery Dance" was unusually successful. "At first I was embarrassed, but that went away after a minute or two. It worked out well because now I know Todd a lot better," remarked Heather Brown, who was coupled with Todd Dolinski.

Midway through the night, the freshman decided to prove just how at ease they were. On the same bleachers that just hours earlier they had grouped exclusively with their friends, the entire class rocked in unison to the tune of Billy Idol's "Mony, Mony."

"Overall I felt the social was a success. The Freshmen showed a lot of spirit and seemed to enjoy themselves and the company of others," observed Mr. Collins. At 9:30, the DJ played "Always" by Atlantic Starr to end the night and afterword, the students left having found new friends, new "love", or just a good time with their own class. Sara Bigelow reflected with enthusiasm "The dance was great! I met a bunch of people I didn't even know I went to school with."

The freshman class initiated a new tradition of dancing on the bleachers. The song, "Mony, Mony" helped in uniting the unfamiliar faces of the St. Joe's community. This kind of unusual activity helped to turn the Freshman Social inside out.

Going Back In Time

Students celebrate the bicentennial

It's September, 1987. The halls begin to empty as you proceed to your period five class. Is this an illusion or is it . . . George Washington?! It's no illusion today, rather it's a project from Brother David's sophomore U.S. History class. Up to another one of his many unpredictable assignments, Brother took his students back two hundred years to the signing of the constitution. The students dressed up like those attending the event back in 1787.

Immediately, students knew this wasn't one of Brother's regular "Understand? Understood!" days. The period began with each sophomore presenting a one minute speech, and then signing their names on "the document." Finally, everyone stood up and recited the Preamble. "A feeling of respect and intrigue filled the room as the meaning of the words written two hundred years ago in the Preamble of the Constitution came to life once again," remembers Kristin Donovan.

The characters portrayed by the students varied from presidents, to famous first ladies, to Revolutionary War heroes. "I dressed up as Alexander Hamilton and spoke about his contributions to the creation of the Constitution. By participating in this event, I learned a great deal about his life, as well as the lives of many other signers," commented Patrick Petrie.

"Is this an illusion or is it . . . George Washington?!"

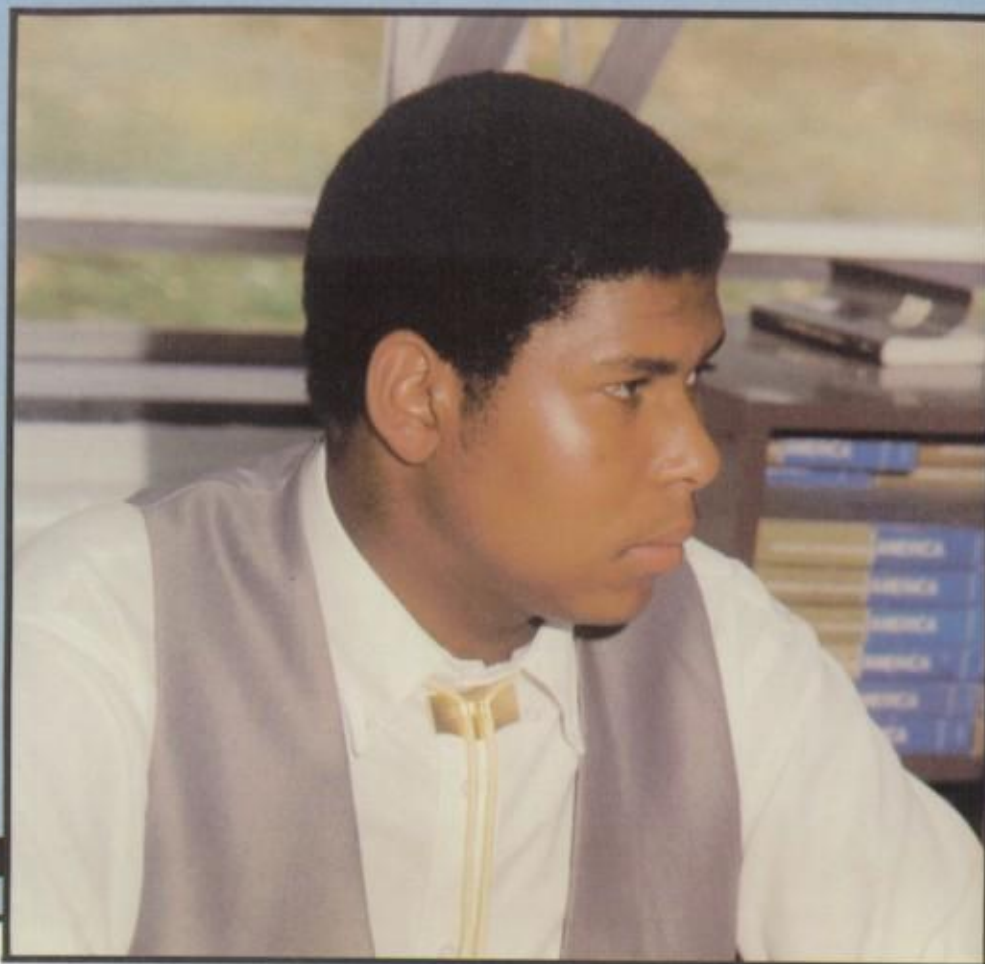

"I flipped through many books to research my character, Martha Washington. Dressed in a white blouse, long blue skirt and a red scarf, the intense nervousness I previously felt melted away as I stood to recite my speech, and I saw my classmates dressed as strangely as I was!" added Alina Barbulescu.

Although the event ended in forty-five minutes, Brother plans to extend the experience and bury the document on school property later in the year. "By burying the Constitution, a lasting reminder will be made of that day two hundred years ago, when our country first proclaimed its independence," stated Karen Firda, who dressed as First Lady Elisabeth Kartwright Monroe.

Constitution Day provided one sophomore class with a new learning experience. "I, along with my class, gained a better understanding of this great historical event, as well as a sense of patriotism," summed up Michelle Leone. Although the reenactment was exciting while it lasted, the class quickly returned to Brother's regular class structure, "Get It? Got it!"

The Constitution Reenactment began with individual speeches and was completed by the students reciting the Preamble in unison. Bill Wheeler watches in awe as history seems to come to life before his eyes.

St. Joseph's celebrated the 200th birthday of the Constitution in Brother David's Constitution Reenactment day. Decked in centennial fashion, Kristen Donovan shows her patriotism.

James Madison (Bob Studley) puts his "John Hancock" on the Constitution as Betsy Ross (Julie Panda) looks on. Prior to signing the document, the students presented a speech to the class.

Describing the events of the Constitutional Convention, Brother David animates history. "We the people" of St. Joe's are unique for our distinct way of learning.

Rolling Out The Carpet

Seniors reflect on four years of friendship

"To me, homecoming is the first of the formal gatherings offered to the seniors at St. Joe's. It also provides a time to reflect back on the past years spent with friends and classmates, and to honor the girl that has been an integral part of the school community," commented senior Jill Collett. This year Lisa Laurella was crowned homecoming queen.

Homecoming weekend began on Thursday, October 29. Seniors dressed up for the school day which ended with a ceremony to announce the queen and her court. Father Ray commenced the ceremony with a prayer. The master of ceremonies, Fred Caserta then led the senior and junior class through a slide presentation. The seniors laughed, cried and stared in embarrassment as they watched pictures of themselves from the past three years flash upon the gym wall. Next, the white carpet was unrolled and the captains of varsity sports stood waiting to usher the queen and her court to their appointed places on the stage. Elected to stand by the queen, Lisa Laurella, were Vicki Hawkins, Kathy Marsan, Jamie Mazzolini, and Kristy Leone. Following the ceremony, many pic-weekend was the dance held Thursday night in the school gym. A record number of students attended. The atmosphere was much more informal than that of the school day. Classmates bopped to tunes provided by Rent-a-D.J. Saturday morning's football game ended the weekend. St. Joe's Captured a 36-12 victory over Notre Dame of Fairfield in front of hundreds of students, faculty, family members and alumni.

The weekend projected a feeling of unity among the students, especially the seniors as they took time to honor their queen and celebrate their high school years together. As Cindy Evanko stated, "There was a special closeness and spirit in the air that the senior class created. Although apparent to others at the ceremony, it was something that only the seniors, as a part of it, could truly feel."

In School, But Outside

Field Day offers Fun and Competition

“September 23, 1987 is a day that will live in our hearts forever. Few will return home without treasured memories,” commented senior Bill Gregory concerning Field Day. Whether it was due to the exciting events or the friendly atmosphere, many agreed. As Danielle Robinson away their uniforms and wear what they pleased. Some arrived donned in colorful jams or sweats. Others wore concert shirts, and the attire of many senior girls displayed certain sayings as a sign of friendship. The occasion was a chance to show one's individuality as well as to wear casual, relaxed clothing. Senior Bruce Botti remarked, “I love Field Day because we get to wear whatever we want and don't have to be restricted by those uncomfortable jackets.”

The day's itinerary consisted of the traditional events. The water race however, gave way to the suitcase race which had a successful debut. This event required its participants to run to a suitcase, put on the clothes within it, return to the other end of the course and undress. The next member would then put the same clothes on and repeat the draining and sometimes embarrassing procedure.

Amused classmates look on as Danielle Young nears the end of the obstacle course. Students hurdled, crawled and jumped their way to the finish line.

The gun is up and all three legs are ready to go. Two unidentified friends unite to eliminate the fierce competition of other homerooms in the popular three-legged race.

The 1987 tug-of-war was as fierce as ever. As usual, homeroom teachers demanded victories from their students. Friends began to stick together regardless of what homeroom to which they belonged. The senior class eventually dominated the savage battles. Flag football proved to be equally as intense. Students showed their competitive side in the heat of the game. Moments after though, the outcome was forgotten and friendship seemed to prevail. Once again, the egg toss left its slimy mark on several participants. Kim Angermann and Kristie Kennedy, egg toss champions of the junior class, commented that they "were lucky to escape the insignia of the challenge." Perhaps the most difficult event was the obstacle course, which demanded its participants to jump over basins of soapy water, leap over hurdles, exhibit dexterity by running through tires, and finally soar over the high jump. Freshman Abby Wood commented, "It's funny to watch people do the events-until you have to do them yourself."

Field Day provided an enjoyable time for all. Even the teachers look forward to it. For Mr. Ray Patterson, religion teacher, the day is life supporting. "I live for Field Day," he admitted. Mrs. Green viewed the day as "an excellent opportunity for the teachers and students to be together in a more relaxed atmosphere."

Preparation for the day involved just about everyone. Student council members struggled over time schedules and supervision. Homeroom teachers implanted visions of victory into their students' minds. One brainwashed freshman, Tony Melo, almost automatically stated, "It's a chance to prove that freshmen aren't so bad after all." Perhaps Joe Ovchar, a senior, summed up the day best. "It's a chance to get together with your friends in a competitive spirit, and have a great time. I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Sometimes watching the events is more exciting than participating. Christine Calderaro laughs as a classmate attempts to complete the obstacle course.

Waiting for the sack race to begin, Kristen Donovan smiles at friends near the finish line. The use of plastic bags rather than burlap sacks did not seem to spoil the fun.

Taking advantage of reduced prices, Greg Cayer splurges on some hot dogs. On field day, as well as Walk-A-Thon, hot dogs were sold for a mere twenty-five cents.

The Threads That Bind

Senior Girls Outwardly Express Friendships

What aspect of Field Day takes weeks of preparation, hours of telephone conversation, creates laughter and sometimes arguments, but at the same time brings friends together? Why, colorful shirts worn by the senior girls, of course.

The preparation for this monumental day often begins quite early. Picking out the types of shirts, choosing the lettering and design, and getting everyone together encompasses a large part of the process. Senior Vicki Hawkins commented, "I never imagined how much work went into senior shirts. What it finally came down to was voting on the saying we would have printed because no one could agree! Despite this, I loved being able to show the friendships I have made at St. Joe's these past three years." This year, many groups of friends opted for different shirt styles such as maroon and gold mesh shirts, sweatshirts, and tie-dyed tee shirts. Whether it be two people or twenty people wearing the same shirts, the idea behind it is the same: friendship. "Although I entered St. Joe's as a junior, the friendships I have developed are very special to me and Field Day ter Off Dead." Dorothy Keane explained that "it took a long time for us to paint the shirts but it was fun, and definitely different."

An original idea was presented by eight girls using colorful tie-dye tee shirts to bear the saying, "The girls of '88- We're gonna wop-bop-a-loo-bop-a-wop-bam-boom." This phase had significance for its creators, as many of the girls were in the musical Grease during summer theater.

Field Day is the perfect time to show one's individuality, whether it be through the shirts or day-to-day clothing. Different groups may have different tastes, yet no matter how much senior shirts change in style each year, the spirit remains the same.

Kathy Marsan captured the true meaning of friendship when she commented, "It doesn't really matter what shirt you wear, because in the end, your friends are who your friends are!"

"It doesn't really matter what shirt you wear . . . your friends are who your friends are!"

is a great time to show this," stated Alison Harvey.

A new twist was added this year when a group of girls decided paint their shirts rather than have letters printed on them. Not only did they indicate friendship but also scenes of one of the most popular movies of the time, "Bet-

Struggling up the hardest part of the course, John Chaffee, Jeff Tuccio, Matt Frattaroli, and Ward Petrie find the hill to be a challenge.

Stepping With Pride

Putting an effort into school development

“Mighty St. Joe's ... Reach that goal!” The voices of the varsity cheerleaders boomed through the gymnasium as students anxiously awaited the day ahead of them. October 15, 1987 marked the day of the annual St. Joseph's Walk-A-Thon. Every fall, directly after field day, the push for Walk-A-Thon begins. All at St. Joe's recognize the familiar sights and sounds of Brother David gearing up the community for the big event.

Preparation for the Walk-A-Thon began during the summer with letters sent to students encouraging them to participate on the steering committee. When the first organizational meeting was called, many students took the initiative to get involved on a deeper level. Brother David, pleased with the impressive turnout, assigned each student to a specific task intended to inspire others to “Go for Joe.”

As October 15 finally arrived, the entire community was busy putting the finishing touches on the preliminaries. Homeroom teachers were busy collecting money, recording pledges, and passing out Walk-A-Thon tee shirts. Mrs. Duff, who has a sophomore homeroom, commented, “The kids were really enthusiastic about the day. I had to concentrate on keeping the records straight with all the activity going on.”

“I was given many route prizes! I got free fries, shampoo, perfume, and even book notes to A Farewell to Arms!”

The students then proceeded into the gym for a pep rally before the walk. Particularly impressive was the spirit and energy of the day. Senior Lori Chacho observed, “When I entered the gym on that day, the spirit made me feel proud to be a part of the community.”

The presence of local celebrities indicated the importance of the Walk-A-Thon. Politicians from surrounding areas addressed the students and encouraged their participation. Mayor Menna of Ansonia embodied the spirit of the day by collecting two hundred dollars “for Joe.” Channel eight newscaster Nancy Aborne cut the ribbon to commence the event.

Beautiful weather contributed to the success of the day. Route prizes and “pit stop” refreshments provided an added incentive for the walkers. Senior Vicki Hawkins enthusiastically commented “I was given many route prizes! I got free fries, shampoo, perfume and even book notes to A Farewell to Arms!” The gym, exploding with tunes from “Smokin’ Joe Vails Memorial Bar and Grill Band and Ensemble”, welcomed students completing the walk. Everyone was finally able to unwind upon the completion of a three month drive that involved the entire St. Joe's community. The time spent with friends, and the sharing of a common goal, brought out the spirit within our community.

The presence of the Channel 8 News intensified the spirit of the entire student body prior to the Walk-A-Thon. An overwhelming applause was the result of Nancy Aborn's encouragement to “Make it great!”

Inside Strides

Reaching The Goal For St. Joe's

After countless pledges and miles, cramps and blisters, months of preparation and hours of fun, the ten kilometer trek known as the St. Joseph Walk-A-Thon was over. Yet its effects would last for years to come. October 15, 1987 offered the students an opportunity to leave a visible permanent mark on St. Joe's. It was their turn to give something to the school that had given so much to them.

This annual event originated eight years ago. The students contributed time and money to a cause, the results of which many would never see. The money raised through Walk-A-Thons has provided students with necessary sports facilities such as a football field and a track, dedicated to the classes which made them possible. Senior Kristy Leone commented, "In just four years we have seen what the Walk-A-Thon can do. This is what generates so much spirit."

Parents and teachers have also

"It was their turn to give something back to the school that had given so much to them."

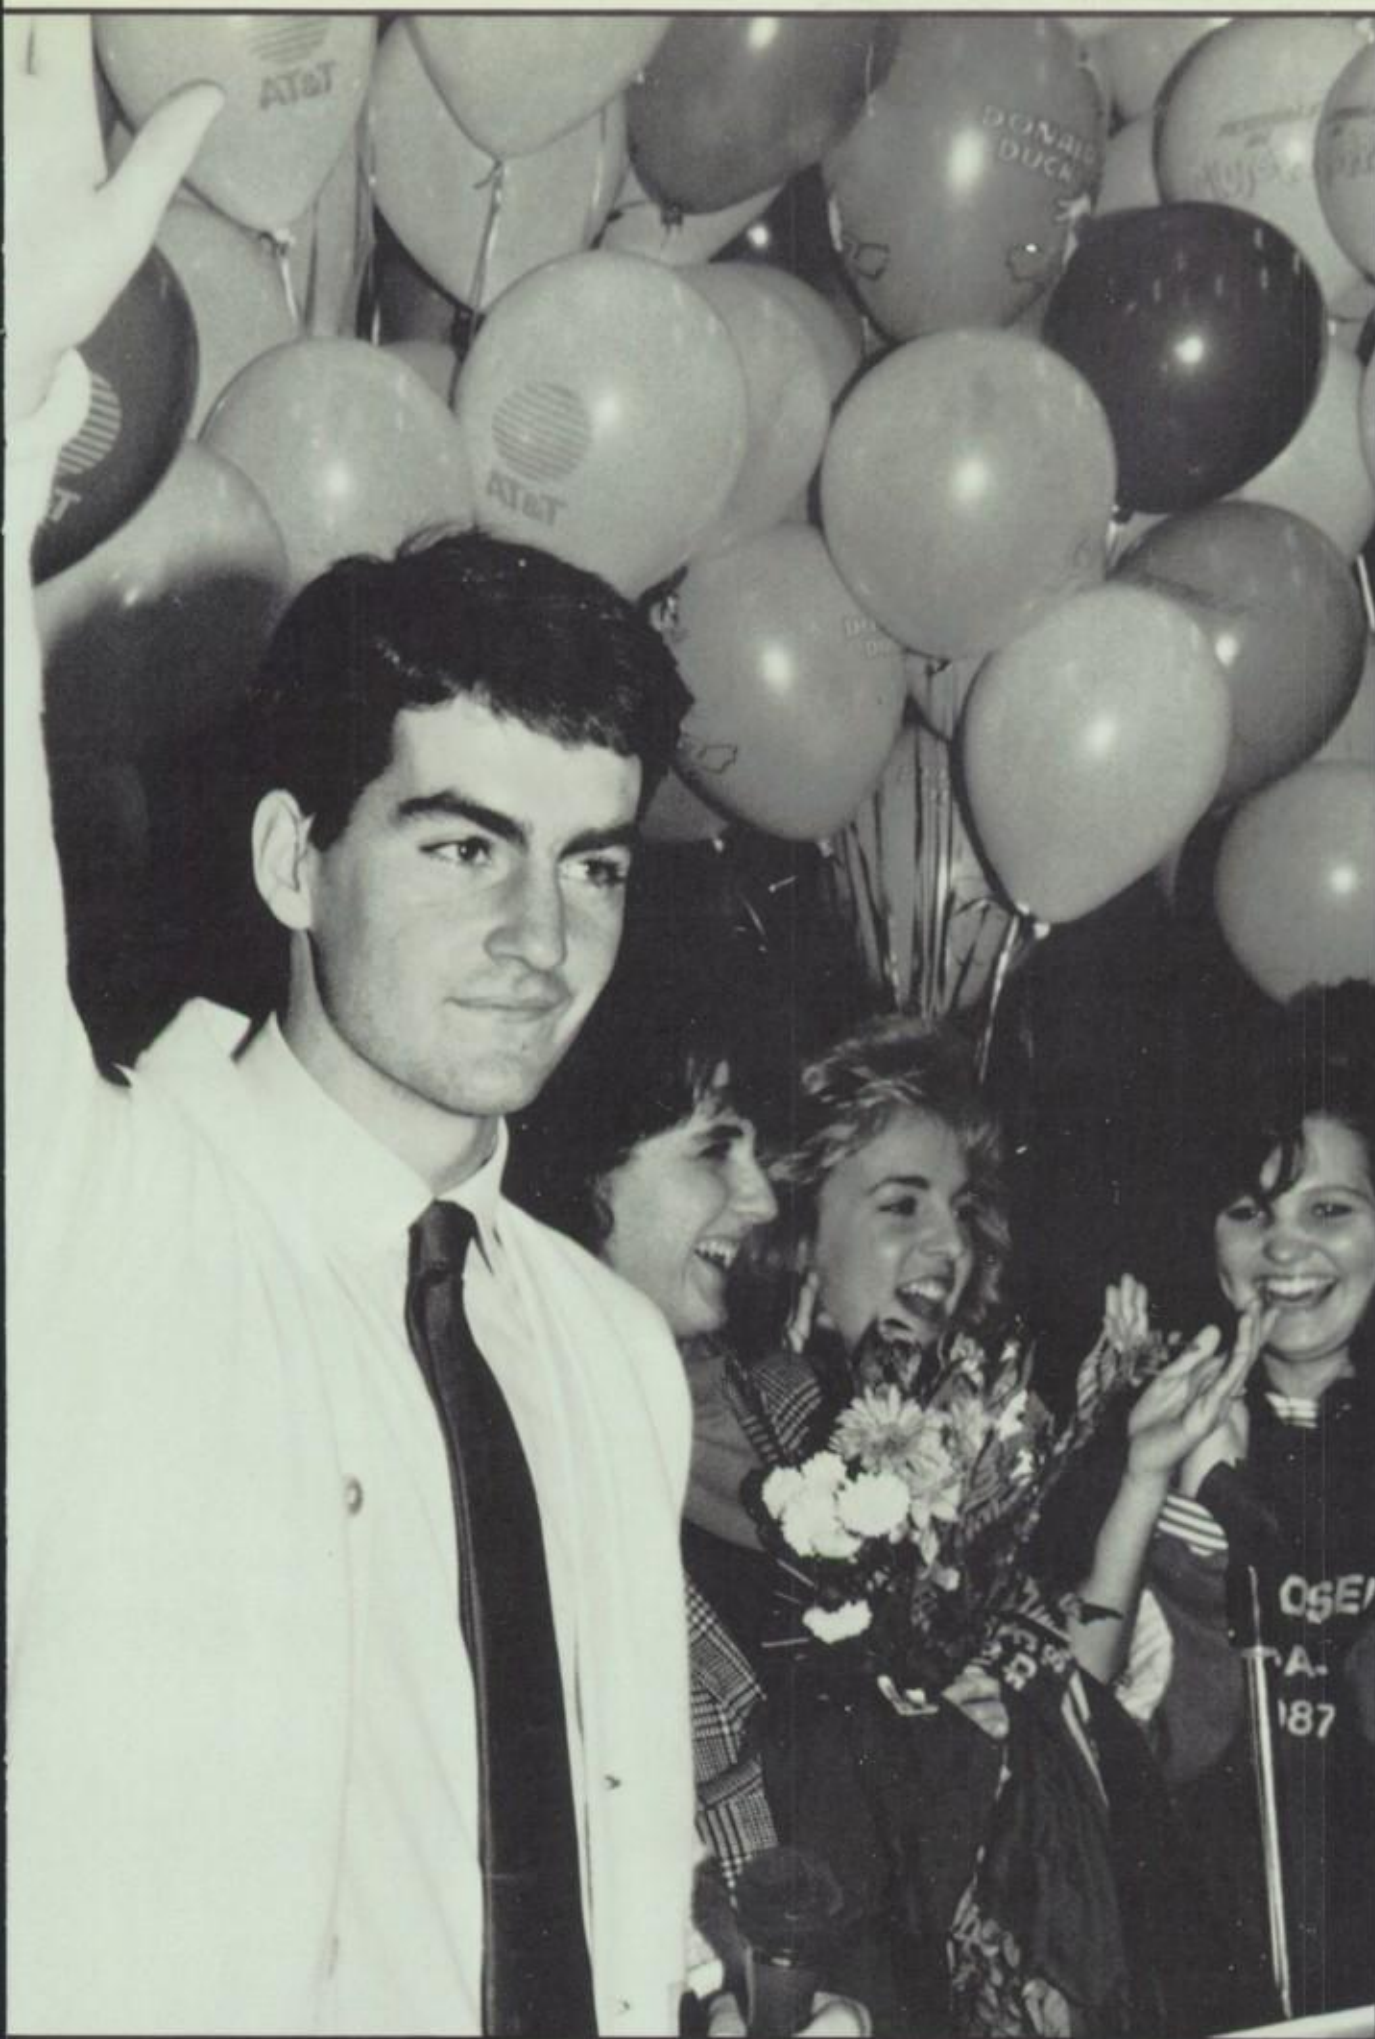

made great contributions to St. Joe's through the Walk-A-Thon. They spent summer days gathering route prizes from area businesses and worked to supply the pit stop with juice and donuts. On October 15 they were there, giving away every last prize, and, more importantly, cheering the students on. "Everyone appreciates the efforts these parents and teachers give to us. Their support and spirit helps keep us going" stated Cindy Evanko.

Brother David tied everything together. In charge of this event, he organized the committees of parents and students responsible for getting supplies and generating enthusiasm among the students. The goal of $50,000.00 was not met but the students came close. In the end, a round figure of close to $35,000.00 rolled in. It was a success of the spirit. "Reaching a goal is something that never fails at St. Joe's," as Brother David put it.

Psyching up the students at the Walk-a-Thon opening ceremonies, Student Council President Tom Montelli offers a few inspiring words.

Attentively listening to the words of Bridgeport Mayor Tom Bucci, Matt Frattaroli and Rob Burns wait for the walk to begin. Many local mayors came to show their support for our Walk-a-Thon efforts.

Excited about their first Walk-a-Thon, a group of freshman anxiously set out to complete their 10km walk.

Hog Mania!

Going all out for the Hogs

No one is quite sure how it all began, but the students of St. Joseph High School possessed an undeniably large amount of spirit this year. In previous years, sports teams have received support on behalf of the student body; however 1987-88 was different. Fan support did not stop at simply attending games; it became an attitude towards the school. It was an attitude of pride, undying, unrelenting pride. Students realized that being a member of the St. Joes community is important and special. This revelation formed a bond between the students as they merged from individual spectators into an energetic mob of faithful support. As Kevin Geignetter described it, "It's cool. Even though I'm not out on the field, I feel like an important part of the team. Me and my friends go crazy at the games. I guess we got a bit out of hand and had to settle down at the faculty's request. This didn't stop our enthusiasm though, we are still dedicated to the Hogs."

Jamie Mazzoleni, a varsity cheerleader, was touched by the display of spirit as the bleachers cheered and chanted along with her and the rest of the squad.

"They repeated the words to our cheers" Jamie stated, "Originally the team was out there to win for themselves however, when they heard the cheering they wanted to win for the fans too!" Students dressed in "Hog" costumes, destroyed inflatable alligators symbolic of the Fairfield "Preppies" and gathered in the parking lot to, "get fired up." There proved to be a tremendous air of dignity from the halls to the football field. Hopefully it will be a feeling that remains with everyone in the future. To put it plainly, the kids at St. Joseph's "feel good! Oh they feel so good ... Ugh!"

The chants of the student body were unified under the direction of varsity captain Mickey Tomey. It was a unanimous verdict against arch rival Fairfield Prep.

Although formally called the Cadets, outside of school, students tend to refer to the football team as the Hogs. For the Prep game, a number of students took turns acting out the role of the unofficial mascot.

In The Classroom

For students, studies come first

The average lifespan of a human being is estimated to extend approximately seventy seven years. Most people, especially in today's society, dedicate seventeen of these years to formal education (from the age of 5 to 22). Thus, twenty percent of each person's life is spent as a student. Perhaps this is why some of the most lasting memories are of the days spent in school. Furthermore, the high school years are usually considered as "the best and worst times" of life. This is due in part to the trying intellectual, emotional, physical, and social growth that takes place between the ninth and twelfth grades.

The basis of student life, St. Joseph High School, proves to be a rather diversified institution. It possesses a strong academic reputation as well as excellent sports programs. The school encourages traditional Catholic beliefs while embracing the ever changing world. According to Kathy Marsan, "the student body reflects this; it's close knit yet always expanding. Sure, after four years friends are inseparable but someone new is always welcome to be one of the gang." With this in mind, there is no better place that can reveal the true essence of student life.

"The school encourages traditional Catholic beliefs while embracing the ever changing world."

For St. Joseph students the day begins at eight o'clock with the commonly heard announcement, "No, you may not go to the lav until I take attendance." The day ends at two o'clock with a usual "Wait for the bell, please."

Throughout the course of the day, all 976 students fight through crowded corridors, hide gum from Fr. Verrilli, cut in the lunch line and, as Joelle Alva puts it, "most of all, yawn and daydream over open books." However, the business of attending classes is elevated by amiable classmates, witty teachers, quick naps in study and, of course, the social scene. Weekend hot spots for S.J. teens include Burger King, the Translux theater, Russian beach, Trumbull Shopping Park and various private homes-minus the parents. These settings usually set the stage for good natured Monday morning gossip.

All in all, St. Joseph's provides a great deal which enhances and defines a student's life. Behind the red brick walls, students learn and adults teach. But more importantly, good people interact creating a delicate balance of knowledge, friendship and fun.

Many students find they don't have the time or the desire to research information for term papers outside of school. The combination of study hall and the school library offers the perfect alternative. Jackie Shannon and Gina Vagnini use their time wisely to search through the card catalogue for sources.

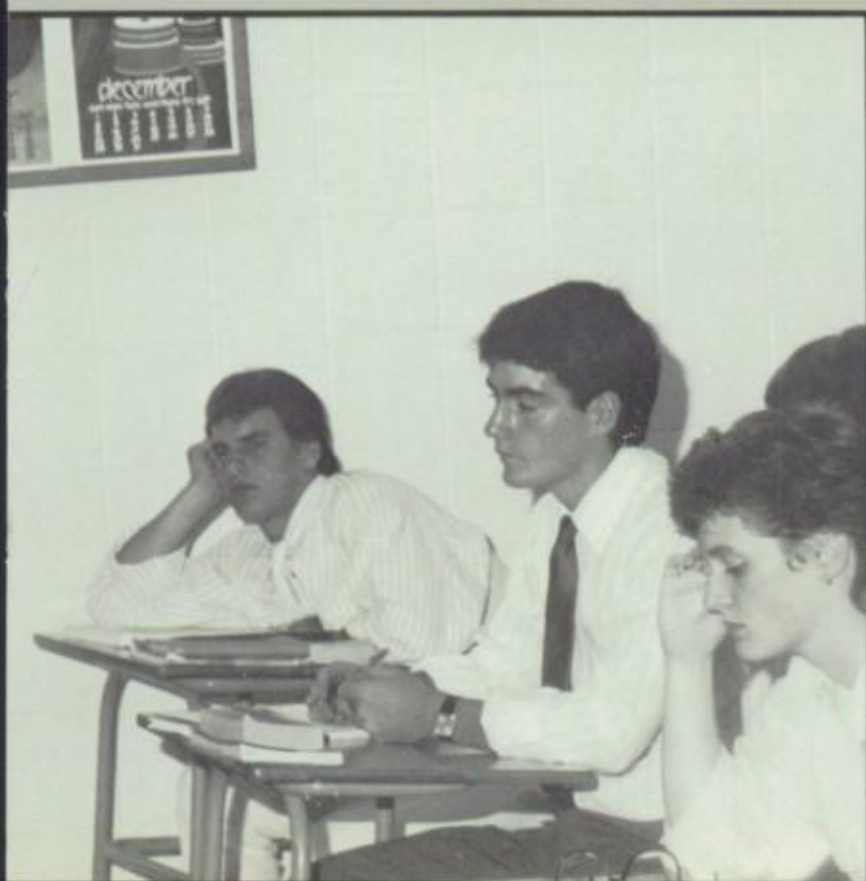

Although school wouldn't be complete without tests, most students would vote to banish them. Geoff McCoy experiences the ever-so-popular "blank mind" phenomena during an exam.

Someone always gets stuck working the film projector. Ken Wilkins finds it difficult to ignore the taunts of classmates as he misses the "beep" which signals transition to the next frame.

Especially in senior year, the essay proves to be an essential tool for the learning process. Sheila Cummings articulately words her English composition.

"Excuse me, is anyone awake?" Mrs. Matthews experiences the most common plight of teachers: having to lecture to the unenthusiastic faces of students such as Mickey Tomey, Tom Montelli, and Laura Hickey.

The rivalry between juniors and seniors provides the opportunity to engage in friendly competition. These games boost class pride which in turn arouses class spirit.

Dragging down his opponent, Bob Volpe tries to prevent Doremus Bennerman from completing a pass. George Salanto's expression explains the frustration he feels by his futile attempts to change the game's outcome.

After throwing the ball, Tom Saxa watches intently the course of its path. After leaving his hands, the result of the play was left entirely up to his teammates.

Battle At The Gasfield

A tradition of football outside SJ

Over the past twenty-five years, St. Joseph's has established a reputation of having a fine athletic program. However, there are those who do not wish to subject themselves to the grueling daily practices and others who do not have the time to remain at the school until late in the afternoon. As an alternative, a portion of the male population has discovered that playing pick-up football on the "gas field" suits them fine. Each year, on half days throughout the fall, students congregate to the field located on Huntington Turnpike to witness the senior-junior competition. Originated in 1983, the games have become as much a half day tradition as are the trips to Burger King for lunch. The crisp fall air sets the familiar environment. Fans bundle up with blankets and hot chocolate to support their friends. Leaves crackle underneath the pounding feet of the players. Vapor escapes the mouths of the exhausted teammates as they huddle to prepare their game plan.

The friendly competition involved in the games leads to intense physical confrontation during play time, causing many bruised and broken bones. This year, seniors Allan York and Todd Doherty each suffered a broken foot while Eric Hoepfner had to be rushed to the hospital after being sacked. He remarked, "I ended up with a concussion. The next day I couldn't remember anything, but the important thing is we have a good time!"

"Vapor escapes the mouths of the exhausted teammates as they huddle up to prepare their game plan."

Just like many other organizations arising from St. Joe's, fan support plays an important role in the games. Junior and senior girls and a few injured players gather to cheer on their classmates. Senior Dina Lawler commented, "I think it's great that the guys can come together after school to unwind. We were watching them play after Field Day and the spirit at the school that day seemed to endure throughout the game."

Over the past few years, football at the "gas field" has earned a place in the traditions that contribute to St. Joseph's as a spiritual, academic, and athletic community. Allan York noted, "It gives us a chance to enjoy ourselves in an unsupervised environment. Just as well, it helps us get out our frustrations." It is an extension of St. Joe's created and upheld by the students wishing to assemble on their own, enjoy themselves, and turn the game of football "inside out."

Junior girls take advantage of the half day by flocking to the gasfield. Kristin Smedberg enjoys the competition while Michele D'Ambruso uses the time to catch up on her socializing.

Ring in Junior Year

Students unite for the traditional liturgy

Junior year marks a turning point in the lives of most high school students. It is a time to reflect on the process of fitting in during underclassmen years and looking ahead with anticipation to senior year. "You realize that the time left of being together as a class is growing short," commented Melanie Ly-sik. Becoming an insider and establishing one's place within the St. Joseph's community adds to the excitement of the Junior Ring Ceremony.

The class of 1989 gathered on November 18 to receive their rings. The ceremony included a mass celebrated by Monsignor Shea and Reverend Ray Petrucci in the gymnasium. Following the processional and opening were several readings by members of the junior class, including Amy McAndrews, Lisa Sachs, Dave Verespy, and Jeff Wasikowski. Juniors also participated in the offertory procession. The gifts, symbolizing the academic and religious atmosphere of St. Joe's, included a Bible, yearbook, school newspaper, and textbook. Monsignor Shea later commented on how the title of the textbook, The

Following the offertory and communion, Monsignor Shea and Father Petrucci blessed and distributed the rings with the assistance of Sister Catherine Fanning and the junior homeroom teachers. Upon receiving his ring, Mike

"This painful ritual is like an initiation into junior year."

Maurao remarked, "I really felt that we were united as a class because of the two and a half years already behind us." Following these comments, students placed the rings on their fingers. The school motto and the year of graduation were cast into each ring. Different names, initials and types of stones symbolize the particular student.

After the ceremony, students, family, and friends enjoyed the refreshments provided in the cafeteria. Juniors began the long standing tradition of having their rings turned eighty-nine times, the number of the year of their graduation. As Patty Condon put it, "This painful ritual is like an initiation into junior year." Most juniors felt that they were no longer looking in from the outside.

Fond memories outweighed the agony of swollen knuckles the next day. "It is a constant reminder of the ceremony and my years at St. Joe's," commented Michele Howard. For the next two years in high school, juniors will look at their rings as a bond among the members of their class. As alumni, the rings will remind them of the people of St. Joe's, both administration and friends, who made their years in high school so special.

Congratulations are given to Jennifer Kruzynski as she receives her ring from Monsignor Shea. The rings, tied with a red ribbon, were distributed to the students following the liturgy.

A widening of horizons beyond the classroom

It's 6:00 a.m., June 21; the setting is St. Joseph's High School. Three students yawn, one leans back against the wall for a quick doze, while two more perform calisthenics to wake themselves up. Although it is unlikely to find anyone on campus just four days after the close of school, forty students from Brother David's American History class, along with Mrs. Lorna Sullivan, gathered to board a bus for the annual trip to Washington D.C. Visiting the majority of the capitol's highlights would be packed into three days by their tour guide, Paul Fox, a recent Catholic University graduate.

The student-travelers were treated to an inside look at the renowned sights of the U.S. Capitol. They viewed the room where the Senate presides and saw several dignitaries. They also visited the Supreme Court, the Library of Congress, the F.B.I. building, and took a tour of the capitol's great monuments by night. Most agreed, one of the most meaningful events of the tour was the visit to Arlington National Cemetery. There they observed the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the grave sites of John F. Kennedy, his infant son Patrick, and his brother Robert. Some of the students arrived at the same moment that a military funeral was taking place. Melissa Lucke commented, "While the cemetery was quite sad, it also showed that so many thousands of people had given their lives for their country and this was patriotism to the fullest."

In the midst of touring Washington, students came across diverse people from all over the country, who were also taking a look at the country from the outside in. Interesting discussions took place at the U.S. Treasury where some of the students met several peers from California. Dave Verespy remarked, "It certainly made the wait in line more enjoyable in meeting and talking to people from so many states."

After three days of touring the insides of Washington with classmates, and catching several glimpses of the outside with fellow visitors, the St. Joe's delegation boarded their bus for the return trip to Trumbull. Rob Bognar spoke for all of the student visitors. "The trip was a great way to end the school year; we learned, but we also had a great time."

Washington gave way to viewing, listening, and above all else, walking. A tour through Arlington National Cemetery may have given Brother David and Danielle Young blisters, but they still enjoyed the historical sight.

After collecting souvenirs, Hugh Welch, Dave Verespy, Toni-Marie Silano, Kristine Sisbarro, and Melissa Lucke rest in front of the National Archives in the heart of Washington D.C.

The Library of Congress was the summer setting for The Bronze Buddha of Justice and Junior, Hugh Welsh. Forty-two students accompanied Brother David for the traditional end of the year trip.

Taking a break from a tiring tour of Washington D.C., Darrin Duford, Rob Bog-nar, and Zig Sokolowski, pause in front of the nation's capitol.

As the end of the day approaches, Marion Vazzano stands patiently by her car for her friends. Although plagued by the large amounts of homework, Marion still finds the time to sit back and take it easy.

The parking lot is the scene of much socializing throughout the year. Kate Lilley and Tom Dalling take advantage of the warm fall weather to spend a few moments together.

Sharing the sounds of a new tune, Loren Mills and Kim Angermann wind down after a long day of schoolwork.

Many students congregate around the stage to talk with friends. Renewing this tradition, a group of Senior guys gather after the first day of school.

Life Begins At 2:10

It's 2:00. Relieved expressions and the thrill of freedom accompanied the final bell. Upper and lower classmen race through crowded hallways, quickly retrieve books from lockers, and clear out of the building. However, a remnant of the student body always remains. Some are involved in clubs, sports, or jobs at school. Others wait for parents or seek to catch up on unfinished gossip from lunch. Whatever the reason, these students faithfully reside in the vicinity of St. Joe's, sometimes until late afternoon.

Within minutes of dismissal, underclassmen line the lobby windows keeping watch for their rides home. Michael Muraio explained, "In one sense, waiting is O.K. because I spend it with my friends. Yet, when I'm packed with homework, I can't wait to leave." Unlike Mike, some students welcome the chance to chat freely without worrying about the time of day.

Wandering into the gym, one is likely to find classmates who

"hang out" in groups. Some congregate in the corners, others relax on the bleachers, and a few dangle their feet off the stage. One junior described this pandemonium as "a type of socializing which eliminates long distance phone calls and is an extension of student life."

"A portion of the student body will always linger after dismissal."

Simultaneously, members of various athletic teams meet in the gym before going to practice. Some opt for a refreshment from the Pepsi machine before charging out onto the fields. Dave Verespy of the track team commented, "Before running, I like to join my friends outside, especially when the gym seems impenetrable."

A much smaller group of boys "hang out" in a more constructive way. They assist the janitors by cleaning the hallways and classrooms in preparation for the next day. This job can become lonely and tedious, but the blaring tunes from the radio remain as constant company. Senior Bill Gregory vividly described the situation. "In the twilight time of after school existence, a rare phenomenon is noticed by those who remain behind. Rooms and corridors once flooded with learning during school hours now rock with the sound of loud music. Only those students who work at school are treated to the sight of walls, windows, floors, and ceilings dancing in a shameless display of raw rhythm."

A portion of the student body will always linger after dismissal. It's only natural that students feel the need to unwind amongst each other, even if it is in the school environment. After all, St. Joseph's is a social community which combines work with pleasure.

The new courtyard is a place for Jen Alagno and Dina Cowden to rest their feet after a tough workout.

The Guggenheim Museum offers the chance to study many different art forms. In a paused moment, Mrs. Green, Dave Verespy, and Bridget Welch observe the interesting architecture characteristic of the museum from the seventh level of the spiral walkway.

Cool water slaps against the sides of the Circle Line. Debbie Coughlin and Christine Guarino enjoy the mist and the view of the nearby Jersey shore.

Juniors Theresa Konieczny, Melissa Lucke, and Patricia Luczaj peer in the window of Sloppy Louie's. It is considered to be one of the more famous seafood restaurants found in the seaport.

N.Y.C.: Inside Out

Reaching the core of the apple

Not all visitors to New York City get the opportunity to view the city from the inside out in one day. But last year on June 9, a group of forty-four sophomores from Mrs. Green's Honors I and II American Literature classes accomplished just that. The trip, sponsored by the English Club, included visits to the Guggenheim Museum, the South Street Seaport, and a cruise around Manhattan Island on the Circle Line.

The first stop was at South Street Seaport in lower Manhattan. Students were free to explore the area, including the Fulton Market filled with a medley of restaurants and shops. Michelle Howard commented, "The seaport allowed me to see a side of New York City that I was not aware of." In a nearby theater, the group viewed a film entitled "The Seaport Experience." The program presented the highlights of New York's seaport history.

For the next three hours the students sailed around Manhattan Island aboard the Circle Line, often referred to as "America's Favorite Boat Ride." Recalling the importance of the cruise, Susan Alves smiled. "The Circle Line Cruise was just about the best escape from a grueling school day." Rounding the tip of Manhattan, the yacht passed New York's striking skyline highlighted by the

quarters and Gracie Mansion, the residence of New York City's mayor Ed Koch. Jen Coyne remembered, "One of the most unique sites was the big 'C' painted on a cliff by the students of Columbia University." Before returning to the pier, students caught glimpses of Grant's Tomb and the U.S.S. Intrepid of World War II fame.

At the Guggenheim Museum, students viewed one exhibit which included more than one hundred and fifty paintings, drawings, and sculptures of Spanish artist Joan Miro. Distinguished by the use of brilliant color, delicate lines, and abstract shapes, the pieces truly represented and expressed the spirit of abstract art.

Recalling the day, Bill Gregory summed up the trip best. "New York City is a lively cultural center electrified by the craziness and diversity liberty allows. Where else does the traffic constantly yield to acrobats, artists and jazz musicians?"

Exploring the streets of South Street Seaport, Bill Gregory, Liz Boyton, Jeff Coster, and Mrs. Green view a different side of New York City, one filled with a variety of shops and food.

Summer Bucks

Making money both indoors and out

Contrary to popular belief, summers are not always filled with rest and relaxation. Instead, St. Joe's students begin a new daily routine—that of a summer job. Instead of armloads of books, lifeguards grabbed sunblock and whistles, construction workers donned grungy jeans and hardhats, and waitresses hastily pulled on uniforms.

Prior to the close of school in June, most students have secured employment for the upcoming summer months. As many have learned, jobs can be everything from fun, exciting, and rewarding, to grueling, arduous, and just plain hard work. But, whichever the case may be, jobs do provide the cash flow so vitally important to a teenager. Expressing the feelings of numerous students, Hugh Welch remarked, "It's a paycheck!" In spite of the beliefs of some adults, teenagers do have many various expenses which cannot be covered by allowances or spur of the moment odd jobs. Many resort to some sort of constant employment.

Some students work summers for the sole purpose of saving money to reach monetary goals. "I worked long hours in a hot bakery so that I could afford to go on the trip to Spain this spring," commented Jen Krusynski.

Working outdoors has both its advantages and disadvantages. Even though students got a great tan, the work was difficult under the hot summer sun. Lifeguarding, landscaping, and caddying

"It's tough when I'm at work looking at the sun shining through the window" were a few of the outdoor jobs that proved both of these points for the employees that worked them. As Michael Crawford, a bagboy at Bronson Country Club, said, "The work was hard but it was worth the money."

Although working outdoors was a common occupation, many of the students took to the cool inside of many of our neighborhood stores. Senior Tara Trimarchi commented, "It's tough when I'm at work looking at the sun shining through the window, knowing my friends are at the beach and I'm stuck inside a stuffy nursing home." Karen Timmeny added, "Maybe my tan wasn't that great, but it was much more comfortable working in the air-conditioning than under the scorching sun."

Whether the students worked inside or out, they found it very rewarding to be able to support themselves for at least the summer.

Having a summer job gave the students a feeling of independence and a sense of accomplishment. Despite the fact that the employees may complain about the work, the benefits will motivate them to return to their jobs next summer. "There's nothing like the feeling of driving away from the bank with a little white envelope full of self-earned, crisp, green bills!" summed up Karen Luchun.

Making a sale is not always easy. For Sharon Scott, helping people choose which sunglass frames will flatter their face is a challenging moneymaker.

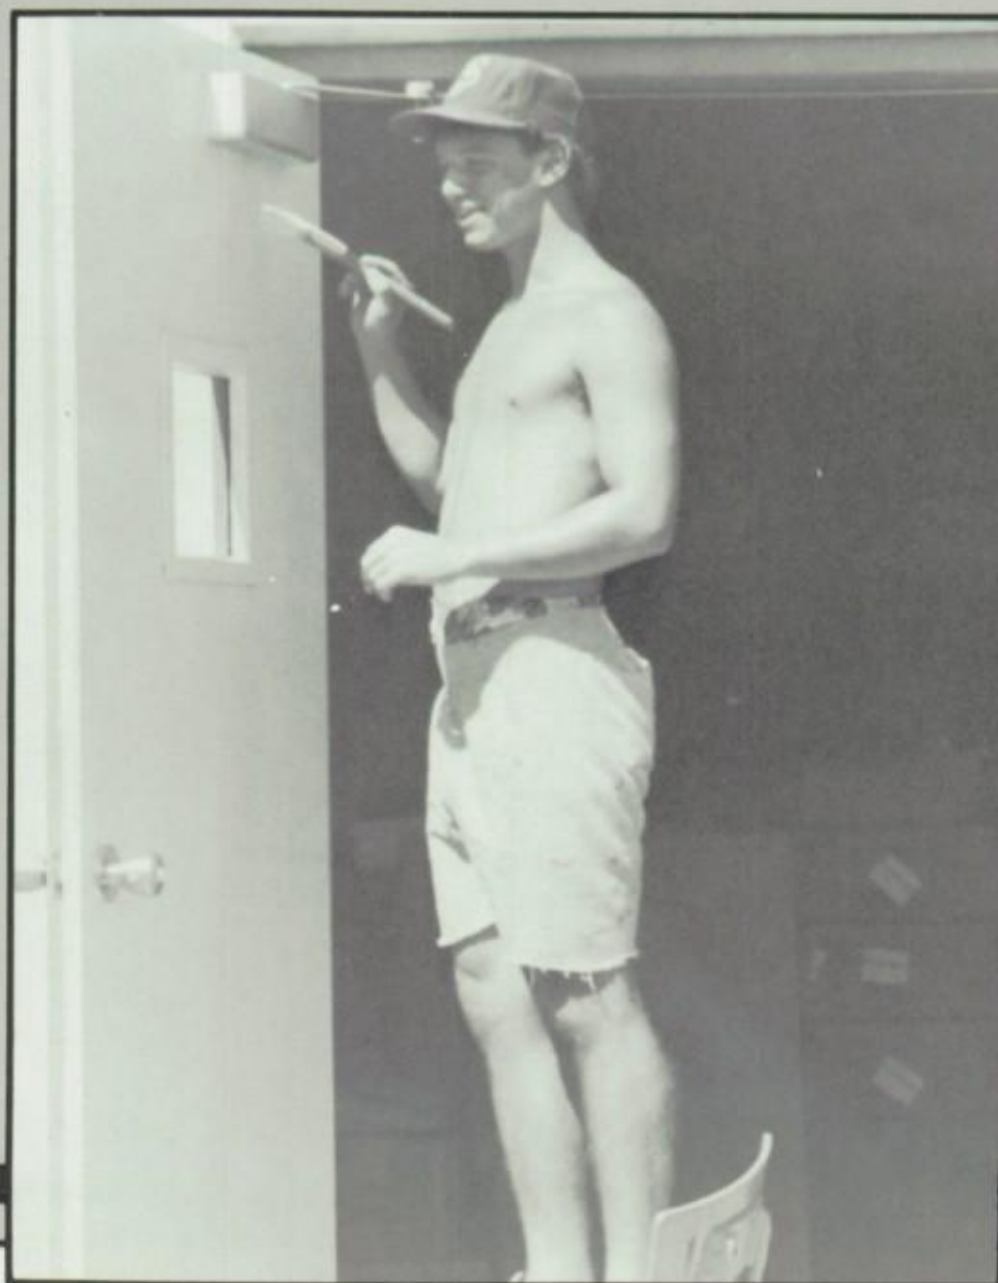

The tedious task of painting keeps Tim Rooney occupied. The job, although messy, brought in a steady cash flow.

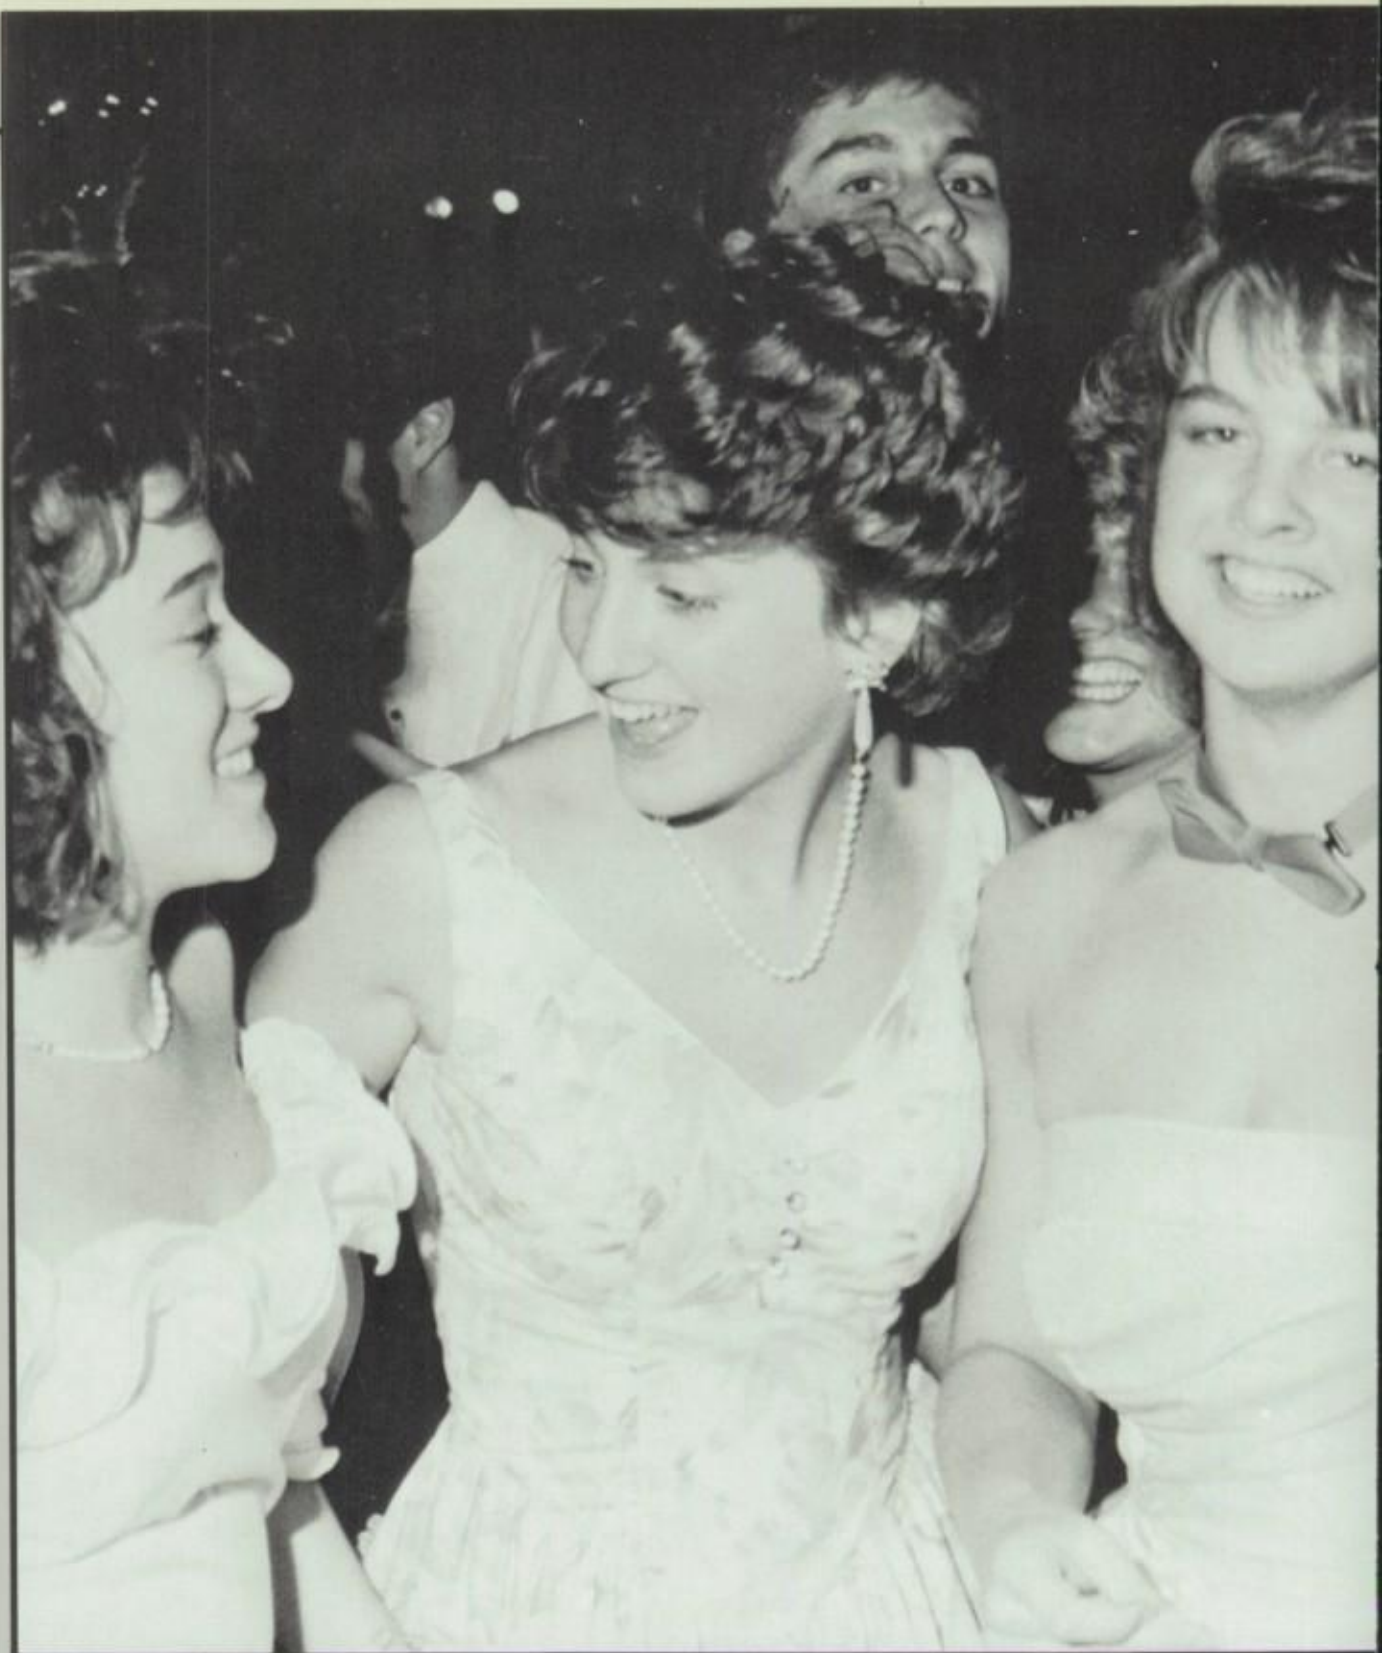

Spotting a young gymnast on the uneven parallel bars, Dina Lawlor assists fellow athlete Barb Sarino in properly spotting a pull over.

Mowing the lawn not only presented Brian Carlin with a paycheck, but also a good tan and strong muscles. Students working for the school kept the campus in top shape.

On the evening to end all evenings, students felt they could "Never Say Good-bye." Karen Capasso, Maura Weiler, Jen Delaney, and Keith Carroll end their senior year with the hopeful promise to stay friends forever.

Taking time out from the evening's events, Dave Knapp and Mark Therriault rest in preparation for post-prom activities. The prom was the last night for the seniors to all be together before departing for different colleges and universities throughout the country.

Dancing the night away, Janis McClinch and Alex Katreczko enjoy the music provided by a D.J. The students danced until one o'clock.

Going Out In Style

On May 15, the class of '87 gathered at Grassy Hill Country Club to spend one last formal evening together before graduation. The Senior Prom theme, "Never Say Good-bye" appropriately expressed the sentiment and mood of the class. Seniors realized they were saying good-bye to dress codes, early dismissal, and other traditions in the St. Joseph community. Despite this, they knew that many of their friendships would continue and deepen in the years ahead.

Being the last formal occasion the seniors would attend together gave reason to make the prom special. Students were intent on making the evening memorable at any cost. Limousines were rented, girls wore spectacular dresses, the gentlemen sported tuxedos, some with tails and a few with top hats and canes. Andrea DeTullio recalled, "The limousine ride was unforgettable; it gave me and my friends a chance to spend time together before we joined the rest at the prom."

This year, prom time meant limo time. For the past five proms, the use of limousines has been on the rise. Back in 1981, only two of the vehicles showed up at the entrance of the Grassy Hill Country Club. This year, eight Cadillac stretch limos, six Lincoln Town Car Limos, and one right-hand-drive Rolls Royce transported over forty couples. "I can't believe so many contracted to have limousines. It's crazy," one unidentified senior commented. "I know one guy who spent over $500 to have the thing until 8:00 a.m." Prices ranged from $140 for delivery and pick up to over $500 for all-night service.

The music also left a lasting memory on those who attended. Jennifer Anderson felt "a little nervous, but once the music began to play, I felt great." The students continued dancing non-stop until one o'clock in the morning. Although this was said to be the best part of the prom, Brian Smith disagreed, "The best part was the food. The prime rib was the best I ever had."

For the teachers who attended the occasion, the night was also outstanding. Mr. Tom Collins commented, "The students looked impressive all dressed up. The prom is a nice way to end four years together."

After the excitement was over, students took home mementos—champagne glasses, photos, flowers, but the greatest memory could be found in the evening itself. The seniors successfully united to share one last experience together as a community. For most it was a time to say good-bye in style.

As the most formal occasion high school students attend, the prom provides a perfect opportunity to dress up in a different way. Joanne Dailey and Judy Boyle model satin lace Southern-styled dresses.

'Tis the Season

Fa la la la la la la la la

It was six o'clock and all were getting ready to sing at the Kunkel's Christmas caroling party. People gathered by the fire burning under a huge Christmas tree in the Kunkel's yard. Neighbors and many students from St. Joseph High School came together to celebrate the caroling tradition. "It didn't matter if you had a good voice or not, everyone came together to sing around the fire and then the neighborhood. There was a lot of hot apple cider and Christmas cookies. The evening felt like something out of a Christmas book," Phil Golino commented.

"We've been doing this since I was little. Christmas is my dad's favorite time of year so he is always dreaming up things to do in the spirit. We thought it would be fun to have people from school come. It didn't matter that our voices were a little weak," said Julie Kunkel.

Separate song sheets and candles were passed out. Dr. Kunkel even added percussion this year. Bells were rung while walking around the neighborhood and drums were played during the "Little Drummer Boy." "I was one of the lucky ones that got to ring the bells. I think I threw everyone off because I was always on the wrong jingle. The bells definitely made the songs sound better way some of the girls sang the descant with it. I think it was the neighbors' favorite too because one lady started to cry when we sang it."

As Kate Lilley put it, "The only thing that could have made the night better is if it had snowed. At least it was cold enough to have a fire in the yard." Kathy Marsan commented, "My feet were freezing. I thought they were going to fall off but the hot chocolate and the bon fire warmed them right up."

Bringing that same kind of warmth to the neighbors seemed to be the order of the evening.

Commented Kathy Marsan, "I can't wait until next year to do it again. It just wouldn't feel like Christmas if we didn't."

After organizing the gathering Alumni Ray Baldwin and Joel Kunkel enjoy the festivities. The evening was enjoyed not only by the students, but by all who participated.

Surprised and touched the family gathered to listen to the carolers. Favorites for both old and young were sung, such as, Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer and White Christmas.

An off-key voice or missed line often brings laughter to the faces of the carolers. Kathy Marsan and Joelle Alva attempt to compose themselves after one of the higher notes of "Oh Holy Night."

Jingling bells and harmonious voices filled the neighborhood that evening. The bells, rung by Julie Kunkel, added to the quality of the music, while Donna Butterworth sang along with others.

Adventures Beyond S.J.

Taking a ride on the wild side

The harness snaps down. The electric motor grinds as the car moves forward before jolting to a stop. The dreaded 'click' rings in the passengers' ears as the car drops to a seemingly inevitable death. Within seconds, the sensation ends, along with the ride. Yet Free-Fall is only one of many amusements members of the St. Lawrence Youth Group were able to enjoy at Great Adventure.

Students, family, and friends boarded four coach buses at six a.m. on June 28. Many on the trip napped during the long drive to New Jersey and were ready to celebrate summer when the buses rolled in to the parking lot. "I fell asleep on the highway and the next thing I knew, we were there!" remembers Jen Ryan.

The numerous water rides, including two flumes, the "Roaring Rapids" and "Splash Down," the newest addition to the park, soon became the group's favorites. Students relaxed as the pressures and frustrations of finals washed away into already squishy socks and shoes.

"It was great to celebrate summer and let loose with all my friends," said Michele Muscolino, exemplifying the relief many felt to have reached the vibrant days of summer. Michele was one of fifteen seniors who attended the trip.

The trip was also somewhat of a learning experience. Many individual goals were reached. "I finally went on 'Rolling Thunder' and I loved it so much, I went on it six times!" exclaimed Toni-Marie Silano. While personally overcoming fears and phobias, a few group records were set; the previously unattainable "ten cheeseburgers in ten minutes" challenge was tied by two very hungry guys. Five girls set a new time record on the Sarajevo Bobsled" ride. "The people waiting in line cheered for us!" said Natalie Green, then adding "but I guess anyone would respond to a group of screaming girls."

When students scattered to the many shops and food stands, they found, among other things, a recording studio. As many as four people may sing along to a song of their choice in a studio while being taped; their voices are then set to background music and played over a loudspeaker into the park. "I sang to 'The Greatest Love of All.' It really came out great, but it was so embarrassing when they played it into the park!" recalls Patty Luczaj.

Many St. Joseph students take time out of their busy schedules to participate in the St. Lawrence Youth Group. During the summer and the school year, the organization provides a relaxed, non-scholastic environment to bring youth of the community together. Most activities are student-run and must be proposed and planned by teens. One such activity was last year's sponsored trip to Great Adventure. Melissa Lucke commented, "Youth Group gives me something to look forward to, and a chance to see all my friends in a different atmosphere."

I say! I say! Anticipating the exhilarating rides, Patty Luczaj double checks the height requirements. Luckily, she meets Fog Horn Leg Horn's standard.

Hunger overwhelms the drenched Michele Leone and Sharon Donohue. The water rides that may have quenched their thirst, appear to have only increased their appetites.

Decisions! Decisions! Teresa Konieczny finds that choosing the right balloon is an art in itself.

Sometimes the job of a Security guard proves less than exciting. Perched on his prestigious post, this guard keeps the laws of the park in order. Every student fears that the men in uniform will put a damper on their fun.

The value of output seems to have a direct bearing on the amount of input that comes about on the academic side of high school life. Jen Anderson and Lisa Pogoda struggle through an Economics input session.

ACADEMICS

From detailed discoveries, to scientific props, to discoveries concerning space, the process of academics is not always drudgery. Jason Basso creatively handles a scientific concept in Earth Science his year's explosion of Academic changes seemed to begin when, in the Spring, the 25 year old typing room was turned inside out with 30 new Tandy 1000SX Computers. That was just the start. For the hundreds of students who might otherwise be hunting and pecking their way through the dark ages of typing class it was an entirely new experience: amid the smell of the plastic beasts an AP Computers Science Course evolved as did Word Processing.

While the Mary E. Kenny Memorial Library was turned into a museum of student art in late Spring, new courses were in the planning stages for Fall, among them: Music Appreciation and American Pop Music.

In the area of Fine Arts, Painting, Sculpture, Poetry, Creative Writing, Drama, Drawing and Design were back. Studio Art classes added new life to the already vibrant program.

On May 21, 1987, 54 students gathered at what was billed the Academic Recognition Dinner. This special outside-of-school event, (complete with family, friends, faculty and administrators) honored those top students.

It was also a year that the French and Spanish National Honor Society offered more outside activity than in any previous year.

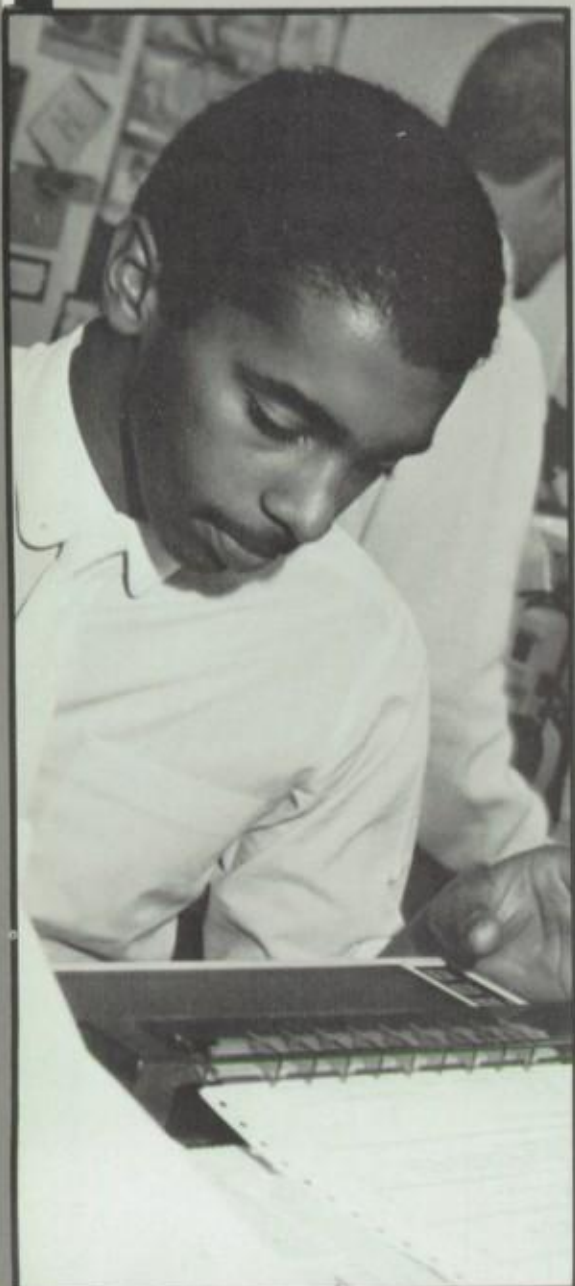

By Fall, the process of moving out was already underway. College Night signaled the beginning of the end for most seniors. Joining the real world began when College Night lured father and son, mother and daughter into the color brochure world of college life. For most it made matters more confusing than ever.

In the world of Catholic School Academics, some 81 non-catholic students and faculty members found life just fine with few exceptions.

It was a year in which output was clearly measured in terms of individual academic input.

I got it — A S
D F G H J K L ; !!! It can get quite aggravating, but once a student catches on to the order of the "home-row keys" typing comes quite easily. Well, in time it does. Typing has been an elective course offered at St. Joe's for many years. But this year, the school administration decided to take on a new outlook. 30 Tandy 1000SX computers were installed in August to replace the old typewriters and to make a combination of the machines used for typing and computer elective courses.

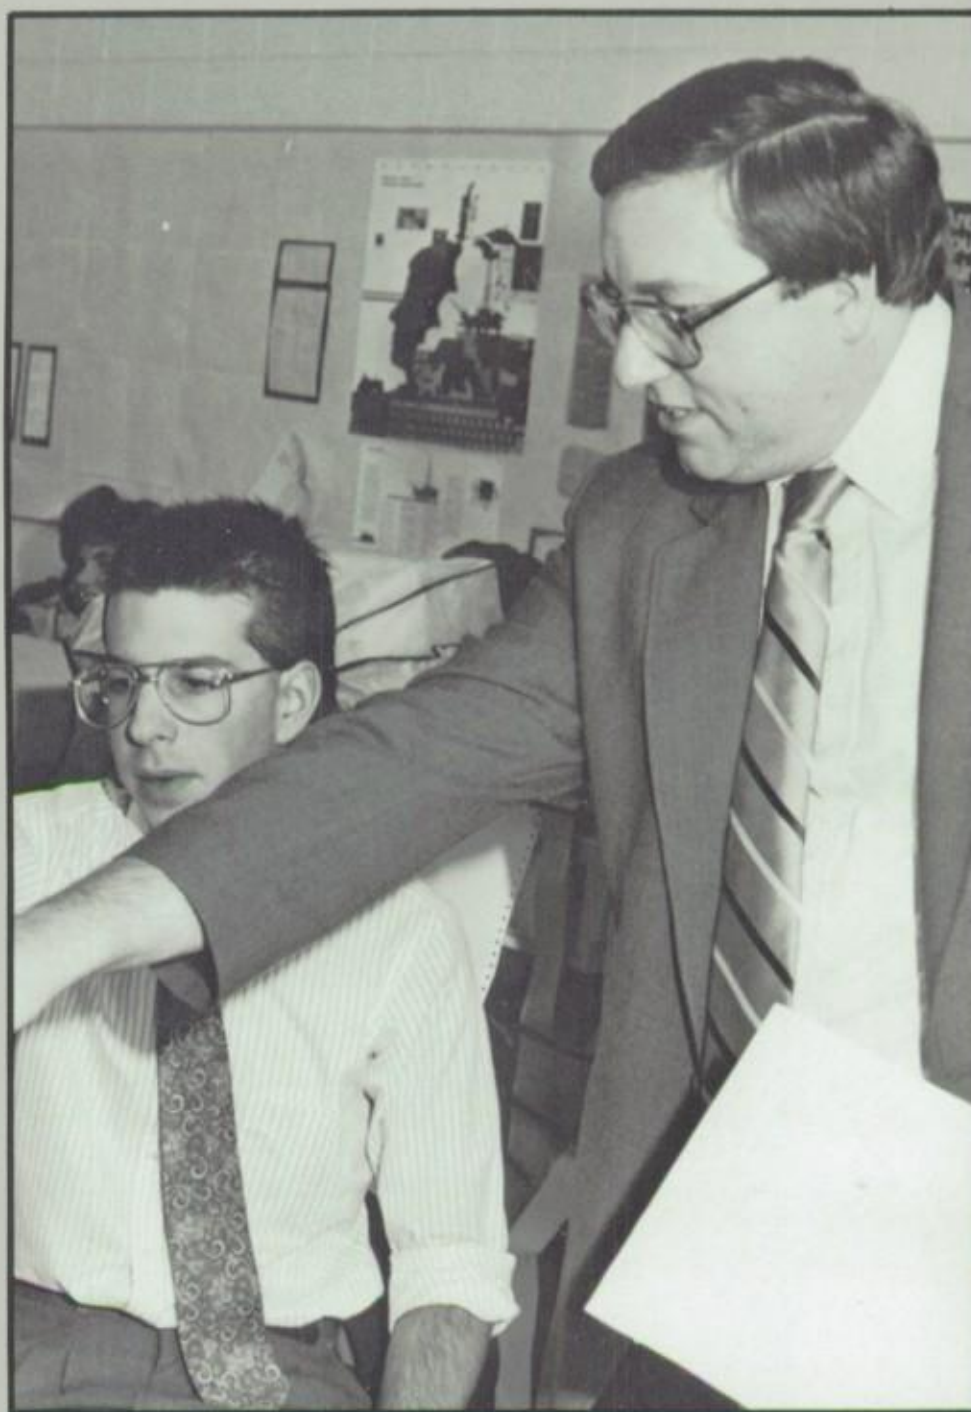

The computers are used for AP computers, typing, word processing, and computer programming.

"I took typing last year on the old typewriters and word processing this year. The difference is incredible. They are easier to use and they work much faster," commented Lisa Pogoda.

Students and faculty members on the second floor find joy in the new, much quieter atmosphere inside and outside of room 211. One teacher commented, "Trying to teach class across the hall from 30 pounding, noisy typewriters can become quite annoying — the new computers are great."

The computers seem to be just one tiny step in the modernizing of the student's mind in parallel with the outside world. In a world caught up in a constant flux of technology, it becomes important to introduce young adults to the expanding world of which they will soon be a vital part. The input on the new computers at St. Joe's is everything but negative. The output from the machines illustrates just how the students can learn and grow in the presence of something new and unfamiliar.

Taking a break from all the hard work, Joe Ovchar finds time to have a good laugh. Computer class isn't always all work and no play.

Colloquial Cords

• The man who knows two languages is twice as valuable. •

Just as the National Honor Society recognizes students achieving academic excellence in the course curriculum, the French and Spanish Honor Societies give students who excel in a foreign language the opportunity to also experience such an honor.

To be eligible, members must have completed their second year of language. They also must have at least an A-average in their respective language and maintain a minimum overall grade point average.

Members of these Honor Societies agree to accept the responsibility of giving up one study a week to tutor first and second year language students. Senior Spanish Honor Society member Amy Beckert, "Although I am giving up valuable study time, I see it as the opportunity to share my talents with others. There is nothing more satisfying than when underclassmen that I tutored comes up to me in the hall and shows me an A on a test concerning material I spent hours explaining to them."

It is perhaps the spirit of the culture that joins members together. "Not only have I successfully learned a second language, I have been brought to an awareness of the people and culture of France," responded senior Nadelle Pezzello. During the French Honor Society (Victor Hugo Chapter) inductions that took place in December, inductees and their guests enjoyed poetry and music from Victor Hugo's masterpiece "Les Miserables" as well many French foods served as refreshments. The Spanish Honor Society learns about the country in which the language originates not only through their rigorous class studies, but during fiestas in which the piñata is the center of attraction.

These Honor Societies give students the opportunity to share their knowledge with others and learn more about the world around us. As the French Honor Society members recited during inductions "L'homme qui sait deux langues on vaut deux." (The man who speaks two languages is twice as valuable.)

As the newly selected members of the Spanish Honors Society look on, Jeff Coster lights his candle. The candle is a symbol of the light of learning and is an important part of the induction ceremony.

Chapter President Sr. Vazquez congratulates Amy Beckert with the presentation of her certificate. After the ceremony, the students had time to congratulate one another while enjoying refreshments provided by the parents.

Reciting poems written by Victor Hugo, Sheila Cummings and Trevor Medvecky partake in the induction. Each member of the French Honor Society had a designated part of a poem to read.

A delighted Erin Roach receives her certificate of honor from French teacher Mrs. Marcucci. The students gathered in the library for the hour long ceremony.

In recognition of her academic achievement, Lisbeth Pifko receives both congratulations and a certificate from Monsignor Shea.

Academic Honor

• Honor roll is only a minimal acknowledgement of academic achievement. •

Fifty four students gathered with family, faculty and the administration to honor those who had achieved honors for the first three marking periods. The first annual Academic Recognition Dinner in the history of St. Joseph High School was held at Liedle's in Stratford on May 21, 1987.

Most faculty members felt that this type of recognition was long overdue. Until now, school dinners had been for sports or induction ceremonies. Hard working students felt the same way. "Last year was a really hard year for me so it was nice to be rewarded for all that work," said Jodi Raithel, a junior who was among the honored guests.

The dinner commenced with the welcoming remarks of Vice Principal Richard Bishop. Rev. Raymond Petrucci, Spiritual Director, followed with an invocation. Following the dinner, the guest speaker, Margaret Kelley Luchansky '75, Deputy Assistant State's Attorney, related her experiences as an alumna of St. Joe's. Mrs. Luchansky discussed the many goals she established and met throughout high school. She served as a model for the students and provided inspiration.

Msgr. Richard Shea, principal, then presented certificates of achievement to each student and extended congratulations. As individual students accepted their certificates, Mr. Bishop announced their specific achievements both academically and in the area of extracurricular activity.

Michele Howard commented, "It gave me a great sense of personal fulfillment and pride." A benediction by Rev. Petrucci concluded the ceremony.

Afterwards, students and their families were able to converse with their teachers on a nonacademic basis. In regard to the dinner's organization, sophomore Amy Sullivan expressed her feelings, "The dinner impressed me very much since most schools reward athletes regularly and ignore other accomplishments until senior year." Another student added "Honor roll is only a minimal acknowledgement of academic achievement."

Mr. Bishop hopes that the number of students present at next year's dinner will increase. No matter what the outcome, he assures that "the Academic Recognition Dinner will become an annual event."

Guest speaker and alumna, Mrs. Peggy Kelley Luchansky ('75), assistant State District Attorney, spoke to the students about academic motivation and future success.

The Academic Recognition Dinner gave parents the opportunity to show how proud they are of their children's success. Michelle Howard and her father Timothy, along with Lisa Sachs and her mother Barbara, enjoy the celebration.

Hard work pays off. Maryellen Czerner was among sixty nine recipients of the special recognition award. It was the first year the event was held. All awards were presented by Msgr. Shea.

Golden Achievers

• My becoming a member of the N.H.S. was very important to me ... all the hard work paid off. •

Cindy Evanko trudged down the hall towards room 309. Her eyes felt heavy from the lack of rest. "Two hours of sleep," she muttered to herself, "and all for a Prob. and Stat. test." She thought of the weekend ahead of her; a ten page term paper for Mr. Collins and an essay for Mrs. Green. "I figure I'll spend about six hours working on the yearbook, too ... is this really all worth it?" Then the day of graduation popped into her mind. She pictured herself in a gold gown and cap receiving her diploma. She thought of the distinction of being a member of the National Honor Society and a feeling of pride overcame her.

"My becoming a member of the N.H.S. was very important to me. It makes me feel like all the hard work paid off. I'm very happy to be a part of it," commented Cindy Evanko.

As junior year draws to a close, Mr. Pat Pardee, chairman of the selection committee, passes out applications to capable students who possess a 3.5 G.P.A. or better and participate in extra-curricular activities. Next, the students ask five teachers to recommend them for the society. Acceptance letters were sent out shortly afterwards.

Amy Rooney noted, "The N.H.S. is a special club made up of those who have worked hard in school and out of school, for the school and for themselves." Those individuals elected by the committee, in turn selected classmates to represent them. Bill Gregory was chosen president, Lisbeth Pifko as vice-president, Meg Cassidy as treasurer, and Kara Lisi as secretary. The induction ceremony took place on May 27. Ten percent of the class of '88 became members of the N.H.S., enabling them to wear gold gowns and caps at graduation. Along with the honor, new members also receive further commitments. An acceptable grade point average must be maintained and they are required to tutor underclassmen requesting help.

A member of the N.H.S. can't help feeling that the late nights studying and the hours of sacrificed free time on the weekends was, in fact, an accomplishment. Through motivation, perseverance, and participation in several activities, these students are awarded with an acknowledgement they can be proud of.

Elected officers wait anxiously to make their speeches. Excited about the honor, they hope to themselves that they are prepared and qualified enough for the important jobs that lie ahead of them.

Accepting her certificate from Mr. Pardee, Jill Collett is inducted into the National Honor Society. The new members also received commemorative pins.

Following the ceremony, new members of the NHS enjoyed refreshments and congratulations from one another.

An active group, the Concert Choir can be heard at almost every school assembly. They also put on an annual Christmas Concert, and all enjoyed Shannon Devitt's solo 'O Holy Night.

The Concert Choir composed of about eighty girls, sang at the school masses. Their powerful sound created a sense of comraderie among the community.

The Sound Of Music

St. Joe's is committed to its fine arts program because it is an integral part of a liberal arts education.

Almost twenty percent of the student body is involved in the various music programs that are offered. Music courses include Band, Chorus, Music Appreciation, as well as American Pop Music. Some of the music students are considering music as a career and according to Mr. Marchitelli, "St. Joe's has had many successful musicians. Other students are pursuing interests in Sound Engineering or related fields.

The music department, namely the Band and Chorus, is responsible for accompanying the Christmas program, the Spring Musical, as well as assemblies and masses. Mr. Marchitelli summarized best the purpose of fine arts at St. Joe's. "Being a college preparatory program, St. Joe's is committed to its fine arts program because it is an integral part of a liberal arts education."

A new tradition has begun this year involving the band. Their presence at the sports assemblies excites the crowd and invokes school spirit, preparing the teams for their seasons to come.

The American Pop Music class is an elective available for anyone interested in a musicaly related career. "The class is great," commented senior David LoGalbo, "Mr. Marchitelli grasps your attention and won't let it go. His tests are hard, but I have definitely learned a great deal of information I never knew before. Besides the walk to the house is a lot of fun. It takes you away from the monotony of the classroom."

The music curriculum at St. Joe's provides students with the opportunity to make themselves more well-rounded individuals. Anyone whose interests lie in a musical field or those who possess a musical talent are encouraged to join. The classes do not necessarily follow a strict course curriculum, they only enable students to grow and expand their horizons both inside and outside themselves.

The boys brass section became the backbone of the band. They brought strength to the sound of the music, performing at a school ceremony in the library.

Brushing Up

• The love of beauty seems to be innate in humanity. •

When people attempt to capture the beauty of nature or skillfully create something to express their experience, it is called art. The love of beauty seems to be innate in humanity. Throughout history, people have attempted to express their experience of beauty through different mediums.

The traditional fine art categories include: painting, sculpture, architecture, poetry, fine writing, music, drama, and dancing. St. Joseph's offers students the opportunity to study art, music and drama.

Our art program consists of elective courses emphasizing studio arts such as sculpture, painting, drawing and design, and Art Appreciation which is offered as an academic art class. Some students who take art classes are considering careers in art related fields such as fine arts, graphic arts, fashion or architecture. Other students take studio arts or Art Appreciation to have an enjoyable and relaxing class during their school day. According to Mrs. Bramble, "The art programs are designed for the students to explore new materials. The art students also have an opportunity to show their accomplishments during the art show which is held annually.

Although not an academic course for credit, drama is an important part of the fine arts program at St. Joe's. The Drama Club, moderated by Brother David and Mrs. Farrell, is responsible for the production of spring musicals, as well as, the Christmas Show. The Thespian Society is a group of elite Drama Club members who are recognized on a national level for their dedication and talent in the acting world.

Rendering album covers is only one of the many difficult assignments in Drawing and Design class. Missy Ferrari and Dennis Filingeri attempt their work with serious attitudes.

Discussion is a necessary part of fully understanding artwork. A new member of the St. Joseph faculty, Mrs. Bramble, shares her point of view with student Mike DeRosa.

Theater is an art that many members of the Saint Joseph community have grown to appreciate. Drama Club officers Toni Delgado and Toni Silano inform the enthusiastic crowd about the "action packed" year ahead.

Exceptional work is displayed each month in a glass enclosed case for all to appreciate. Megan Grennan and Cristina Perrez arrange the assortment of favorite album covers reproduced on to paper by Drawing and Design students.

School masses give non-Catholics the opportunity to observe the sacred tradition of the Catholic Mass. Fr. Verrilli, Fr. Ray and Msgr. Shea offer up their prayers upon the gifts to be consecrated.

Catholic students Michelle Gomez and Betsy Ganim become one as a community of believers when they join to receive communion from Mr. Bishop. Non-Catholic students enjoy this peaceful time to reflect on their own faiths.

Being on the Outside

... when it comes time to receive communion, sometimes I feel excluded.

The opening and closing of every school-wide mass is impressive to behold. In unison, over one thousand Catholics reach their hands to their foreheads, then to the heart, from shoulder to shoulder: the sign of the cross, complete. Yet, if a person observes carefully, he or she will inevitably notice students sprinkled throughout the community who do not cross themselves, do not receive communion. It is, by no means out of lack of respect; it is simply that these students are not Roman Catholic.

Seventy four students and seven faculty members make up the non-Catholic population of St. Joseph's. Their presence within the parochial system is witness to the truly ecumenical spirit which has embraced the Christian community in recent decades. Both Catholic and non-Catholic traditions are represented.

The experience of non-Catholic students point to the similarities and differences which exist between Christian denominations. Not only do the students learn about Catholicism, but in doing so, they become aware of the uniqueness of their own tradition. Donna Butterworth a senior and a member of the United Methodist Church, comments, "I have appreciated religious instruction which focuses on the history of the church and the Bible. But in my tradition, we don't pray to Mary or saints like Catholics do. Also, clergy can marry and women can serve as ministers." Robert Jackle, a junior and also a United Methodist, comments, "I'm not familiar with all the prayers and responses; when it comes time to receive communion, sometimes I feel excluded."

Rita Green, chairperson of the English department and a Congregationalist, believes strongly in the notion of "the community of believers." "St. Joseph's provides me with a sense of community," she points out. "There's something very special about experiencing one thousand people in silent communion at mass. Although I don't practice the rituals, I have always been respected by the community and I appreciate the inclusive Christian-centered language Msgr. Shea uses in worship."

The presence of a non-Catholic community may well broaden most students understanding of church. Although legitimate differences do exist between Christian traditions it seems apparent that all share a common bond. As Rita Green put it, "I guess we all are one in Christ."

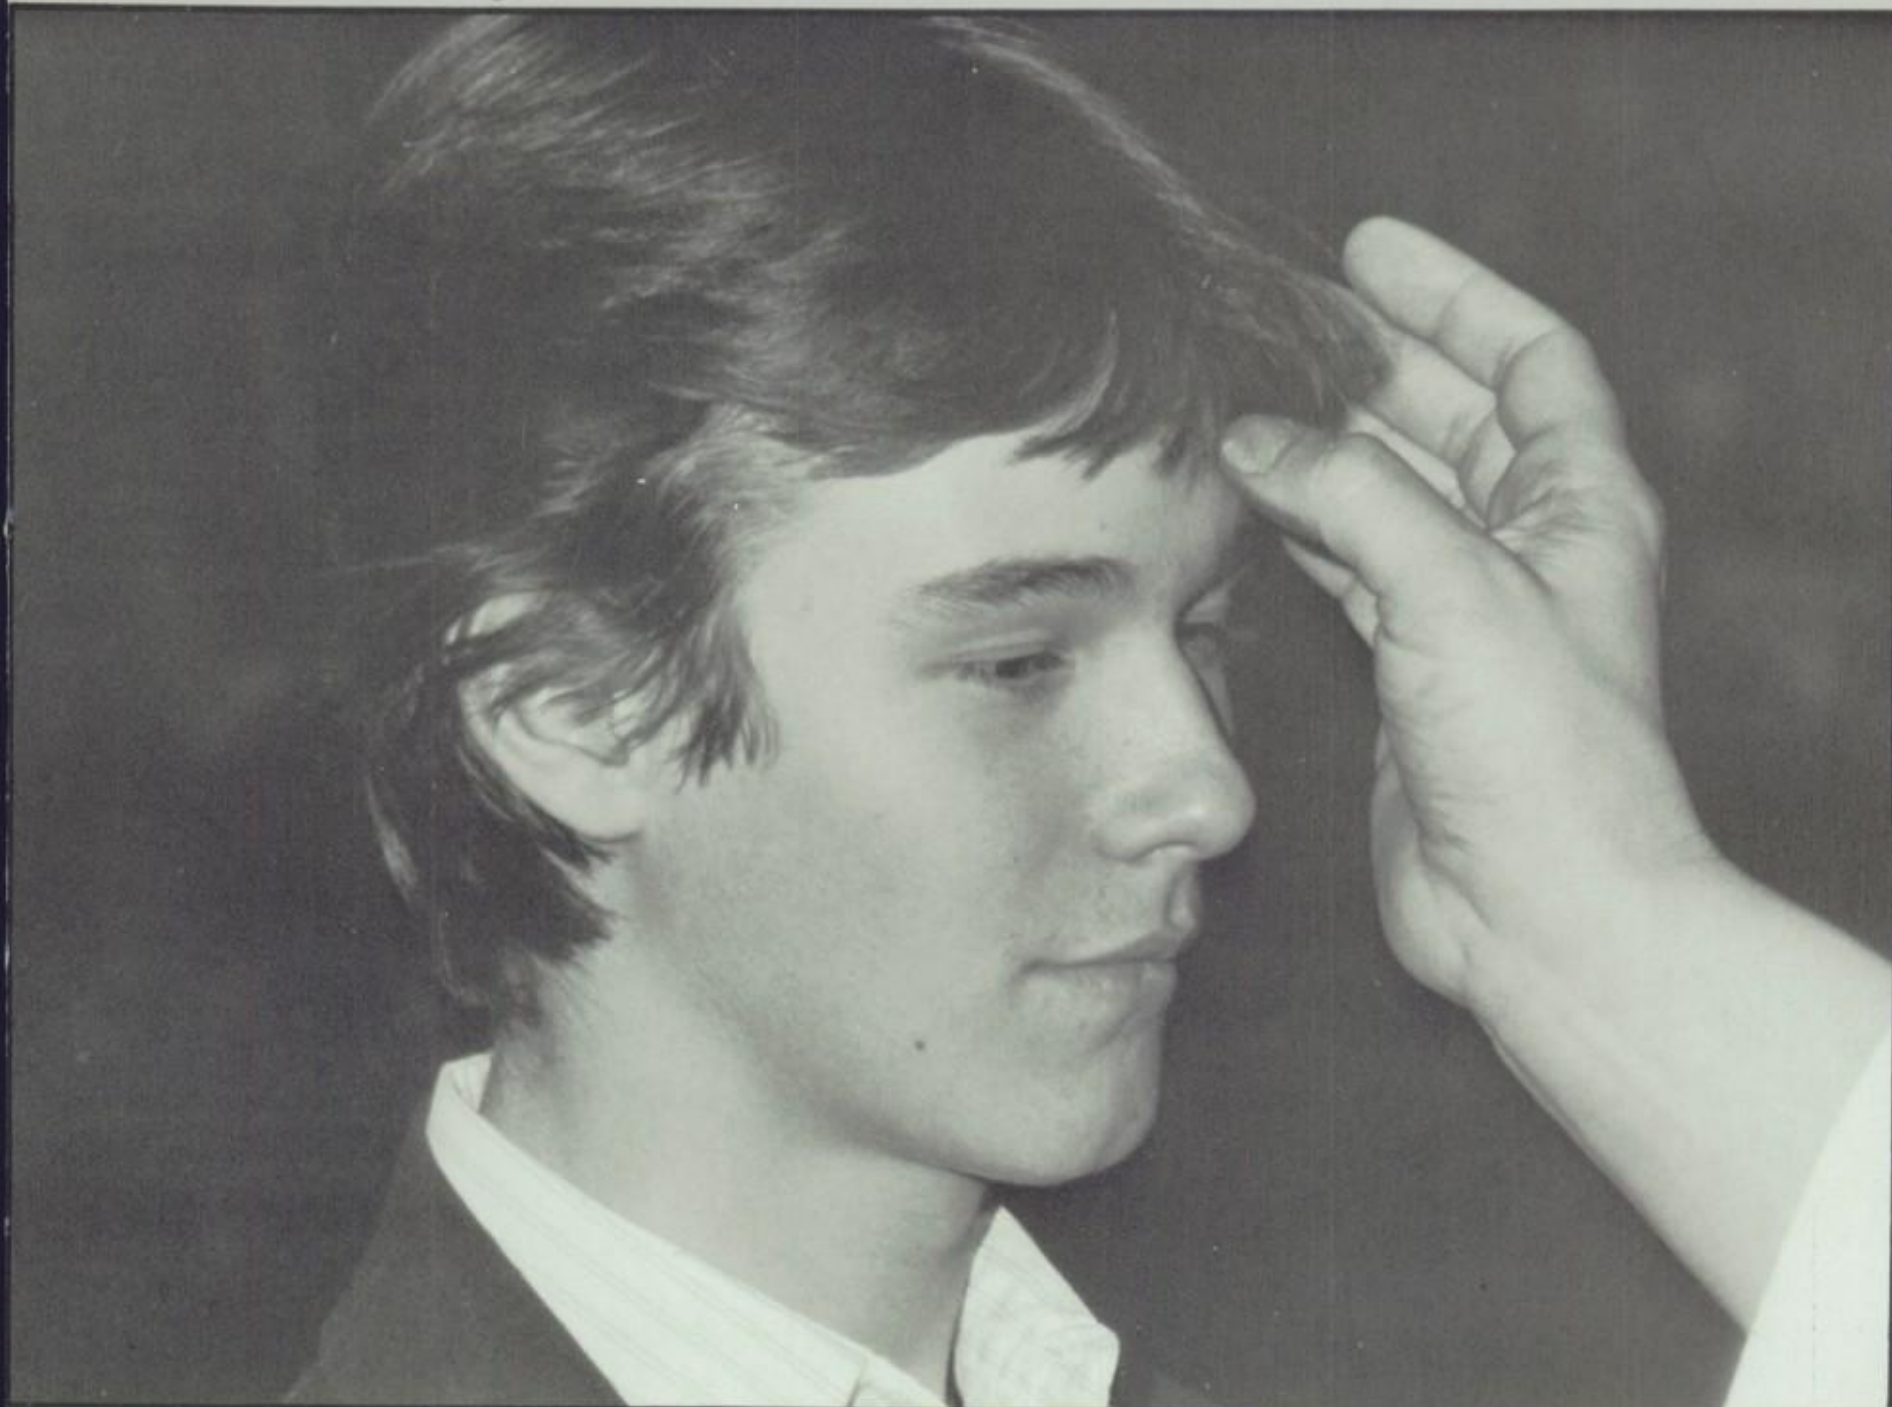

Accepting the blessing of ashes on Ash Wednesday, Rich Selteneich celebrates the important feast that begins the Lenten season.

Symbols of the Catholic faith decorate all of the classrooms and offices at St. Joe's. Lutheran, Dana MacNally, stands by the Advent Wreath displayed in the main office.

Vicki Hawkins, a member of the Episcopalian Church reflects on her understanding of God. She finds it rewarding to share her own insights with her religion class.

Moving Out

The task of choosing an appropriate school . . . is a long and involved process.

As senior year approaches, students find themselves in the face of an unavoidable pursuit, the college search. The task of choosing an appropriate school, one that meets one's academic needs and personal interests, is a long and involved process. Time spent searching in the summer and College Night in the fall, offer students the opportunity to make an informed decision about the college they will hopefully attend.

Oftentimes, students begin the search in the summer prior to their senior year. The extended time off from school allows seniors to visit a number of schools in various states. "Visiting a college can help narrow down the application choices and although summer may not be the best time to visit empty campuses, the visit will offer a better idea of what the school is like," says senior Kim Guilmette. Junior Danielle Young, while visiting with her sister, stated "I found going to see the schools frightening at first. I couldn't imagine being there alone if I had never seen the school."

Some of the colleges visited by St. Joe's students were Georgetown, UCONN, Villanova, Bucknell, Boston College, Scranton, and Stonehill. Amy Baxter found Boston College perfect for the type of school she wants to attend." Liz Boyton said, "I liked Georgetown even better after visiting it. Particularly impressive is the central location in Washington

Many students find it difficult to visit colleges in the summer for a number of reasons: many work, travelling great distances is hard, and simply many students would rather enjoy the summer on the beach. On October 22, '87 representatives from colleges and universities across the country assembled at St. Joseph's High School. For the majority of students, College Night is the first real contact with college representatives.

Information about a number of colleges was made available. Regional schools represented included Salve Regina, Providence, Fairfield University, and the University of Connecticut. Some of the more competitive colleges were Cornell, Colgate, Dartmouth, and Bucknell. Recruiters from the various branches of the military were also present.

College night enables students to indirectly "visit" a number of different colleges. The students receive brochures and have the chance to ask important questions about the academic requirements, campus life and extracurricular activities. An important advantage of college night is that it helps the students put their abilities and talents into perspective therefore knowing what schools are realistic choices. For some, the night only adds to the confusion associated with the application process.

Many juniors and seniors spend their study hall time in the Career Room to continue their college search. Maryjo Marrone looks through the application files in hopes of finding a college that offers programs for her career interests.

College Night is an essential part of the college application process. Joe Errico searches through the roster of the colleges that were represented nationwide.

Kim Portocarrero, Amy Sullivan, and John Sullivan speak with a representative from Salve Regina, the Newport College. Juniors, as well as seniors, filled out postcards to receive information on the schools of their choice.

On a rainy friday afternoon, Amy Kieran counts the final minutes of the school week.

Intent on a game of chess, Steve Viola passes the time waiting for his opponent to make a move. In the beginning days of school, study hall for seniors was held in the library.

The serenity of the library sets the stage for deep concentration. Sandy Alves and Claudette Merena engage in fervent studies hoping to ace their challenging courses.

When lunch is not in session, the cafeteria provides the setting for Mya Lee Mackiewicz to catch up on some notes.

Shhhhhh!

• When utilized, study halls provide relief from the time spent on homework outside school. •

For most students study hall is a period to relax and socialize with friends. Yet with others, it is for exactly what the word connotes; studying. While study hall does provide a friendly and sociable atmosphere to get together with friends, its main purpose is to help cut down on the amount of homework students must complete at home. St. Joe's students do not always take advantage of this privilege. They do, however, gain from other aspects of study hall. "Some of my closest friends have been made through my studies," remarked Dina Cowden. She commented that for forty-five minutes she could carry on a quiet, uninterrupted conversation in study hall with friends. This wouldn't otherwise be possible due to activities and busy schedules after and during school.

Many at St. Joe's take advantage of the opportunity to catch up on studying. Heather Duplex states that she enjoys her studies in the library where she can complete her homework for the following day. She also says that, by using her time wisely, she has little or no homework each night for the following day.

An alternative for seniors is the senior lounge, which has undergone major changes this year. The traditional 'lounge' furniture consisting of couches, comfortable chairs, and LA-Z Boys have been replaced by several round reading tables and chairs from the cafeteria. Now a moderator must also be in the room at all times to keep the students in line. Many students feel that they were discriminated against due to the behavior of previous senior classes. Nevertheless, many accept the privileges that they do have and welcome the change. The senior lounge still provides the symbolic separation from the underclassmen. The atmosphere remains a laid back and relaxing one that all seniors enjoy.

Out Of Uniform

My hair never looks the same and I don't like changing, especially first period. ♫

Ultimate frisbee. Team handball. Field hockey. These sports are among the new activities included in this year's physical education program. Twice a week for one period, freshmen and sophomores are required to take gym. For some, it provides a relaxed break from usual school work. Others enjoy the free time to socialize with friends. A few anxiously await junior year when gym is no longer required.

Generally, boys seem to favor gym more than girls. One freshman boy notes, "Gym is one of my favorite periods because it is so different from the rest of the day. I like sports anyway." On the other hand, some girls are more concerned with their appearance and would rather not exert themselves. Sophomore Sarah Dorok explains, "My hair never looks the same, and I don't like changing, especially first period." Other girls disagree saying they enjoy the chance to stay physically fit.

This year two new gym teachers, Mr. Brian Holt and Miss Marjorie Wilcox, complimented the Saint Joseph faculty. Both contribute their enthusiasm and ability to physical education. Miss Wilcox goal is "to urge the girls to participate in the activities and most of all, to enjoy them." Sophomore Krista Caponi explains, "No one has time to slack off because everyone is always included."

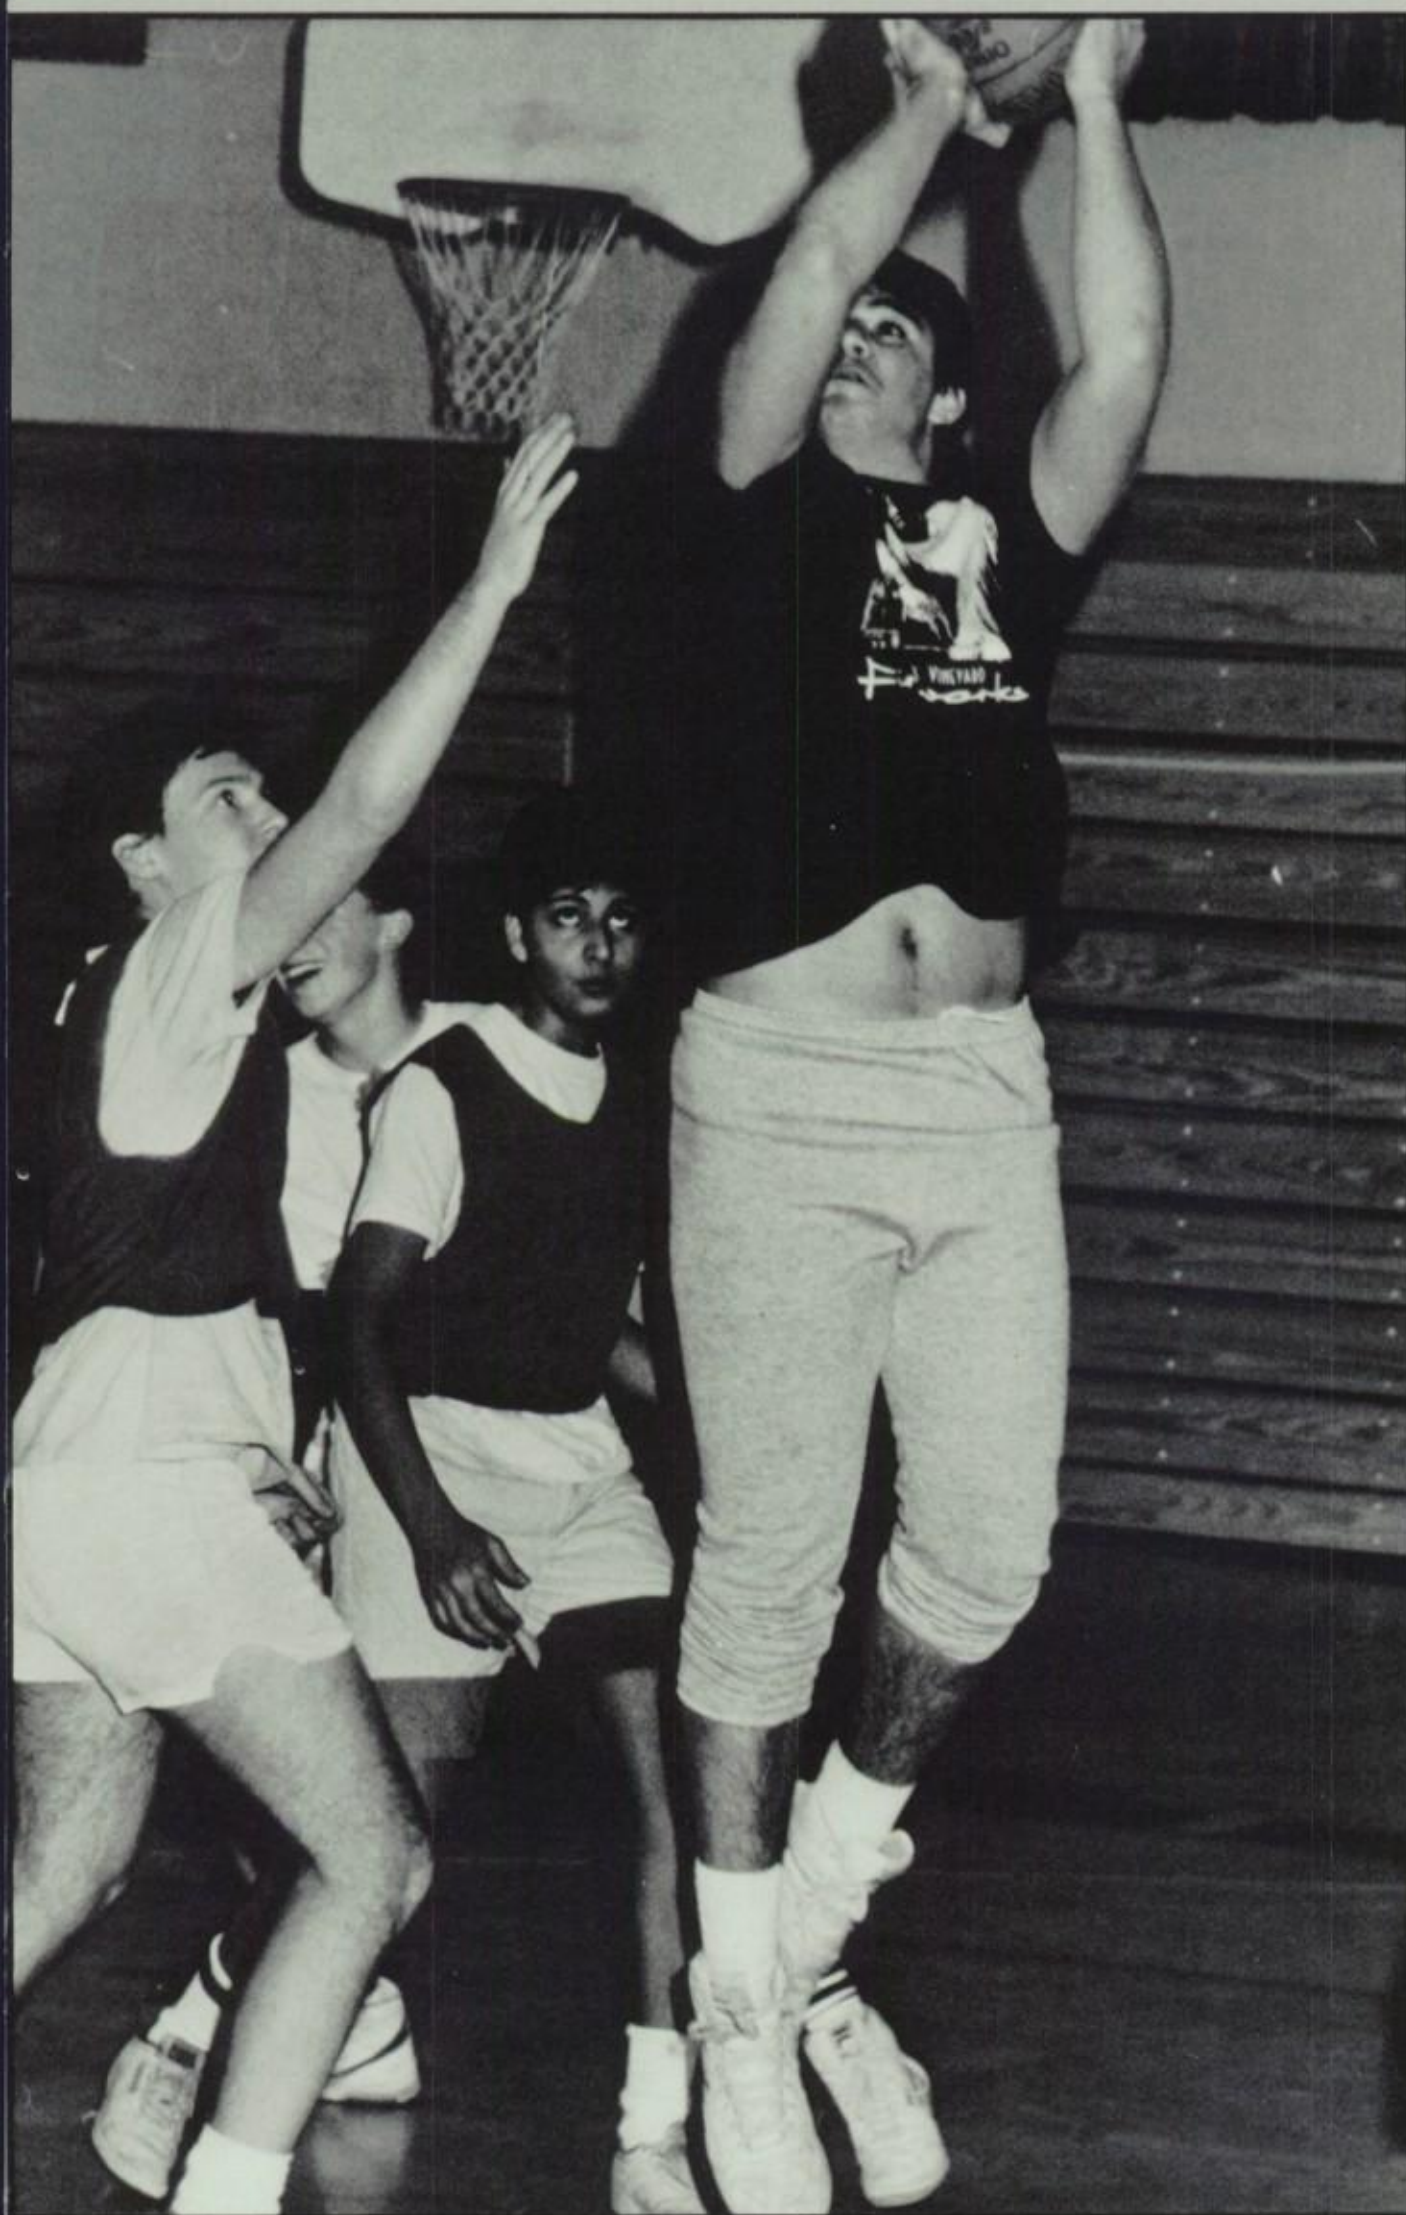

Regardless of negative opinions, gym is beneficial. According to the Curriculum Bulletin, physical education develops "agility through a controlled program of exercise, training, and sports." As another sophomore put it, "Gym gives me an opportunity to exercise when I normally would not. It develops a good habit." Inner commitment can be seen outwardly through some students active participation.

Gym classes give the students a chance to release built up frustrations. Richard Laidlaw takes advantage of this opportunity.

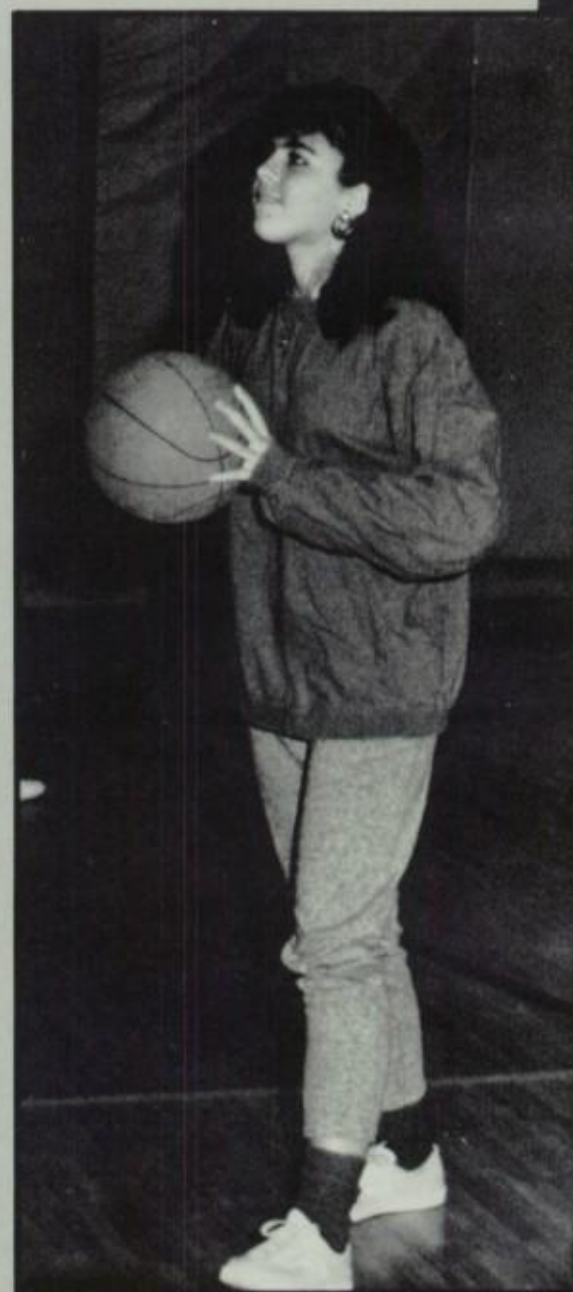

When the gymnasium is used for activities other than sports, students are stuck with the tedious task of stacking chairs. Regina Bartram reluctantly awaits the arrival of an empty cart to finish up the job she started.

Competition is a strong emotion illustrated by Jeff Pisacreta, as he shows his athletic ability and originality during gym class.

St. Joes gym classes offer a break from the daily academic schedule. Kerry Lee Fowler prepares to take a shot during a friendly game.

A tasty variety of pastry added to the enjoyment of the evening. Mrs. Susan Brouard dispensed punch for those whose appetites for food exceeded their appetites for fine art.

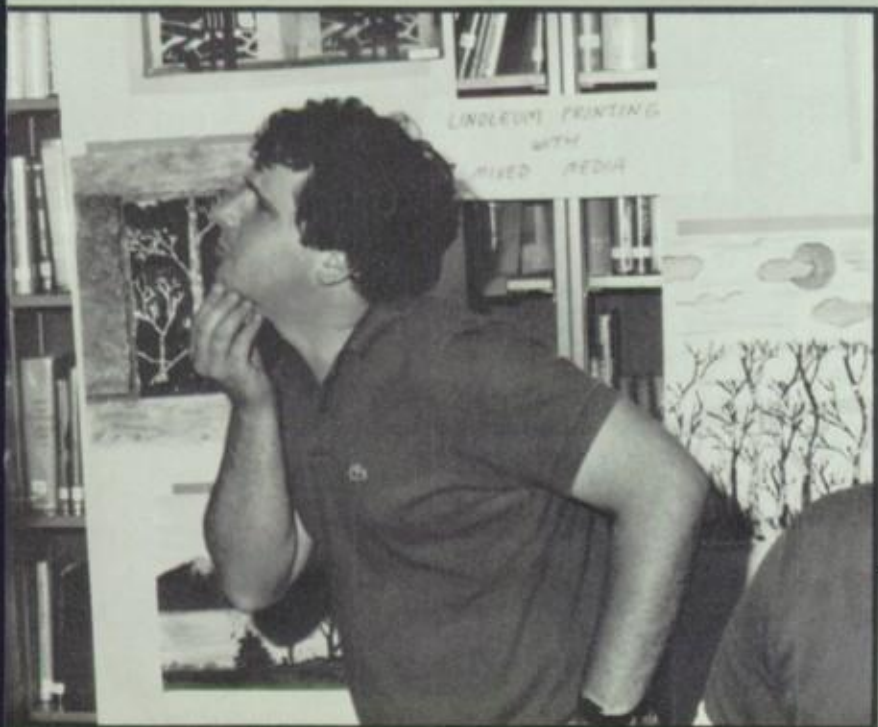

Admiring onlookers flipped through the portfolio of graduate Corey Dwyer. Many of the portfolios on display were originally put together as admission requirements for art school.

Former St. Joseph student Meg Fasolo seeks advice on her work from a friend. Meg chose art as her college major in hopes of someday pursuing a career in the field.

Art enthusiast Ray Patterson is intrigued by a student's project. The underlying themes and messages of much of the artwork often served to fascinate as well as baffle viewers.

Student Gallery

... outwardly expressing their inner feelings through mediums of paint, pen, and ink ...

With color, design, and, most of all, creativity, the student-artists of St. Joe's turned the school library inside out, they created a miniature Louvre. Last year's Art Show, organized by former art teacher Mrs. Byron, was an inspiring event. It offered students in the art program, as well as the entire student body the opportunity to proudly display their creative abilities. The library walls were decorated in diverse types of work, including water color, oil paintings, charcoal, sculpture, and pen and ink. The students' work ranged from representational (realistic paintings) to the non-representational (abstract). Students are allowed to submit as many pieces as desired, in hopes to take home a ribbon for their efforts. The prizes are awarded to those chosen by a panel of judges. Last year's panel consisted of Mr. Byron, Father Verrilli, and Mrs. Green.

The class of '87 contributed most of the art work to the show, although many juniors offered a taste of their creative work as well. Graduate Julie Pesatora, who won honorable mention, brought in some work she did outside of class. "A lot of students get to show off to others their hidden talents," Julie said at the art show, "I remember a lot of people, as they walked through our gallery, seemed surprised that some of the friends they've known for years had these artistic abilities!" People may have surprised others with their talents, but they surprised themselves as well, and discovered new things about their potential and ability. As a student of painting, Andrea Brown exclaimed, "I never expected first place!" Andrea received first place honors for her pointilism painting of the sky.

Among other winners were Dustin Zeigler, who received honorable mention for a pencil drawing of a bird's nest, and Brian Duford, who won first place for his abstract sculpture of a robot. Antonia Gomes, Meg Fasolo, and Ann Reilly also received awards of recognition for their artwork.

Aside from the paintings, the Art Show also had delicacies prepared by Mrs. Brouard, and background music performed by Brian Duford, all which added to the cultural atmosphere.

The school Art Show gives many student-artists the recognition they deserve for outwardly expressing their inner feelings through mediums of paint, pen and ink. With the help of the new art teacher, Mrs. Bramble, the students will continue to develop their talents and maintain interest in the ever-important arts.

Spirit was the name of the game. It echoed in the gym, rang out in the stands, and was alive in the hearts of the SJ fans. By decorating Varsity football players' cars inside and out, the cheerleaders, as always, boosted the team's morale.

THE FOCUS OF PASSION

SPORTS

J enthusiasm and pride helped to spark many of this year's teams to victory. The girls swim team served as a fine example of the inside determination that was so much a part of the 1988 season.

t began with a kind of inner passion and determination. It was an overall feeling, a kind of enthusiasm that reached all team players from early Spring of 1987 to the bitter cold Winter of 1988.

The Baseball team starting out young and inexperienced found itself with a new, internal determination. It was a momentum that built slowly as the season evolved. An 11-10 record was something to be proud of.

For Coach Christy Hayes, a fine 8-2 record was, by season end, filled with many outstanding seniors earning a broad range of honors from All A.C.C. to All-Bridgeport to All-State.

For the third year in a row, the Volleyball team ended with a 20-1 record. All six starting senior players made it inside the selective group of All A.C.C.

This year, in a manner and style unlike any other year on record, the cheerleaders played a larger than life, inside part in bringing the feelings of the fans to a roaring finish. Their new cheers renewed the spirit and tradition of the school. The squad went on to become finalists in the International Cheerleading Foundation Competition. It was an inside spirit and an outward attitude exemplified in new cheers and brilliant new uniforms.

For the Girls Swim Team it was an inside splash of activity as they moved into a new lifting program that kept them in top condition. Practice hours were extended. They were out to top the year before. They made it.

Somehow, the spirit that each student searched for seemed to be found. For most, it was a secret passion found somewhere deep within the heart of the athlete.

It would never be quite the same again.

In The Outfield

After five years of service to the St. Joseph softball team, Mr. Roach stepped down from his position as head coach. Finding a successor was a challenge but the decision to name Bob Baird as new head coach proved to be a wise one.

The 1987 team completed yet another productive year for St. Joseph's. They ended the season with 18 wins and 2 losses in the regular season. Co-captains Jen Luzietti and Cheryl LePardo led the team and greatly contributed to the success they earned.

The Cadettes opened their season with a heart-breaking loss to highly ranked Platt Tech. This immediate setback did nothing to dampen the spirits of the players. They rebounded with nine wins before splitting a doubleheader with St. Bernard's. After this loss, they went onto a nine game winning streak. The team effort earned St.

Joe's the title of ACC champions along with a fifteenth place rank in the state. Hopes for the state championship were crushed when the girls lost to a strong Bristol Central team 7-1.

Pitcher Jessica Loda, catcher Cheryl LePardo, and shortstop Donna Charchenko were selected for the 1st team All-ACC, while Jen Luzietti earned second team honors at first base. Loda and Charchenko were also named to the All NY Daily News team. Mr. Baird's hard work as a rookie coach paid off as he was elected coach of the year; also by the NY Daily News.

Coming off the 1987 season with a 19-3 overall record and the loss of only five players to graduation, a strong underclass team still remains. Looking ahead, Coach Bob Baird hopes to defend the league title and to make the state championship a reality.

A Swing at Success

The 1987 baseball team, hit hard by graduation losses one year ago, entered into a rebuilding stage. However, for Mr. Luchansky's club, it was just a matter of reloading as the Cadets ended their season as co-champions of the ACC and were quarter finalists in the state tournament.

St. Joseph began the season inconsistently. After defeating league opponents South Catholic and St. Thomas Aquinas, the Cadets traveled to Uncasville to face St. Bernard, only to lose both ends of a double-header. The boys rebounded with two big victories over highly ranked Notre Dame of West Haven and archrival Fairfield Prep.

Led by the excellent all-around play of John Stratton and Mickey Tomey, along with the consistent performance of Brian Botti, St. Joseph managed to stay among the leaders in the ACC. Despite several non-league losses, the Cadets ended their regular season at 9-9. The team gained themselves entry into the state tournament and were ranked as the last seed. The boys advanced to the quarter finals, defeating Cheney Tech of Manchester and Bullard Havens Tech of Bridgeport. The following game matched the Cadets with Maloney High of Meriden. It was a very close game, but Maloney clinched it, 2-0. St. Joseph ended their season with a respectable 11-10 overall record.

The Cadets lost six lettermen to graduation, but Mr. Luchansky is depending on returning varsity members Mickey Tomey, Joe Weber, Greg Snajder, John Huber, Phil Golino, Warren Sasso, Joe Lopresti and Tom Montelli for the leadership required for a winning season.

Catcher Mickey Tomey walks back from the pitchers mound after a pregame pep talk with Tommy Montelli. Tomey's solid defensive skills and strong right arm played a large part in the team's success.

SEASON RECORD 11-10

After rounding third Phil Golino prepares to slide home against South Catholic. He scored on a base hit by Dan Lassogna, and it proved to be a winning run.

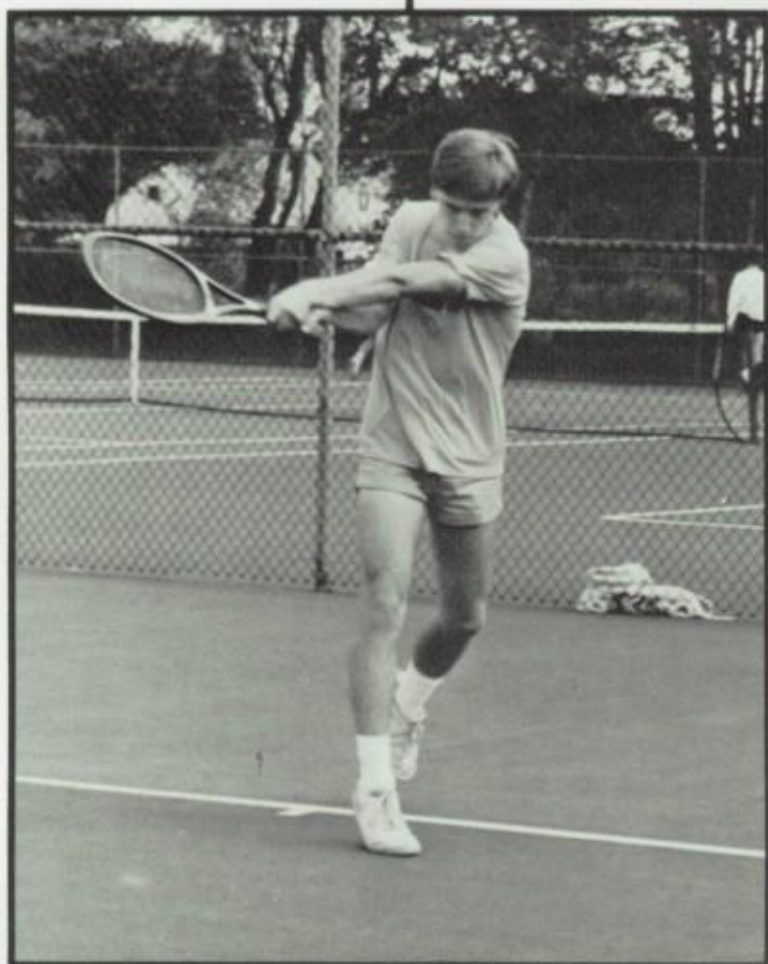

Getting the signs from Coach Luchansky, outfielder John Huber prepares to step up to plate. Huber's execution of a hit-and-run play sparked the Cadets to a big inning.

Keeping his eye on the ball, Greg Snajder takes a strong cut. Snajder proved to be a strength for the Cadets with his consistency at the plate.

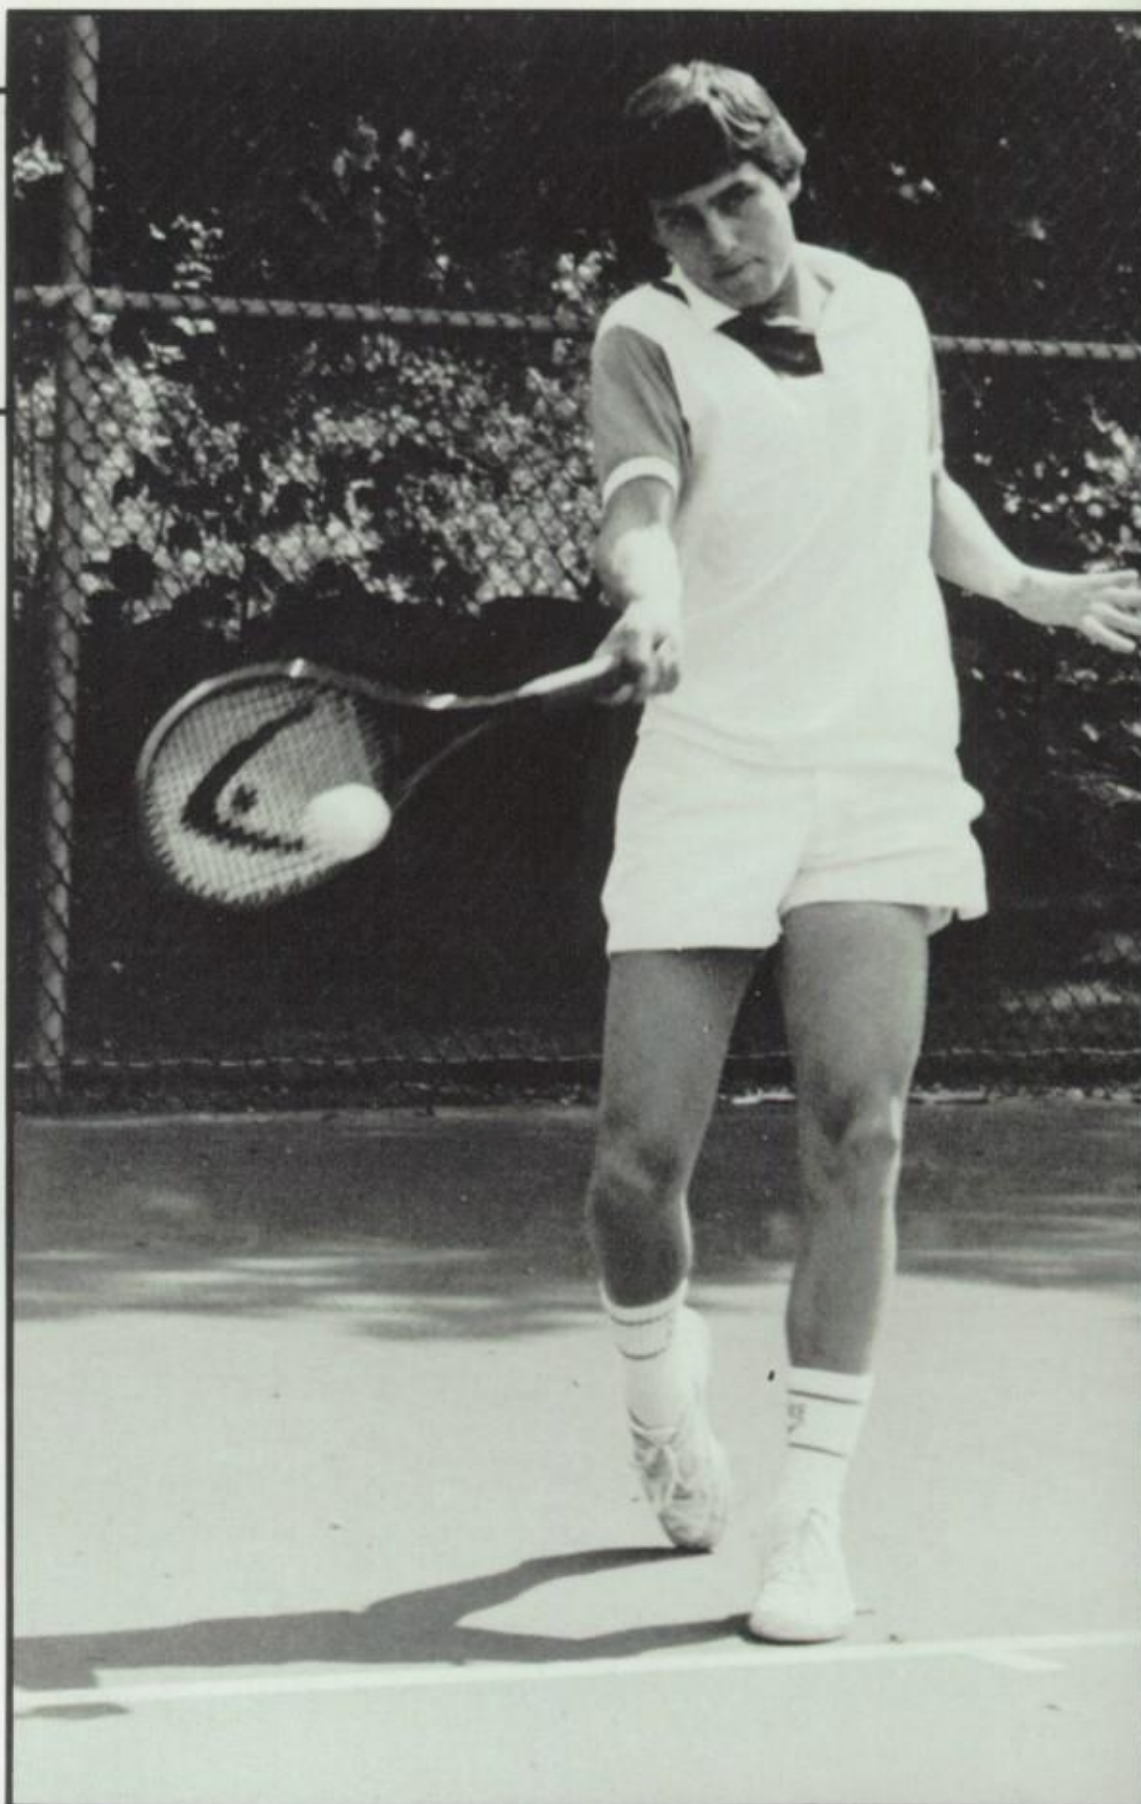

Sizing up the opposition, Ted York delivers a forehand to his opponent. A member of last year's class M Championship duo, Ted shows his stuff solo.

Serving Up Success

The 1987 tennis team lived up to expectations set by coach George Green and the Cadets. Under the leadership of senior co-captains Gerry Albrikes and Stan Phelps, the Cadets completed their season with an impressive 7-2 overall record. Both of their losses were close contests, coming against Masuk and ACC rival Fairfield Prep.

The top seeds leading the team, along with Albrikes and Phelps, were Ted York and Liz Barker. Rounding out the top eight players were doubles pairs John Chaffee, Neal Newhouse, Mark King, and Daryle DePalma.

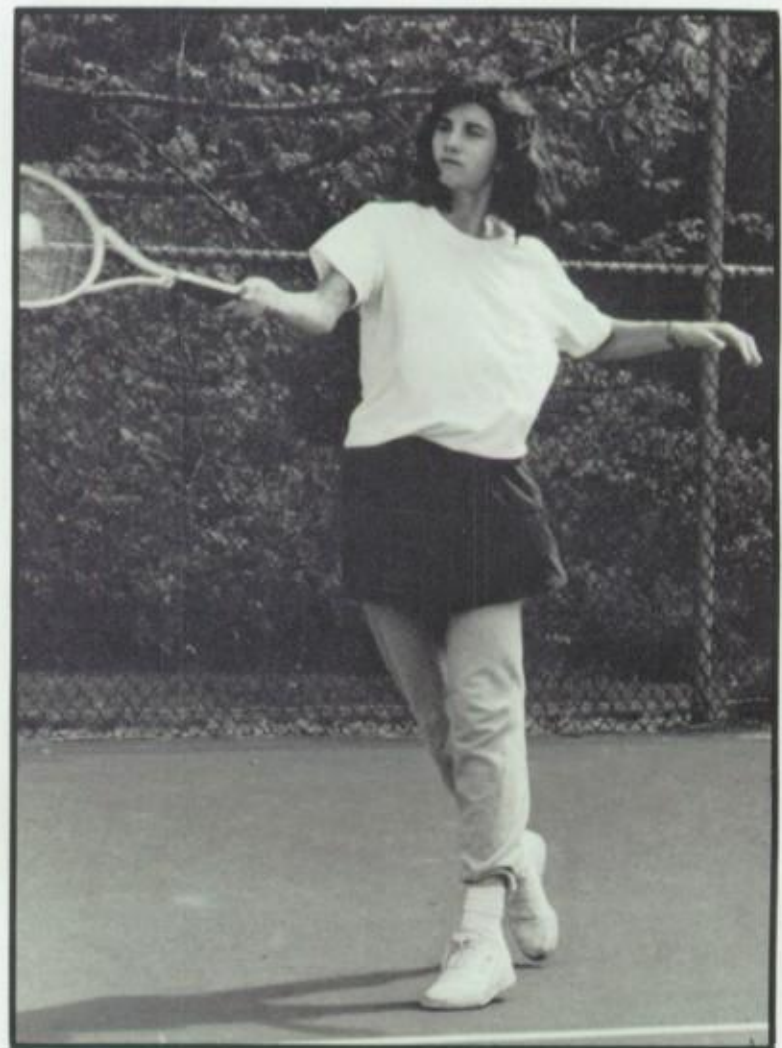

This combination of seniors and underclassmen made it possible for the Cadets to win their second consecutive class

M title. Albrikes and Barker captured the men's and women's singles titles, respectively. The doubles pair of Phelps and York swept through states and defended their title. Sophomore Melissa Lucke also qualified for post-season play and performed well.

Mr. Green feels that despite the fact that they have lost their number one seed, he can rely upon the talents of York and Barker. With the return of six lettermen and a few promising underclassmen, the Cadets have an excellent shot at once again competing for the state championship. Mr. Green and the team look forward to defending the titles they've been accustomed to in previous years.

Warming up for a big match, Liz Barker hits a forehand over the net with apparent ease.

Teeing Off

The 1987 golf season proved to be a challenging one. After ten years, Mr. Collins resigned his position as head coach. Mr. Patterson took over in an enthusiastic manner. He commented, "I enjoyed my first year although sometimes I was frustrated with our failure to consistently show how good this team really is." However, with a tough league schedule and many challenging non-league opponents, players were content with an 8-11 record.

Seniors Jerry Liptak, Steve McDonald, and Wayne Anglace were a great asset to the team. Coach Patterson has high hopes with three returning lettermen: Anthony Grabiak, Jehan Bonin, and Peter Mumola. He also looks to the contributions of Rui Perez and newcomer Michael Crawford.

The boys closed the season solidly, winning three of the last four matches, losing only to powerhouse Shelton High. In the ACC league tournament, the boys finished a disappointing sixth place. A long season of playing much larger schools finally began to pay off in the class S tournament. Led by Charlie Mallico and Liptak, the team reached its potential by finishing in eighth place. "Our finish in the tournament showed we can compete with any team our own size in the state," commented Coach Patterson. Looking ahead to next year, he added, "With three returning lettermen and some quality newcomers, we look to place very well in both the league standings and state championships."

Right On Track

Coming off last year's 13-2 mark, the boys track and field team knew this year's road to success would be a difficult one. The team moved up in the ranks from class M to class L and lost eleven varsity members due to graduation.

The Cadets opened the season with back to back losses to Northwest Catholic and Notre Dame of West Haven, the eventual ACC champions.

St. Joseph then faced local rivals Harding and Bunnell. Despite first place finishes by co-captains Tim Phillis in the 100m and 400m, and Al DiLeonardo in the pole vault, the Cadets could only manage a split victory over Harding.

With a record of 1-3, St. Joseph's travelled to Brookfield High School for the Dan O'Grady Relays. The relay team, consisting of Tim Phillis, Carlos Gomes, Alex Katrechko and Jim Robinson, took first place in the 4 x 100m and the team of Phillis, Robinson, Matt Frattaroli and Dave Verespy also won the 4 x 400m. Silver medals were awarded to the javelin trio of Frattaroli, Dennis Pavone, and Dave LoGalbo, the only Cadets who brought home individual awards.

The tracksters then travelled to Middletown to face ACC opponents Xavier and St. Thomas Aquinas. Phillis won the 100m and the 400m events, while Mike Sewell and Matt Sember each placed second in the distance events. Their efforts gave St. Joseph another split victory, and their mark stood at 2-4.

The next two weeks, the Cadets were home. They posted wins over Bassick, Joel Barlow, and East Catholic, while losing one meet to St. Bernard's. This brought the team's record to an even 5-5.

In their last regular season meet of the year, the team faced two league rivals, Fairfield Prep and South Catholic. First place honors went to juniors Erik Eggers in the throwing events, Jay Redwanz in the hurdles, and senior Ed Greene in the distance events. The Cadets lost a close meet to Prep, but defeated South Catholic to end the year at .500.

At the ACC Championships, Frattaroli threw the javelin 173 feet to garner 1st team all-ACC honors.

The team sent nine athletes to the class L championships in Bethel, four of which were underclassmen. Frattaroli went on to the state opens and captured 8th place. This gives the Cadets a good amount of returning lettermen for the '88 track season. They hope to improve on their 6-4 mark.

Perfect Season

Over the past few seasons, the St. Joseph volleyball team has established itself as a team not to be taken lightly, and 1987 proved to be no different. The Cadettes finished their year with a record of 20-1 and a number two ranking in the state. Coach George Green relied on tri-captains Keirsten Dalton, Lori Filia, and Dana Luzietti, and other starters Edurne Egurbide, Lisa Nisbet, and Andrea Richetelli. He also had strong support in his four juniors, Pam Austin, Kim Filia, Melissa Lucke, and Robin Richetelli.

The Cadettes chalked up eight wins to begin the season, including a victory over state powerhouse Foran High. The Cadettes fired off nine more wins to end their regular season play with a record of 18-0. All six seniors earned post-season honors. Dalton, Egurbide, and Filia were voted to the All-ACC first team. Luzietti, Nisbet, and Richetelli earned second team honors. "The girls are a very aggressive group. They generally worked real well together and managed to do what ever had to be done to win," Coach Green reflected.

With high hopes and a number one seeding, the team entered the Class M State Tournament. After easily defeating Middletown, they faced Guilford High. The Cadettes marked another 3-0 win and advanced to the semi-finals. They then squared off against Platt of Meriden, ranked number one in the state and seeded fourth in the tournament. This proved to be a disappointing match, as Platt defeated the Cadettes 3-0.

Despite their tournament loss, the volleyball team had one of its most successful seasons. They finished ACC play undefeated, as did the junior varsity team. This was the third time in five years that the varsity team completed their season with an untarnished record, but only the first time both teams managed to do so. Coach Green and the underclassmen can obviously look forward to many more successful seasons in the future, following the precedent teams such as the 1987 St. Joseph volleyball team have established.

Preparing to spike the ball, Lisa Nisbet winds up to deliver a devastating blow. Lisa was a consistent performer for the Cadettes.

Practicing her form, Lori Filia prepares to receive an incoming spike. Lori's talent helped contribute to the team's success.

SEASON RECORD 20-1

*After three seasons, the Cadets have established a competitive pro-

Kickin' In

In only its third year of varsity competition, the St. Joseph soccer team continued to make great strides, posting a 10-7 record for 1987. A winning record was never guaranteed, as the season began with the task of replacing an entire defensive unit lost to graduation. "The key to our success this season depends on how quickly our young defense matures," predicted Coach Dennis Danko early in the year. The proficiency of the offense was never in doubt, as demonstrated by a season opening 12-0 victory over Notre Dame of Fairfield.

The early season was filled with various ups and downs. In its second game, St. Joe's lost a heartbreaking decision to rival Fairfield Prep at home on a goal late in the game. This would be the last time the Cadets would lose at their newly sodded field, finishing with an impressive 7-1 home record. Perhaps the most significant victory of the season occurred in the third game against perennial league power Xavier, in what many spectators described as "the most exciting game I've ever seen." After leading most of the game, an inexperienced defense yielded two late goals. Yet, with under two minutes remaining, co-captain Doug Morabito scored to tie the game. In the second overtime Morabito scored again to seal the victory and hand the Falcons their only league defeat in over three years. The thrill of victory would not last long though as the team dropped a 4-3 decision to the eventual Class L State Champion, Bethel, on a penalty kick late in the game.

At times St. Joe's

played impressively, defeating rivals East Catholic and St. Thomas Aquinas. The Cadets also handed St. Bernards a 5-2 loss with only ten players after losing a player to a red card early in the game. With almost a thousand fans looking on, the squad lost its second 3-2 decision to Prep, ending all chances for a league title. In addition, an unfortunate draw in the state tournament saw the Cadets face state power Avon in the first round. St. Joes played well, missing several early scoring chances in a game that remained scoreless well into the second half. Avon proved too formidable however, winning 4-2 and continuing on to win the Class M State Championship.

Individually, several Cadets had banner years. Geoff McCoy set a new school scoring record with 28 goals. Doug Morabito added 23 goals and also set a record with 22 assists. For their efforts both McCoy and Morabito were named to the all-ACC first team and received All-State Honorable Mention honors. Defensively, Sophomore Len Capozzi was selected All-ACC second team, while senior co-captain Any Morabito set a new school record at goal with 6 Shutouts.

Reflecting on the season, Coach Danko commented, "This year, our young team gained valuable experience, playing the state's best and giving them all they could handle. Next year, the sky's the limit." With the return of junior scoring leaders Morabito and McCoy, as well as players from JV, coach Ray Patterson's successful 6-4-2 team, the future of St. Joseph soccer seems very bright.

Aggressively attacking the ball, forward Dave Ondek attempts to dribble around a defender. Dave was one of the few sophomores to see varsity action.

Tri-Captain Joe Ovchar takes a moment to mentally prepare himself for a varsity game. Joe not only was a good player but provided leadership that was a benefit to the team.

Forward Doug Morabito takes a shot on goal. Doug was a vital member of the offense with 23 goals and 22 assists.

Although the Cadettes did not finish with a winning record, they ended their season...

Making Waves

When a sports team undergoes such changes as increased practice time, a new coach, and a step up in class size, chances for a winning record become quite slim. Coming off last season's 8-5 record, the girl's swim team was confronted with a difficult task. Donna Butterworth, Jill Collett, and Michelle Muscolino were elected as tri-captains to lead the team after the loss of six seniors to graduation in 1987.

Miss Wilcox, the new St. Joseph's gym teacher, joined the coaching staff and was a major factor in the decision to increase the girl's practice time. In early August, a group of about ten swimmers began Nautilus weight training three times a week. When regular practice began, the team found itself at the pool from 8-10:00 p.m. nightly, which, along with one hour of weight lifting, ultimately meant dedicating three hours a day to swimming. Miss Wilcox commented, "Swimmers must be very disciplined and begin their homework immediately after school so they can get it all done... I myself am very tired when I get home."

At least two experienced and talented swimmers represented each class as the girls began their season in late September against Newtown High School. The team swam well, demonstrating its strength and depth, and won by a very comfortable margin, 91-7. "The freshmen surprised us with their enthusiasm and worked very hard during practices even though they knew their chances of swimming were minimal," commented assistant coach Soligon.

Long, late practices and a tough schedule quickly caught up with the girls as they lost five successive meets, all within a few points. The team finished up the regular season with a 3-8 record and eight qualified swimmers for the state trials. For seniors Butterworth and Collett, juniors Amy Ripke and Denise Sgro, sophomores Nicole Levesque, Judy Skoronski, and Amy Tether, this was their second year as state qualifiers.

"It was a fun season and even though the change in classes hurt our record, we still had a lot of spirit," reflected Levesque.

Looking ahead to next year's season, coach Butterworth predicts, "The team will remain strong because we are not losing a great deal of power with the graduating seniors and most other teams are. We will remain strong and are looking forward to a successful season in 1988."

Cheering along with teammates, Jill Collett anticipates the turnout of the meet. As a tri-captain, Jill helps to increase the enthusiasm of the team.

Coming up for air during the breast stroke, Donna Butterworth nears the finish line. As one of the tri-captains, Donna was a strong asset to the Cadettes.

HOG WILD

After two mediocre seasons, the St. Joseph football team wanted to restore the winning tradition for which it was known, a tradition that was filled with years of glory and pride. This was the year for it to happen.

The Hogs began their season home against North Haven. Behind the running of halfback Mark Roderick and an intense Cadet defense, St. Joseph shut out the Indians for a 27-0 win.

The following week the team faced Bethel, a highly ranked WCC powerhouse. Down at the half 17-14, the Cadets came out of the locker room fired up and behind the leadership of Mickey Tomey, came back to defeat Bethel 35-17.

The next game the Hogs faced arch-rival Fairfield Prep. St. Joseph struggled throughout the game and could not gain the lead as they fell 25-14.

Coming off the tough loss against Prep, the Cadets faced top ranked Notre Dame of West Haven. St. Joseph dominated the game. The offense was lead by Roderick as he scored three touchdowns, with excellent blocking from the offensive line. Defensively, the Cadets shut down the Green Knight offense and limited them to 87 total yards en route to an 18-0 ACC win.

The following week, St. Joseph visited Middletown to face Xavier. Once again, the defense rose to the occasion and Roderick scored two touchdowns as the Cadets defeated the Falcons 12-6.

The Cadets then faced St. Bernard in Uncasville. St. Joseph overpowered the Saints as Tomey had an outstanding passing game. Fullback John Huber scored two touchdowns and the Cadets crushed St. Bernard 35-7.

Notre Dame of Fairfield then came to Dalling Field, only to be defeated 32-12. Tomey picked apart the Lancer secondary and Brian Smith scored three touchdowns.

At this point, St. Joseph was 3-1 in the ACC, 6-1 overall and ranked 4th in the state. The Cadets had to face a strong East Catholic team which was undefeated and ranked number one in the state. The winner would be the ACC champion and advance to the states. The defense had to face East Catholic's powerful offense. Tremendous effort came up short as the Cadets lost 8-6.

After East Catholic, St. Joseph faced Pilgrim High of Rhode Island. In the senior's last home game, the Cadets won 23-6.

The Thanksgiving meeting between St. Joseph and Central Catholic was the last game for the Cadets. Down 7-0 at the half, the Hogs capitalized on Cavalier mistakes, finally winning 17-7.

Taking a breather, Jeff Tuccio rests on the sideline for a series of downs. Playing offense and defense allows Jeff only an occasional break from the action.

“The kids are great. They’ve brought back the enthusiasm which seemed to be lacking over the past few years. The winning tradition has once again returned to St. Josephs”-Christy Hayes”

The alarm clock rings. Joe LoPresti reaches to shut it off and the pain shoots through his body. He wonders to himself, “Why am I putting myself through this?” Then he remembers — football. This is a common occurrence which any football player may experience during the course of the year. From triples in August to steady weight lifting to games during the season, players were required to put in 100% effort.

With an outstanding 8-2 record, the team's dedication clearly paid off.

Practice sessions were held daily after school.

Whether it was watching films or running practice plays, the team remained at school, usually until 6:00. Weight training was another vital part in the improvement process.

Lifting was mandatory during the off-season. To build up the players' strength and stamina, the team lifted every other day.

All 17 seniors upheld tradition and took turns every week having a special dinner on Friday nights. These dinners were important because they gave the guys a chance to relax, eat, and enjoy the time together before Saturday's game.

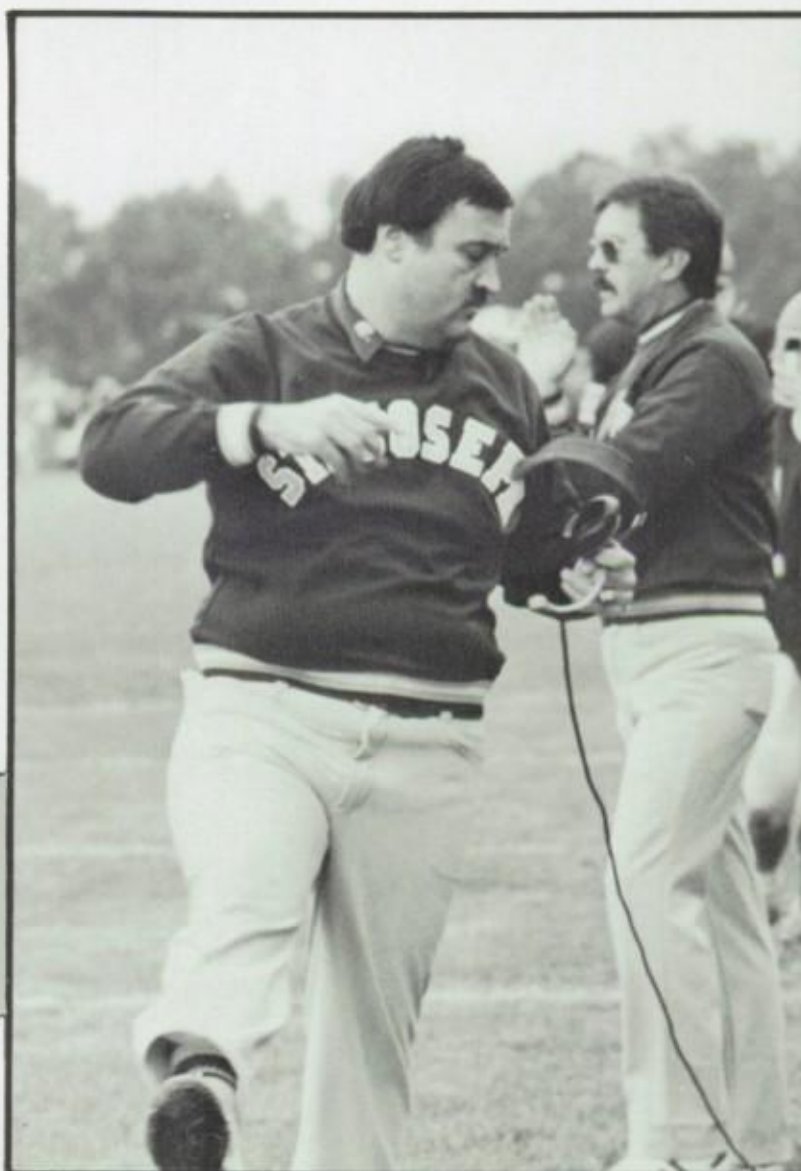

As the season came to a close, a number of players received awards from various newspapers and the coaches themselves. At the Thanksgiving Mass held the night before the last game, individuals, the team, and the seniors were all recognized. Individuals receiving awards were: Mickey Tomey — M.V.P., John Campbell — Team Spirit, Joe Ayles and Joe Weber — Co-Linemen, and Kyle Carraro — Best Freshman. Among the players selected to various newspaper teams were: Ayles, Matt Frattaroli, Trevor Medvecky, Mark Roderick, Tomey, and Jeff Tuccio. The Hartford Courant selected Ayles, Tomey, Tuccio, Brian Smith, and Weber to their team. The

New Haven Register chose Tomey and Tuccio. Ayles, Roderick, Tomey, Tuccio, and Weber earned all-ACC honors. Tomey was also selected player of the year in the ACC and in the Bridgeport Post class AA offense.

From the achievements of the seniors to the hard work put in by the freshmen, football proves to be a painful but rewarding experience. This year, the team set goals for itself. Looking back, most players would agree — without the extra effort put in year round, many of these goals may never have been reached.

In frustration, Coach Hayes kicks his foot in the air after a Cadet fumble. Assistant Coach Mayo in the background offers encouragement to the defense.

Unstoppable Spirit!

Last June, following final exams, a group of over fifty girls tried out for the 1987-88 Varsity and Junior Varsity Cheerleading squads. Twenty-two spaces were available. In addition to skill, the selection was based upon appearance, poise, and voice.

In early August, the cheerleading moderator, Sister Catherine Fanning, sent out letters of notification to the members of the Varsity Squad. Eleven of the twelve girls who made it were seniors.

Over the summer, the girls spent four days at the University of Connecticut attending a camp sponsored by the International Cheerleading Foundation. During this time, they were taught numerous cheers and chants. They also learned new mounts, stunts, and dances which they later incorporated into their routines. The camp provided the girls with innovative ideas about how to raise school spirit. This experience also gave the girls a chance to get to know one another and learn how to work together. According to Lisa Laurella, "Camp was a lot of fun. During the day we worked hard gathering new cheer ideas. At night we had the chance to talk and hang out."

After weeks of practice, the cheerleaders were prepared with new cheers, uniforms, and megaphones for the opening game. During the games, they worked with enthusiastic fans to cheer on the players. Throughout the season, the girls attempted to raise team spirit, by decorating lockers and cars, making banners, and preparing special cheers before the important games. During this time, the squad also developed a sense of unity and spirit amongst themselves by sharing either a breakfast or dinner together before each game.

Amy Rooney stated that, "They allow us to get together before the games as a team. It gives us a chance to know each other better and gives us an opportunity to go over the cheers and mounts."

After Thanksgiving, the varsity cheerleaders continued to practice in preparation for the upcoming basketball season. In addition to learning new cheers, a dance routine, part of which they learned at camp, was perfected. This fast-paced routine is an addition to the usual cheers and mounts.

In December, the Junior varsity squad was named. This entirely new squad consisted of ten girls who will cheer for the varsity girls basketball and junior varsity boys basketball teams. Colleen Tremblay stated, "I was happy to make the squad because I'm hoping to make varsity next year. Being chosen for J.V. was an honor in itself."

The unstoppable spirit of St. Joes is perhaps best summarized in the words of varsity cheerleader Lisbeth Pifko. "I just love St. Joes. Why would you want to go to school anywhere else?"

The cheerleaders spend many hours a week attempting to perfect their mounts. Here, their hard work pays off as they perform one of their more difficult pyramids.

Cheering with enthusiasm, the varsity squad demonstrates the type of spirit that cheerleaders are noted for. The winning team they supported helped contribute to their success.

Mental involvement in a meet is essential for peak performance. This look of determination is seen in the faces of Bruce Botti and Dave Soligon after crossing the finish line.

Making Strides

With only two returning lettermen, co-captains Matt Sember and Dave Soligon, the St. Joseph cross country team finished a tough season at 4-6.

The Cadets ran into hard luck from the beginning when they dropped their first ACC meet to defending champs, Xavier. Two days later, the inexperienced team went to the Windham Invitational. Soligon and Sember took top 30 honors.

The following week the squad traveled to Fairfield Prep and were handed their second loss. Sember took 4th to prevent a Prep shut out. The rough road continued into the next week at the Bethel Invitational. Soligon and Sember placed 44th and 45th individually as the team took 13th of 17 teams, beating local rivals Trumbull High and Masuk.

East Catholic visited the campus three days later and held off SJ to win by a small margin, despite Soligon and Sember's 3rd and 4th place finishes. Rich Selteneich placed 7th as the Cadets dropped to 0-3.

Three weeks into the season, the Cadets earned their first victory. West Haven showed up unexpectedly at a tri-meet with St. Bernard and Notre Dame. Sember and Soligon took 15th and 16th respectively, after catching four N.D. runners cutting the course, who as a result were disqualified.

The harriers packed their lunches again as they headed into the Wickham Invitational. The team placed in the top 10 as Soligon and Sember brought home top 25 trophies. On an up note, the runners won against Bassick, Masuk, and Bunnell with a loss to Foran to finish their regular season at 4-6, as they went into the A.C.C. Meet and Class M states. The Cadets didn't fare too well at the A.C.C. meet. Despite the fact that Soligon was unable to participate, the team did finish 6th in the Class M Meet sparked by Sember's 23rd place performance.

Teammates James Tobin and Chris Mummola are neck and neck through the last leg of the race. Both racers finished in respectable positions, helping to lift the team to victory.

Taking time out in the shade, the cross country team relaxes before a strenuous run. In John Maloney's case, the free time can also be used as an opportunity to catch up on some lost sleep.

With high expectations for the 1987 season, the girls track team attained many of their goals and continued . . .

SPRINTING TO VICTORY

For the past few years, the girl's track and field team has been labeled as a "young, strong but unexperienced team." Maturity and experience replaced the previous newness and unawareness in 1987 as the girls saw their final record stand at 8-4.

The runners lost their season opener against Northwest Catholic by one point. St. Joe's then traveled to Brookfield for the Dan O'Grady Relays. With exceptional performances by most of the runners, the girls placed second in their division.

The team entered a successful period, defeating St. Thomas, Mercy, St. Mary's, South Catholic and Joel Barlow, losing only to a tough non-league rival, Hillhouse.

St. Joe's split their meet against St. Bernard's and East Catholic, defeating the latter 93-15. Although Theresa Mencil placed first in the 300 and 100 hurdles, St. Joe's was handed a 40-84 loss to St. Bernard's. Mary Gallagher took first in the 3200. Additional exceptional performances were provided by Mary DiJulia, Tricia Cody, Vicki Hawkins, Kari Koritko, and Thea Robinson.

The team rallied its best exhibition at the

A.C.C. Championships in Middletown. With DiJulia on the sidelines with an injured knee, disappointment arose. The girls desire for excellence only grew stronger as they managed to break three school records. Cody set the 100m record with a 12.7, while Hawkins ran a swift 61.7, erasing the old 400m record and earning second team honors. The 1600m relay, run by Hawkins, Koritko, Mencil, and Sue Palubniak also achieved second team honors with a time of 4:23. The team finished an impressive third overall.

Seven St. Joe's runners traveled to Ledyard to participate in the class M states. Cody, Hawkins, Mencil and the 1600m relay team qualified for the State Opens. The State Open was tough, as anticipated, but determination earned Hawkins 17th place, while the relay team placed 21st, officially ending the season.

Although the loss of seniors Mencil, Allison Pifko, Cheryl Tristine, and Patti Leone will affect the team, a significant strength among the runners remains. Maureen Marty, Lisa Laurella, and Eileen Gannon are among the many runners capable of outstanding skill and talent for 1988.

Preparing for practice, Jen Divine, Mary Gallagher, and Mary DiJulia warm up. Proper stretching is a vital part of the work out; it loosens the runners both physically and mentally.

In perfect hurdling form, Maureen Harty breaks ahead of her opponents with the finish line in sight.

Staying Afloat

Entering the 1988 season, the boy's swim team knew that to duplicate its past success would prove to be a monumental task. Said assistant coach Pete Soligon, "After narrowly missing the state championship twice in the last three years, these seniors are hoping for another chance. Unfortunately we do not have the firepower which we've had in the past."

The team, depleted by difficulties ranging from illness and injury to a lack of sufficient practice time, however, managed to stay above water, completing a relatively successful 5-7 campaign. "We can't emphasize the dual-meet record, for teams such as Prep have too much depth for our small squad," noted first year head coach Marge Wilcox. Despite an unfortunate accident at the beginning of the season, Coach Wilcox recovered and managed to push the boys to some impressive times and placings.

The season began on a strong note, as the Cadets splashed to an easy 106-64 win over Jonathon Law. Tri-captains David Soligon and Todd Doherty paced a quartet of triple-winners, joined by Neal Newhouse and Pete Mumola. However, St. Joseph dropped its next two to much stronger squads.

though, especially coming in front of friends and families. The friendly confines of Hillcrest proved an advantage as the Cadets were undefeated at home, despite being winless on the road.

Throughout the season, marked improvement was noted in the performances of Soligon, Doherty, Newhouse, and sophomore Chris Petitti, who each qualified for the Class M championships in multiple events. Tri-captain Mike Soligon and fellow seniors Pete Mumola, Kevin Koller, and Jeffrey Coster also contributed in the freestyle events, while juniors Brian Beloin, Jim Toth, and Jehan Bonin, and sophomores Kurt Haas and Steve Coles concentrated on the off-stroke events.

"The highlight of our season was probably the win over Saint Bernards," commented Mike Soligon. "We had to take first and third place in the final relay, and the crowd really encouraged us."

Despite the dual-meet record, the team finished a respectable fourth in the ACC, and sixth in Class M. Neal Newhouse earned accolades for shattering both school diving records, and Dave Soligon, Todd Doherty, and Chris Petitti were named to the All-ACC team.

Thunders On

Under the leadership of their new coach, Miss Mary Cavell, the 1987 girls Cross Country Team had a successful building season. Although their record was 4-6, the team placed well in state and ACC competitions and all returning members improved their previous times a great deal.

"Miss Cavell was unlike any other coach, she was tougher than the team was used to and emphasized lots of discipline," commented Marta Marignani. Under her leadership, the team trained hard and all the girls felt they developed beyond what they thought was possible.

The team had the added inspiration of a special underclass member,

Marie Spenser. Born with Cerebral Palsy, she was a competing member throughout the season. Her determination and effort served as an example for the whole team to follow.

The team placed fifth at the ACC's and sixth out of sixteen teams at the state MM Championship. Captain Mary Gallagher and Eileen Gannon were awarded first and second all ACC honors, respectively.

Many returning members, most of them well-trained Freshmen, will contribute to a team much improved and on its way for next year. "We hope to be pretty strong and well-conditioned next year," commented Miss Cavell.

Sprinting the first three hundred meters, the Saint Joseph runners fly to the front of the pack. Enjoying an early lead are Mary Gallagher, Eileen Gannon, and Maureen Harty.

Breaking Records

The St. Joseph boys basketball team had very high expectations coming into the 1987 season. They had every right to feel this way. They had captured two consecutive state championships and returned four starters from a team that went 27-1 in 1987 and 26-2 in 1986. St. Joseph would be looking to co-captains Tom Montelli and Marvin Saddler along with outstanding juniors Johnnie Jones and Carey Wilson to provide the scoring and rebounding necessary for a state title contender.

The Cadets were dealt a severe blow when they were notified that Jones and Wilson would be academically ineligible for the first eight games. "When we first heard the news, we were all shocked. But we knew we had very talented replacements to help the team along until they got back," said (Tom) Montelli. "The first thing we had to do was get in shape. All the players would have to play more because of the two players missing," commented senior honorable mention All-American Saddler. The 6'8" Saddler kept his end of the bargain. The Providence College-bound power forward averaged 24 points and 13 rebounds during the games Jones and Wilson missed. Montelli, point guard, averaged 14 points and 9 assists.

Valuable replacements Ward and Pat Petrie, Doremus Bennerman, Scott Kreitler, Brian Kelly, Doug Wilson, and Luke Gosselin all provided the team with outstanding effort every game. This helped the team to begin the season with an 8-0 record.

The Cadets opened the season with the 2nd Annual Northeast Catholic Classic. The field for the eight team tournament included top teams from New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. St. Joe's first round opponent was the quick Don Bosco Tech Team from New Jersey. The Cadets began the game slowly but got their scorching fast break into high gear to pull away with a convincing 98-57 victory.

The second round opponent was the scrappy Bishop Hendricken team from Rhode Island. They had been a surprise winner in the first round. Hendricken gave the team all it could handle before losing 88-73. The Cadets then moved into the final game against a very talented St. Francis Prep squad of New York. The Cadets again started out slowly. Their full court press finally took its toll in the second half and St. Joe's won its second consecutive Northeast Catholic Classic title. Montelli was named the (cont. on page 104)

SEASON RECORD 19-1

When asked about his team, Coach Montelli responded, "My boys really work hard. They give me 110% and more."

MVP of the tourney and Saddler and Bennerman were selected to the All-Tournament team. Head coach Vito Montelli said after the tournament "This was very important for the team. A lot of people doubted us. It gave the team confidence."

The Cadets soon after broke into the USA Today Super 25 poll. "Getting national recognition was very important to us. We finally knew that the hard work we were putting into the season was paying off," remarked Bennerman.

The Cadets continued to win games after Jones and Wilson returned. The return of these players simply helped the rich get richer. The Cadets traveled to Notre Dame of West Haven. The quintet had been looking forward to this game all season. The Green Knights had defeated the Cadets twice on their home court and hadn't lost a home game in two years. As all hoped, St. Joe's came away with a 89-67 victory.

The Cadets then traveled to East Catholic where Kreitler and Bennerman led the team to an easy 82-42 win.

Next, the Cadets faced the Xavier Falcons. Excellent foul shooting by Montelli and Kreitler helped the Cadets manage a hard-fought 86-54 victory. The Cadets continued their assault on the All Connecticut Conference. They defeated St. Bernard's, South Catholic, and Wilton to increase the longest winning streak in the state to 38 games.

The Cadets were winning their games by an average of 22 points. Much of the team's success was due to the fact that they played nine very talented players throughout every game. The USA Today poll ranked the Cadets 13th nationally. This, in addition to the exposure the team was receiving in the area, put a lot of pressure on the boys.

St. Joseph finally had its 39 game winning streak and three year span with out a home loss ended by St. Bernard's. The patient Saints managed to control the game and win 34-33.

If the team had won, it would have given coach Montelli his 400th career victory. The next night, the Cadets hosted Fairfield Prep. There were no surprises as the Cadets again utilized their quickness and ability in dismantling Prep, 73-38. The win gave Montelli his coveted 400th victory. The game also marked the final appearance the seven seniors on the team would make in the St. Joe's gym.

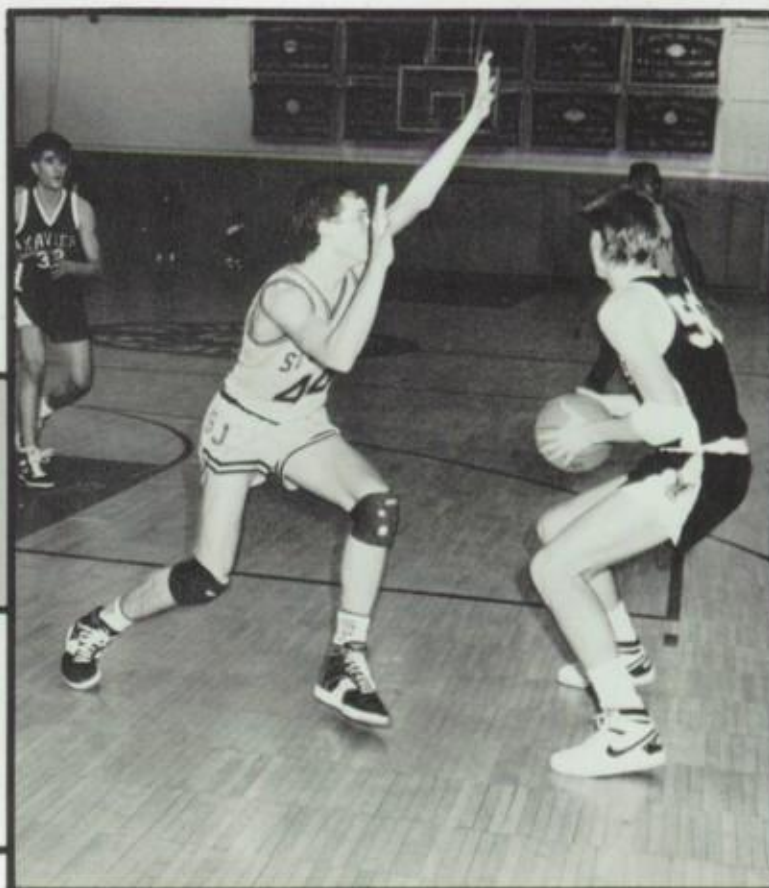

The Cadets had moved down to 20th in the USA today poll. This gave the team just enough incentive to rip Prince Tech, 108-68. The team could now concentrate on winning their third league and consecutive state championship.

During the course of the year, high school coaches and sports writers from around the country nominated 1000 high school players for the prestigious McDonald's All-America basketball game. Saddler and Montelli were nominated to make the team, an honor only 25 of the 1000 would receive. "To be nominated to the team came as a shock to me. It was a great honor. I am very proud of myself because I know not too many players get this opportunity," remarked Montelli. Added Saddler, "Twenty years from now when I look back on my high school career, I will be able to say I was nominated to one of the best All-America teams ever."

Defense is the name of the game as Tom Montelli and Ward Petrie block their opponent. Teamwork was a major key to the overwhelming success of the Cadets.

Playing tough defense Brian Kelly situates himself between his opponent and the basket. The Cadets have become known for their smart and tough defensive playing.

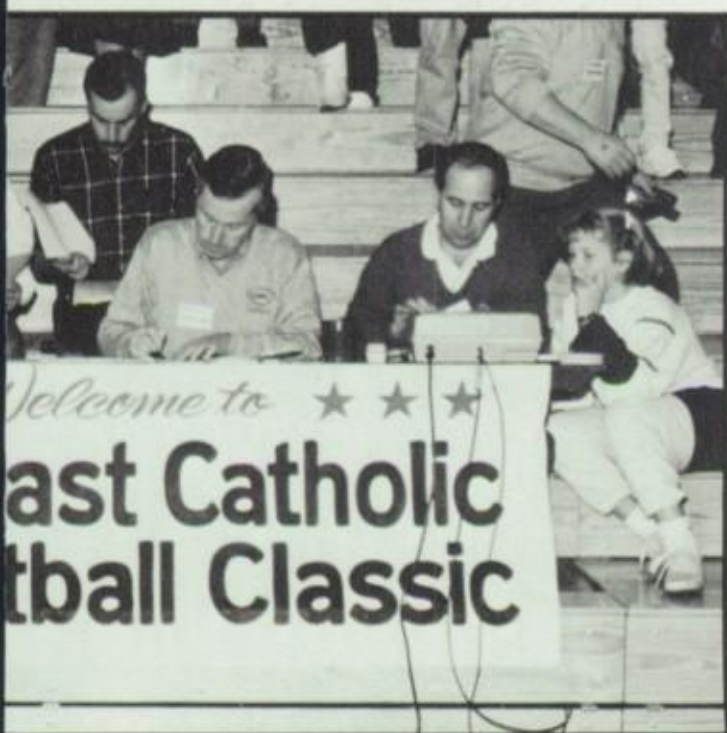

In an attempt to block a shot, senior Marvin Saddler takes to the air. Marvin led the team in blocked shots this year.

Floating past his opponents, Doremus Bennerman finger rolls for "two". Doremus, only a sophomore, specialized in the quiet "lay-up".

During the Northeast Catholic Basketball Classic, many individuals volunteered their free time to help the tournament run smoothly. The score keepers constantly compared notes during the games.

In deep concentration, Karen Luchun prepares herself mentally for the game. Karen then went on to dominate the "boards" that night.

High Hoops

The St. Joseph girls varsity basketball team dribbled their way to a successful season. Mr. John Marusa led the team for his third year as head coach.

The girls began the season at home against Wilton and went on for a seven game winning streak until they lost to Notre Dame of Fairfield in the Christmas tournament for the championship.

This years team consisted of four senior starters Dana Luzetti, Edurne Egurbide, Karen Luchen, and Lori Filia who alternated for one of the starting positions. Junior Kim Filia, Michele Pagliaro (sophomore) competed for the other open starting position. Karen Luchen said, "The team worked solid throughout the season earning recognition outside the conference, which was very important to our coach."

Awards and credits came as no surprise to the girls this year. Luzetti and Egurbide were named to First Team All ACC and Michele Pagliano was named to Second Team All ACC. Kim Filia and Pagliano were named to the ACC All-Tourney Team. Egurbide was also named KC-101 Player of the Week.

Luzetti, Luchen, Egurbide and Filia have been on the team for four years. Dana and Edurne are two of the many leading scores in the state. The other underclassmen rounding out the team are Alicia Lipnickas, Mary DiJulia, Kate Breiner, and Michele Pagliano.

The team traveled all over the state this year to compile a record of 15-5 during the regular season. Luchen summed up her feelings about the team, "We stuck together through the ups and downs of the season, and best of all, we built a sense of unity, trust and friendships that'll last forever."

A missed shot has Dana Luzetti fighting for the rebound over an opponent. Dana, a seasoned veteran, was a dominant figure all year long.

SEASON RECORD 15-5

This year Mr. Montelli became one of only 10 Connecticut Coaches to join ...

by Thomas Montelli

My father was never much of an athlete. He was the guy you saw at the end of the bench, what coaches today call a "practice player." My father—they go to practice game from the sidelines. "I was curious why coaches made certain decisions at certain times of the game. I learned a lot on the bench."

Vito Montelli was born in Bristol, Connecticut and attended Bristol High School. He played baseball and football. He graduated and went on to Arnold College in Milford, Connecticut. He tried out for the basketball team sophomore year and made it. Aware that he would not see much playing time, he accepted the head coaches' offer to coach the freshmen team. Thus, began the legacy of Vito Montelli, the coach.

After graduating from college, he went to Notre Dame High School in Bridgeport and coached their baseball team. An outstanding baseball coach, he turned down several college offers so that he could stay in the high school program. "I wanted to stay at the level where I would have an impact on the kids while they were still younger."

When Saint Joseph High School opened in 1962, my father was offered a job as a teacher and basketball coach. He taught history and typing for fifteen years before giving it up to concentrate as Athletic Director, basketball coach, and Head of Development.

Vito Montelli has built the basketball program at St. Joseph into one of the finest in the state. His teams have won four state titles in seven attempts. He recently won his 400th career game. But he'll be the first to admit the wins don't mean that much. "If you are foolish to stay in coaching for 26 years, you are bound to win your share of games."

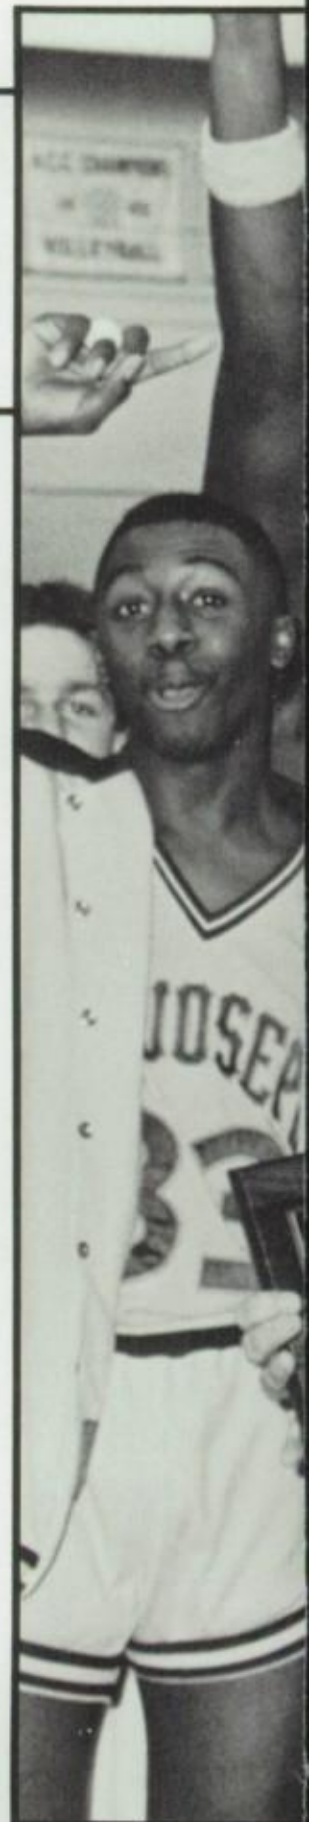

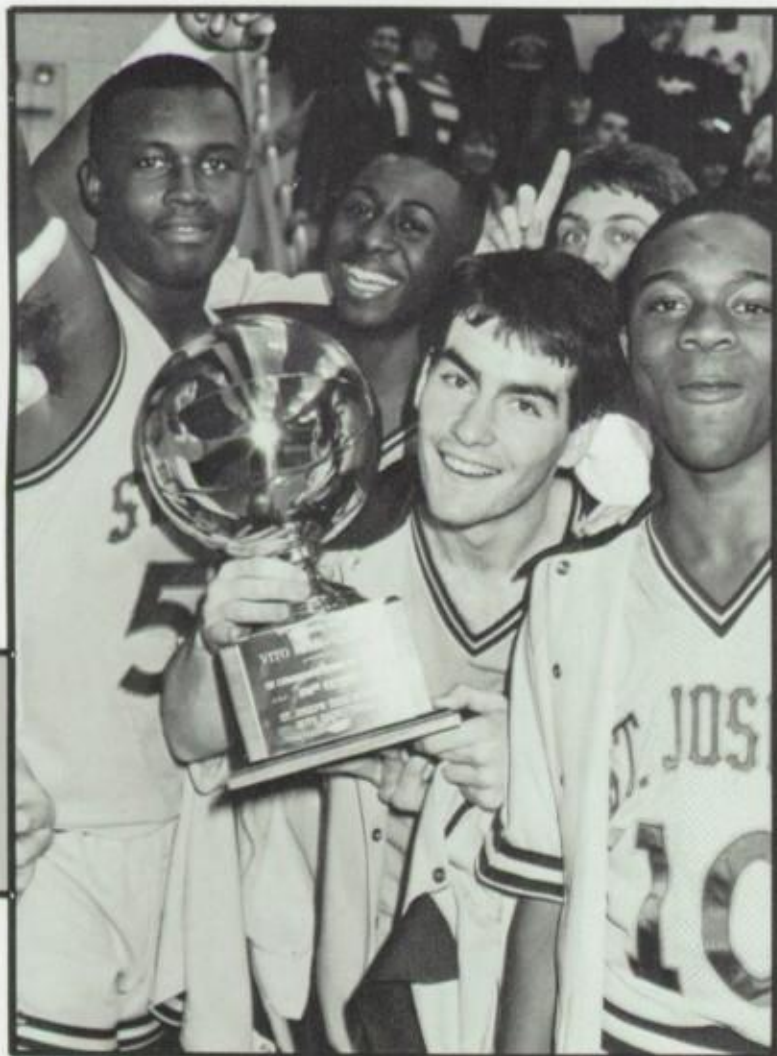

The most important thing Montelli takes pride in is the effect he has on his players. "The fact that coach Montelli cared so much was important to all of us. He made us set good examples, he made us work hard, made us study, he was like a second father to some of his players," commented former player and current assistant coach Jim Olayas.

The question I am asked over and over is "How much longer will your father stay in coaching?" My answer is "I don't know." And I don't think he does either. The original plan when I was in seventh and eighth grade was that he would stay until I graduated and then we would leave together. He always seems to shy away from the issue. When asked if he would continue on and pursue his 500th win, he shrugged and said, "I'm worried about getting my 401th!" I decided to ask him myself. I would wait until we were alone in the living room to pop the question. "Dad, when are you going to retire from coaching?"

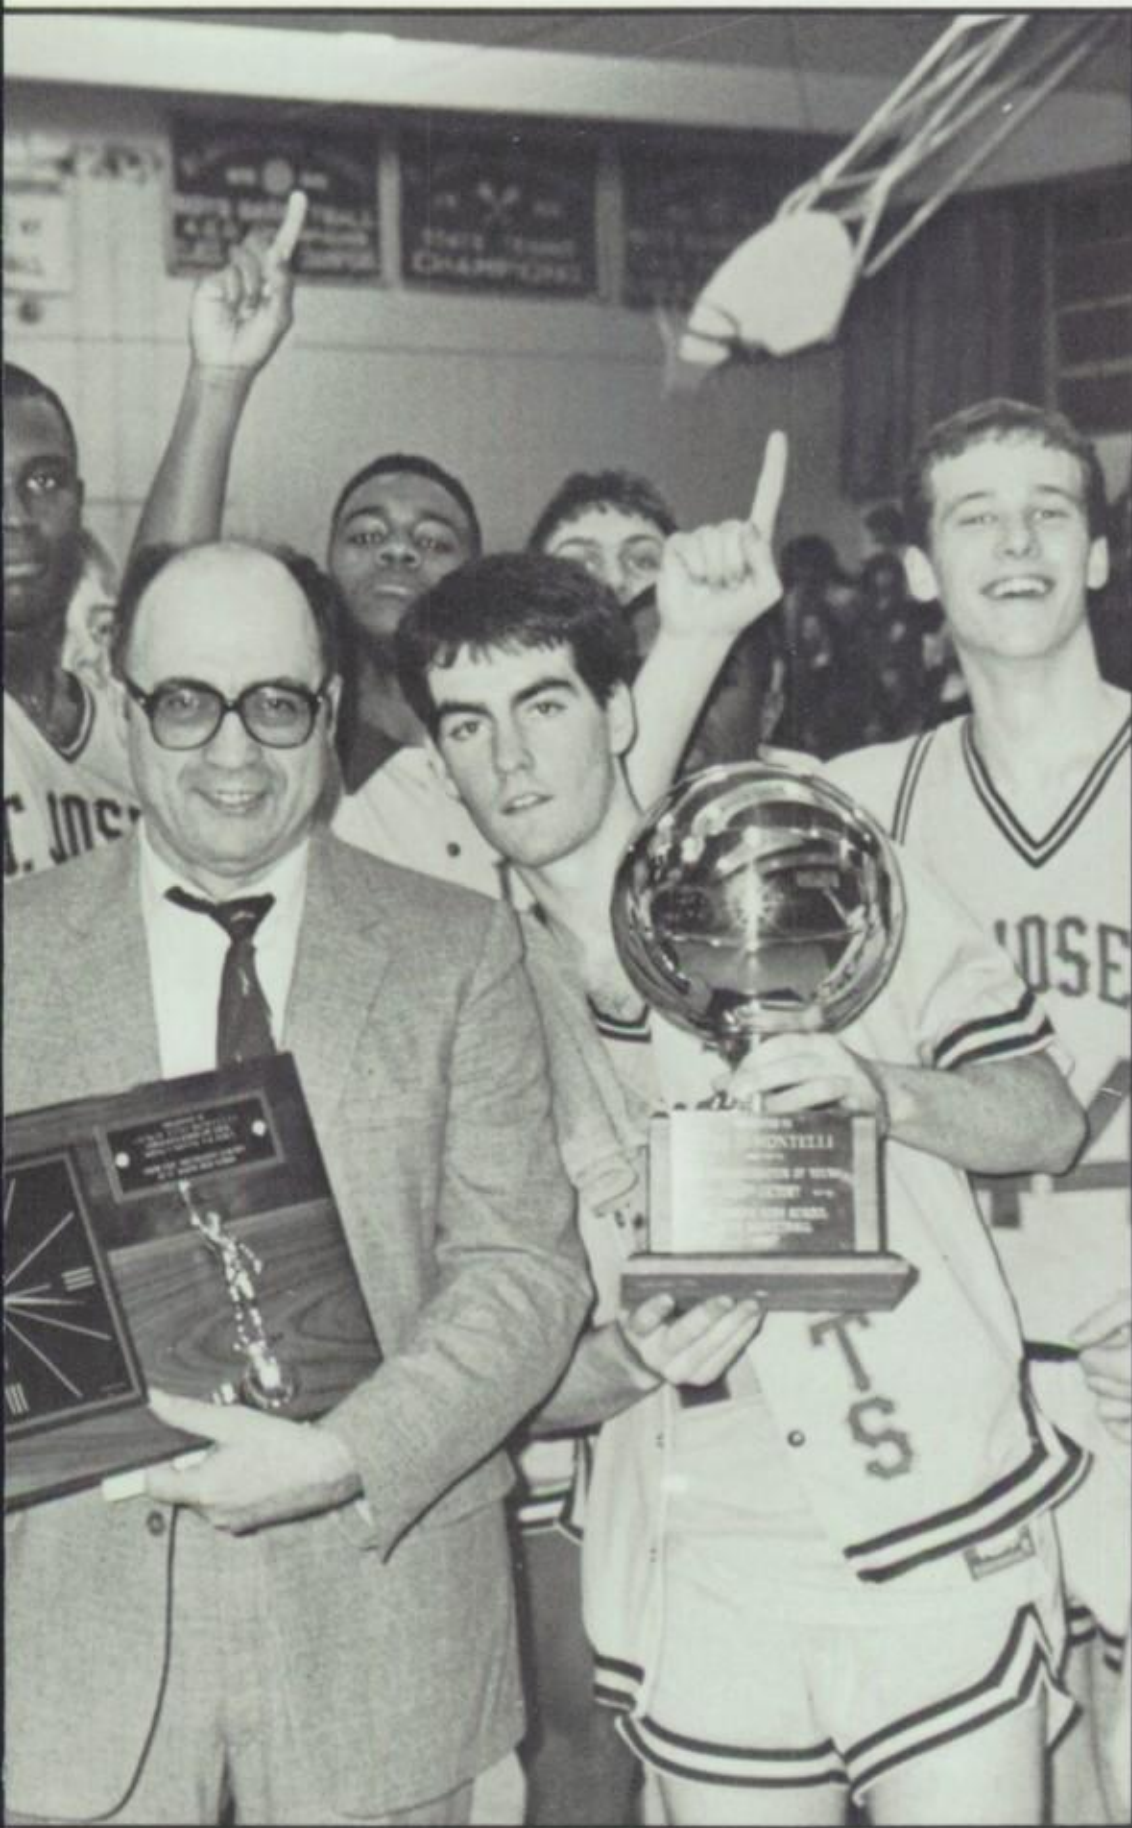

"I don't know, Tom, but I do know that the garbage is piling up and you should go empty it!"

The St. Joe's boys basketball team is more than just a team, they're a family. Tom Montelli along with team members, was glad to do his father proud.

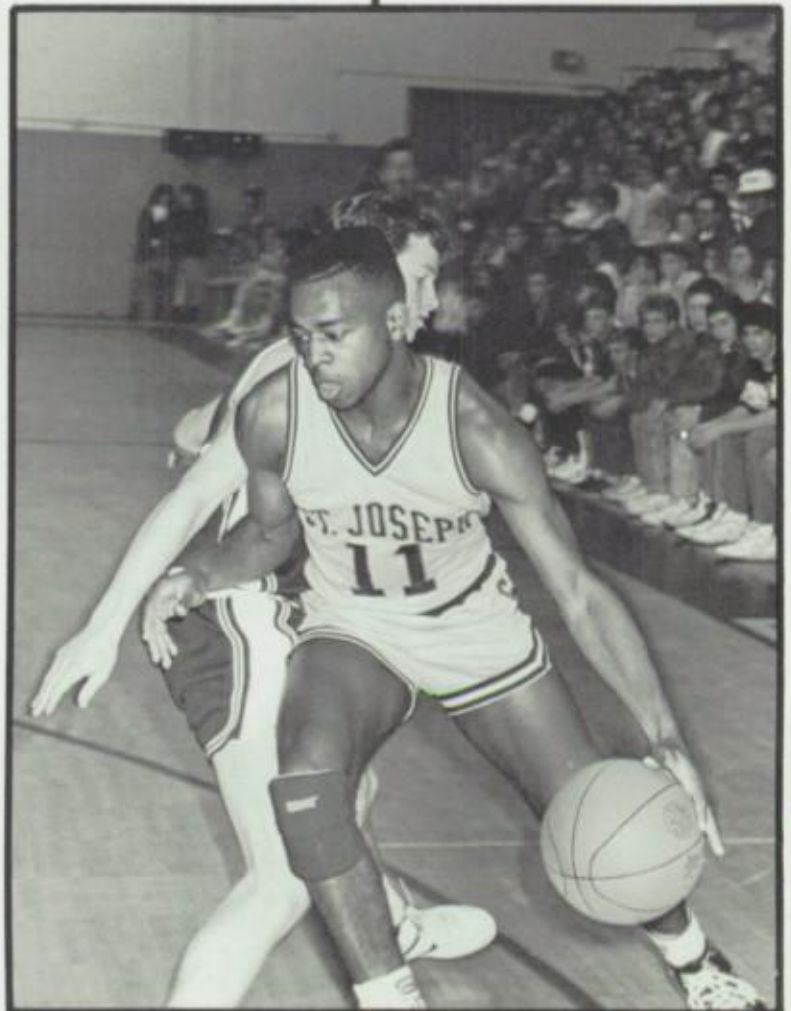

The Fairfield Prep home game was not just another win for the Cadets, but the 400th win for Coach Vito Montelli. Monsignor Sh... congratulates Mr. Montelli on this special occasion. The team members all share in this unique event.

A brilliant smile, feeds Coach Montelli's reaction to his 400th victory at St. Joe's. The trophy will always be a reminder of the hours of painstaking work that made the Cadets what they are today.

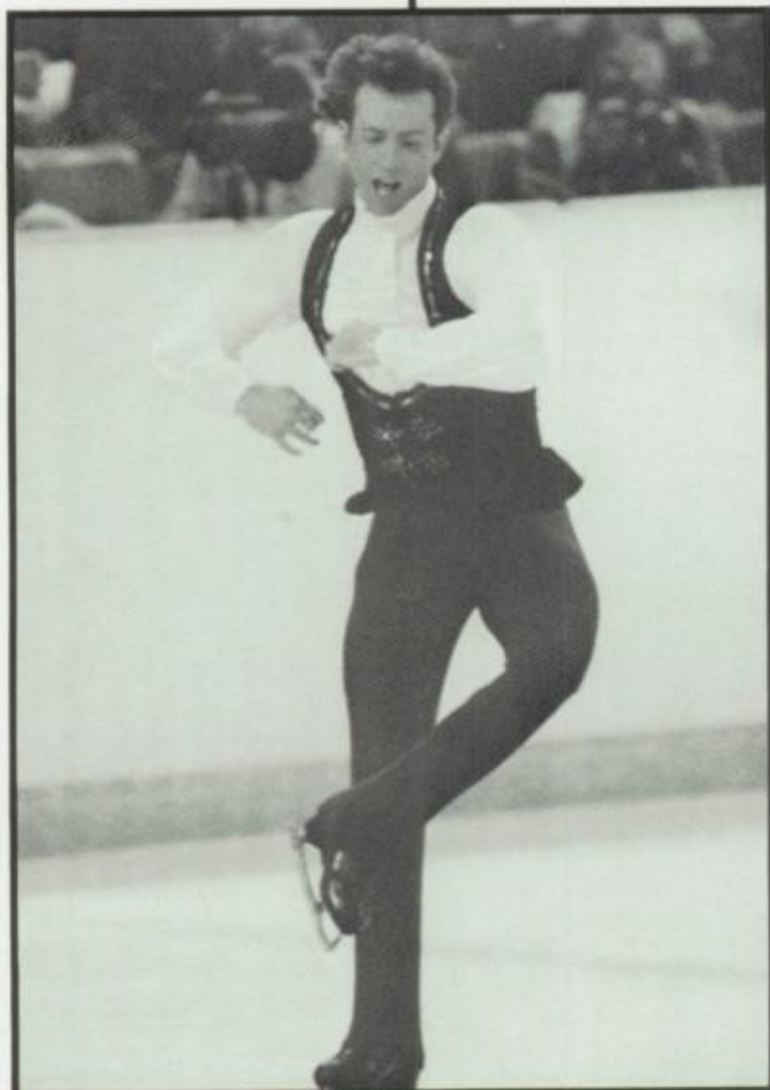

Driving towards the basket, Johnnie Jones goes in for the score. The Cadets went on to blow out Fairfield Prep by 51 points and presented Mr. Montelli with his 400th win after 26 years of coaching at Saint Joseph's.

"Time-outs" play an important part in game strategy. Coach Montelli briefs his team during one of these few, but critical breathers.

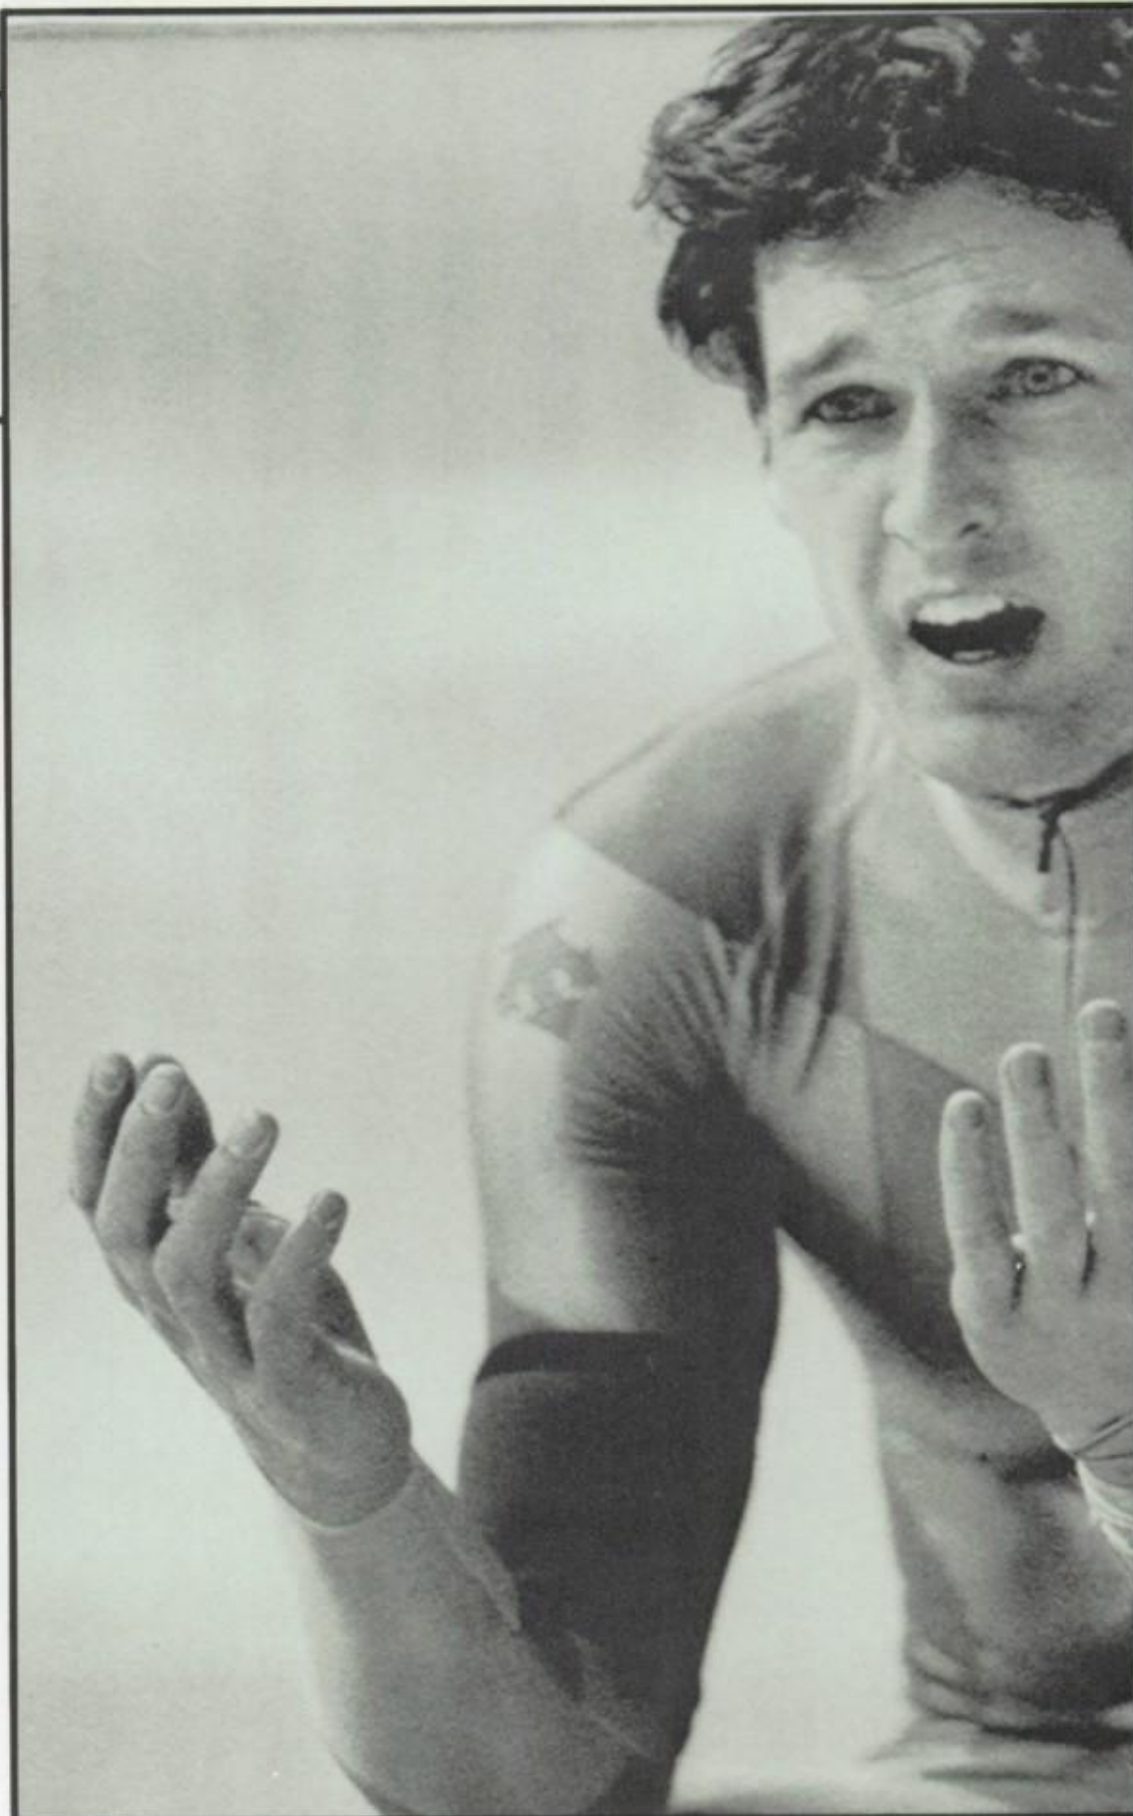

In disbelief, Dan Jensen of the United States sits on the ice shaking his hands. After falling for the second time during the 1000 meter men's speed skating competition, Jensen was completely devastated.

Up in a spin during his short program routine, U.S. figure skater Brian Boitano dazzled the crowd at the Winter Olympics in Calgary. Brian Boitano later went on to win the gold medal in men's figure skating.

Seeking total concentration, Josh Thompson takes aim. A new, lighter but stronger rifle stock was used to allow Thompson to cross-country ski faster.

World athletes gather in Calgary for the ...

Goldrush '88

Western Canada braced itself for an arctic high: the exhilaration of some 1,700 Olympians from 59 nations searching for winter gold. The Games, which opened on February 13 in Calgary, were the longest and most expensive to date. They were stretched from 12 to 16 days to accommodate television and even the weather. In a climate of overpowering good will, the XVth Winter Olympics opened without a hitch. A crowd of 60,000 people glowing from the cheeks and hearts brimmed Calgary's McMahon Stadium for the opening ceremonies, donning colored ponchos that formed symbols across the stands and one large display across the world.

Twice every four years, in the winter and summer, the earth's youth come together, in one place, and the effect is always astonishing. As easy as a change of costumes, even the most professional of the athletes is transformed during the Olympic procession to an overly excited child.

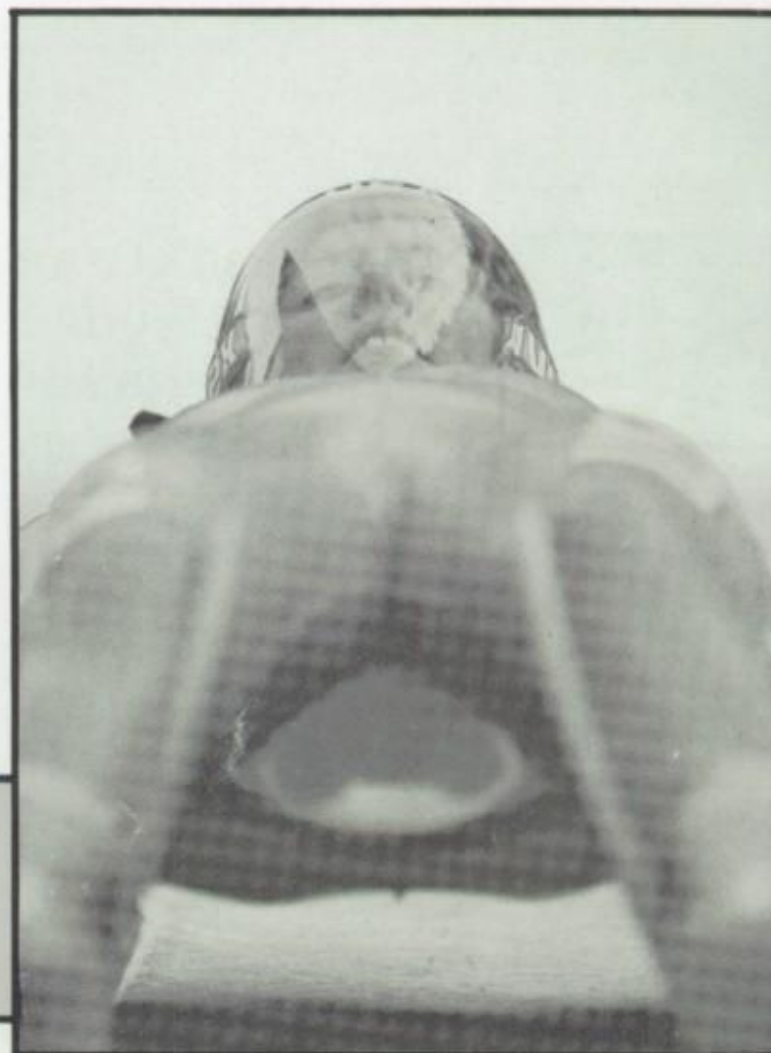

The 135-member Team

America hoped to top the U.S. Winter Games average of three golds, three silvers and two bronzes. In a nation where most of the playing fields are warm and level, a few of the 45 medal events of the Winter Games, were downright alien. All of America's serious biathletes could fit aboard a 747, and one congressman asked if the luge was an edible fish (ahem it's a sled.) The high profile ski team, winner of five medals in 1984, was racked by injuries. Still, American figure skaters Brian Boitano and Debi Thomas won medals along with skating speedster Bonnie Blair. In terms of overall medals, the East Germans and the Russians led the pack.

For four quiet years the athletes in these sweet, neglected sports had been up at dawn polishing their dreams and were ready now to show the world how far, how fast, how beautifully that they could go. The outside world so seldom drops by "their world", and yet were made welcome. And so, for 16 days, spectators turned up the thermostat, aligned the antenna — and let the games begin.

Disappointed when a crash dropped her to 15th at Sarajevo, Bonny Warner of the U.S., last year finished fifth in the World Championships. Expecting a good run in Calgary, Warner boasted brightly, "Luge and I were made for each other."

One day of skiing leaves students dreaming of ...

Albertville in '92

"The temperature is about 20° at the base and twenty below at the summit" warned the courtesy guide from Mt. Snow. This brief but chilling weather report served as a "wake up call" for eighty six students and three chaperones from St. Joseph's who travelled to West Dover, VT. on January 23 to ski Mount Snow.

For all involved, the day could best be described as "a challenge." For some, the most difficult part of the day was waking up at 4 am in order to get dressed, load equipment in the car, and make it to St. Joseph's by 5:30 am. "I'm definitely not a morning person" comments Mrs. Duff. "It takes me at least til 10 am to feel alive and that's when I get up at my usual 6 am for school." She added, "a few cups of coffee helped that morning."

Some students were challenged by the three and a half hour bus ride (although the warm and comfortable coaches made catching up on lost sleep easier). Nonetheless, cries of "Are we there yet?" followed by "Mr. Collins, how much longer?" revealed how hard sitting still is especially with the thrilling anticipation of moguls and black diamond trails looming in the back of one's mind.

No matter what a skier's ability, Mt. Snow challenged the novice to the expert. For the beginner, the task of staying up on one's skis and subsequently staying dry was easier said than done. For first time skier Sean Mayo, the difficulty of skiing was realized early on. "At first, I fell practically every ten feet, and that was on the bunny slope. But by the end of the day I was going down intermediate trails with the help of Coach Holt." Sean's accomplishments were verified by Mr. Holt, "Sean was awesome; I was impressed by how quickly he learned."

For the more experienced, skiers, weathering the cold throughout a full day of skiing was most difficult. Marta Marnani comments, "At least the beginners have enough sense to escape to the warmth of the lodge mid afternoon, but for those who love to ski, numb toes, ears, and fingers are ignored in search of that one last run."

"Expert" skiers were lured to black diamond trails found on the infamous North Face. Their skiing skills were pushed to the limit on such trails aptly named "Jaws of Death," "Plumnet," and "Ripcord."

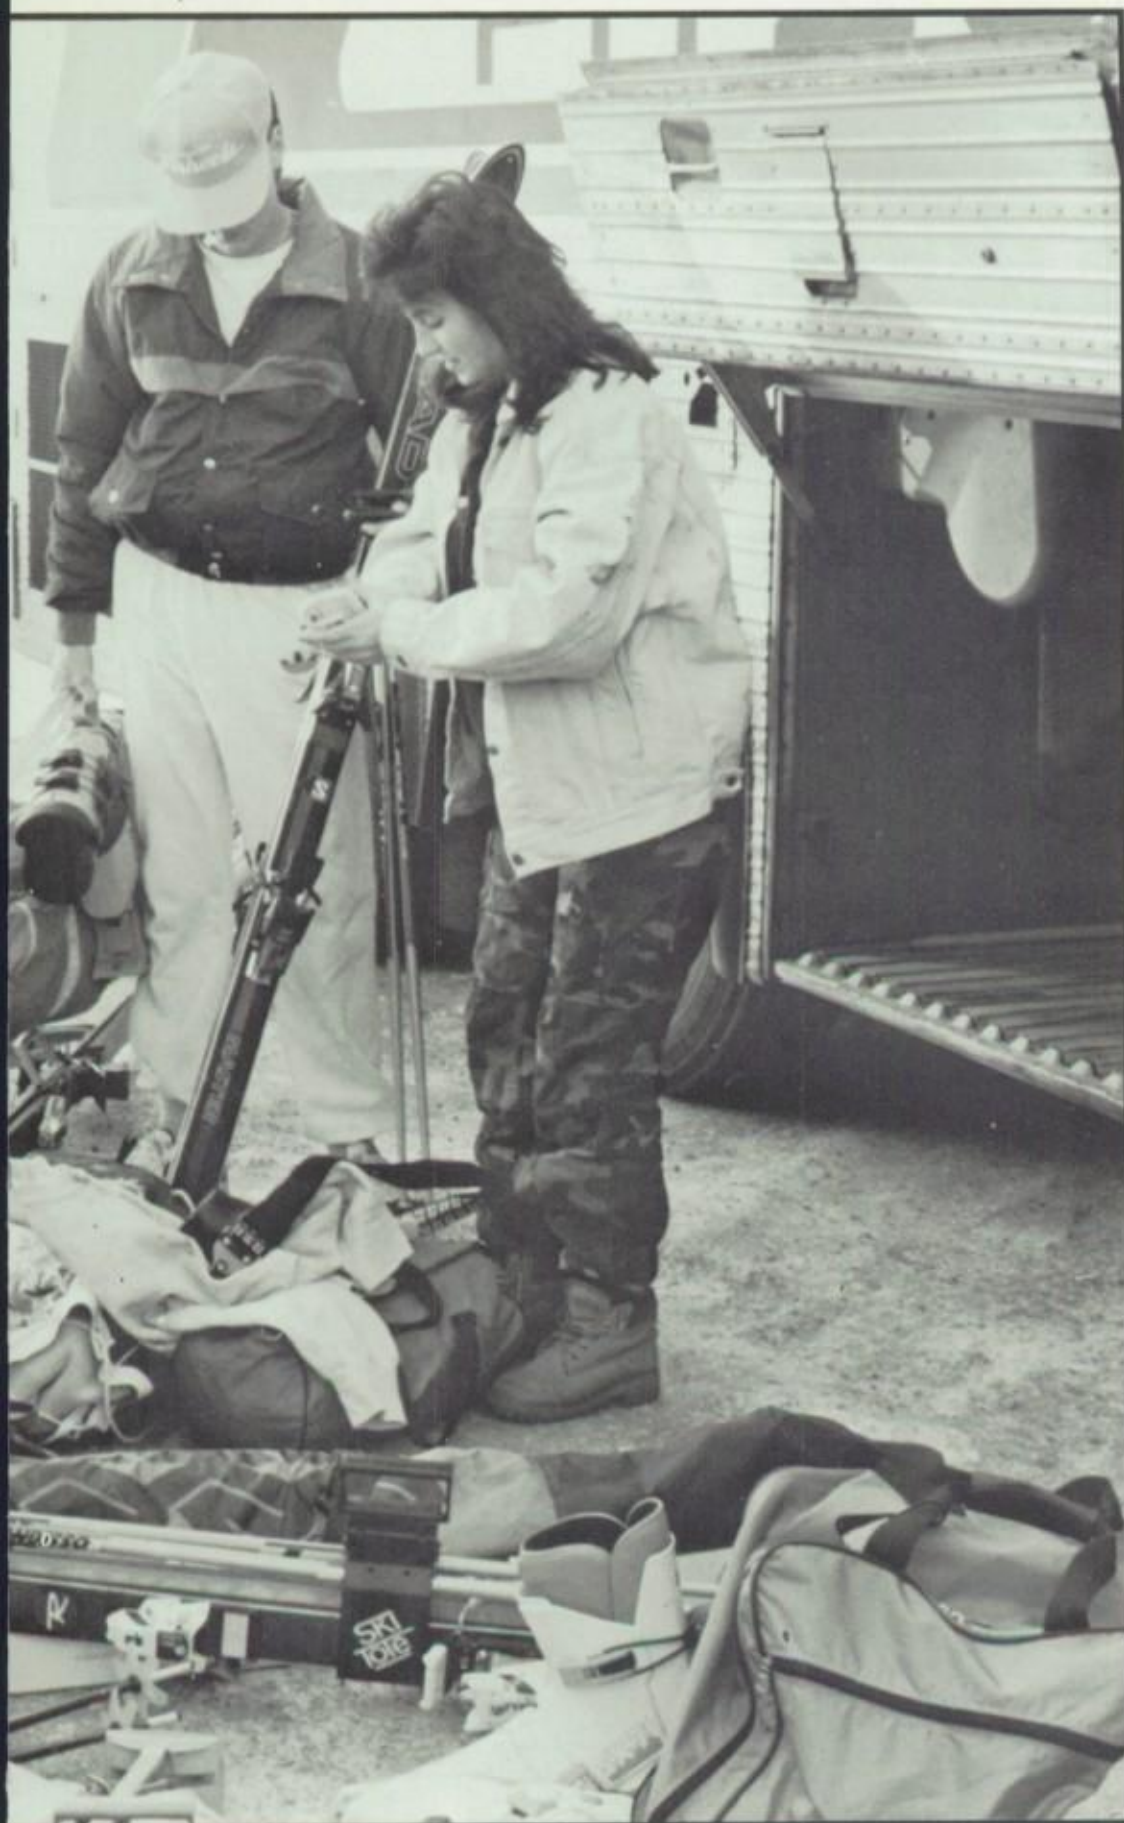

The day proved to be meaningful for all those who met the challenge. For some, it was surviving the bunny slope, for others, it was successfully skiing the North Face. Despite one's skiing ability, all were met by one last trial: the bus ride home. "You're not going to sleep, are you?" was a frequently heard challenge from one friend to another. For the chaperones, it was patiently answering an unidentified voice crying out somewhere from the back of the bus, "How much longer till we get to Burger King?"

Traversing the bunny slope can be a difficult task for a first time skier. Sophomore Liz Barker realized the intricacies of skiing from the moment she, literally "hit the slope."

"Ah, I think those boots mine." With the help of McCoy, Wayne Blossie gets his equipment together, hopes of a challenging day skiing.

Identifying equipment midst a "mountain" of boots, poles, and skis is not a fun task. Juniors Cara Chryssikos and John McCain hope to find all that they brought with them.

Finding the right trail to ski is made easier with the help of guide signs. Marta Marignani and Chris Guarino only dream of skiing black diamond trail, "Jaws of Death."

A day of skiing is impossible without first purchasing a lift ticket. Mrs. Duff makes sure that Brian Krett and Fran O'Donnell get their "ticket to ride."

Everyday students are bombarded by the media with the ideas and opinions of the outside world. The New York Times, daily news broadcasts, People magazine, and even MTV are among those outside influences that often alter the way we look at the world. It is also evident that we are not so far removed from these world events and in fact we are able to draw many similarities between those events and those that happen close to home, even inside the walls of S. J.

Ins And Outs

IT WAS A YEAR OF . . .

close calls

Rumors of a Royal rift between Prince Charles and Lady Di surfaced from Buckingham Palace, placing a dark cloud over the fairy tale romance. Madonna and Sean Penn called it quits at Thanksgiving, but Madonna gave Sean an early Christmas present and withdrew her di-orce papers early in December. U.S. Tankers in the Persian Gulf narrowly avoided hidden mines, thereby worsening the hostilities between the two countries.

On October 19, 1987 the stock market fell over 500 points, sending Yuppie stockholders into a nervous frenzy. An earthquake that measured 6.1 on the Richter scale hit Southern California in October, causing extensive damage. The senior lounge, once a haven for overworked students was transformed into a monitored classroom. Many saw this as the beginning of the end.

new beginnings

Kaye Lani Rae Rafko was crowned Miss America for 1987, beginning her one year reign. Lisa Laurella also began her one year reign, but as Homecoming Queen 1987.

Kirby Puckett and Jeff Reardon of the Minnesota Twins celebrate their World Series victory over the Saint Louis Cardinals. The Twins won the final game of the series 4-2.

with an 8-6 loss to East Catholic ending the season with only two losses. The Washington Redskins defeated the Denver Broncos to gain the 1988 Superbowl title.

indecision

Democratic presidential candidate Gary Hart dropped his bid for the presidency after it was reported of his involvement with Donna Rice, an actress and model from Miami. In December he re-entered the race only to finish last in both the Iowa and New Hampshire caucuses. Television evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker said farewell to the PTL ministry in March after being rocked by scandal. Jerry Falwell assumed leadership of the ministry only to resign with the Bakkers once again in control.

symbols

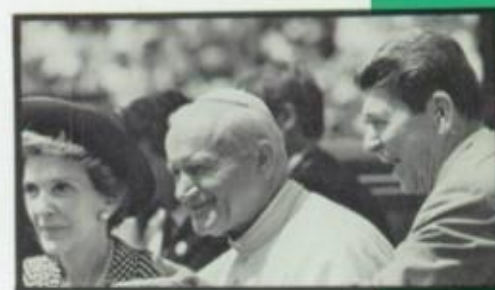

Jessica McClure the two year-old baby trapped in a well for over fifty hours became a symbol of Americans ability to pull together in a time of need. A barge filled with over 3100 tons of garbage became a national joke and a symbol of the nations worsening problem with solid waste management.

Pope John Paul II made a nine city tour of the United States in October. Bishop Walter J. Curtis made his final trip to St. Joseph High School. The Russians sent Prime Minister Mikhail Gorbachev to sign a nuclear arms reduction treaty with President Reagan. World peace didn't seem such an impossibility.

events that have not only shaped the world in which we live, but have touched the lives of many St. Joe's students within. From the final moments when it seemed certain that Stars and Stripes would recapture the Americas Cup, to the continued despair over the injustice ruling the lives of American hostages in the Middle East, communities as small as St. Joe's experienced the joy, the pride, the frustration, and the anger of these world events.

IDS. Although declared public health enemy #1 and predicted to affect over 2 million people in the next five years, it somehow remains an unreality to many students. Even in local hospitals patients with the AIDS virus are dying. First reports of U.S. government dealings with Iran Contras were yawned at and ignored by many. Yet as the scandal unraveled American people became aware that there were many secretive dealings in their so-called democratic government. Presenting the biggest threat to the U.S. economy since the crash of 1929, "Black Monday" saw the Dow Jones Industrial average drop a record 508 points. To many people who didn't have money in the stock market it was looked upon as a harsh lesson. Yet now those skeptics realize that it effected the entire economy and Americans became unsure as to the financial stability of the U.S. The AIDS scare, Contra hearings, and stock market crash all seemed so distant from our school community, yet as the impact of these events were being felt by our families we began to realize that national and local events shape our lives. The grumblings by parents at the dinner table of "our crooked government" or the "lousy economy" have not escaped the ears of students. After being subjected to everyone else's viewpoints we have emerged with views and strong convictions of our own.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, was a key official in the plan to finance anti-government rebels in Nicaragua with the money from arms sales to Iran. In testimony before the Iran-Contra hearings in Washington, North became somewhat of a celebrity.

It was an interesting summer. General Hospital had a lot to live up to in the fall!"

Once upon a time

THERE WAS A ROOM . . .

It was no ordinary classroom, it was the Senior Lounge. Within the Senior Lounge there was an abundance of joy and enthusiasm. There were also couches. To-day though, the joy is gone. The enthusiasm is gone. The couches are gone. All that remains are cold green chalkboards, round tables and bulletin boards cluttered with college information. Sure, it's still called the "Senior Lounge," but the days of frolicking in ecstasy and laughing about weekend activities are over. Instead, the watchful eye of a faculty member is ever present in room 102. A glaring yellow pad lies on a desk. Yes, it is what all students dread the most . . . a sign out list! The fact is, that the class of '88 was denied senior lounge privileges. In previous years, the lounge was an unsupervised classroom furnished by the students with comfortable old furniture. It was a place to relax. Students sought refuge in the lounge from the strict academic atmosphere of classes and the silent studies of the cafeteria.

Problems repeatedly arose. Rely a compromise was made. The lounge remained open, but was laced with modifications. Despite the fervent cries of angry students, the compromise stuck. Most teachers prove sympathetic to the plight of the seniors though, leniently supervising the "new" lounge. At least students aren't being strapped into their seats and forced to complete homework, as one senior put it. A definite black cloud looms over the first floor, room 102. The class of '88, wasn't given a chance to prove its maturity or trustworthiness, and because of this there is a tinge of bitterness in the voice of seniors as they refer to their Senior Lounge. Perhaps the class of '88 would have been the first class to respect their privileges. The world will never know. - Tara Trimarchi

The Dow Jones industrial stock average dropped 508 points, the largest in history, on Monday, October 19. Some called it a "crash", others called it a "meltdown" and others called it "Black Monday". Whatever it was, it created the biggest economic scare since the depression.

everyone loves to be in the spotlight. Big name entertainers often influence the way we act, dress, and even the language we speak. From the Greek accented "Don't be ridiculous" of Balki on Perfect Strangers, to the shrilled cries of the church lady on Saturday Night Live of "Satan!" Many of these famed phrases have become common in the language of St. Joe's students. Perhaps the urge to imitate these entertainers comes from the "larger than life" image they portray on the stage and the screen. Members of our own drama club are often inspired by their favorite actors and actresses, such as Glenn Close, Meryl Streep, Michael Douglas, and Jack Nicholson. By shedding light on the humorous side of life, comedians such as Bill Cosby, Howie Mandel, and Eddie Murphy help us to deal with events on the outside a little better especially when we are hurting on the inside. They also take the simple rituals of life and make them humorous, just as John Huber and Tom Montelli did in their demonstration on how to shave. - Entertainers become our heroes because they strenghten the individual and the conformist in all of us. They leave us with pleasant memories and a desire to be in the spotlight.

"Dirty Dancing" starring Patrick Swayze and Jennifer Grey is one of the hottest movies of the year. It's combination of music and dancing were the ingredients that kept movie goers coming back again and again.

in reaction...

"It reminded me a lot of Flashdance and Footloose, two of my favorite movies. I guess it's because of the different style of dancing and the different forms of music, modern and fifties. It's the kind of movie you can see again and again without getting tired of it."

t was a great year in the sports world. It kept us in suspense during the NFL strike, thrilled us during the World Series, excited us during the Cadets football season, and brought us closer during the Olympics. The fans played an important role in our high school sports. The high spirits and intensity of the fans spilled over onto both the soccer and football fields. Despite the fact that America was not a leader among medal winners during the Olympics, all the competitors had the experience and the thrill of a lifetime. The town of Calgary was "a flame" with the excitement of international competition. Once again sports offered a source of excitement and glory for spectators and participants alike. Sports heroes enabled us to live out our far reaching dreams and desires of glory; everyone wanting to hear their national anthem playing while a gold medal dangles from their neck.

"The NFL season was interrupted by what is becoming an all too familiar scene in professional sports, a mid-season strike. These scab players were called in to play and turned a professional game into something that looked like a backyard game. I was really mad about the strike. Athletes who I had once admired had turned out only to be interested in the monetary rewards of the game. The players let us all down."

-Jeff Keech

A 24-day strike by the NFL players ended in mid-October when the union gave in and went to court instead of trying to fight the club owners at the bargaining table.

"St. Joe's is a close knit community. The kids pull for one another. Maybe that's why the fan support is so strong. The students in the stands as well as out on the field, or on the court, are overly enthusiastic. It really makes me feel good to yell a cheer and know my friends are going to repeat it back. It shows school spirit and above all else, unity."

-Tara Trimarchi

The success of this year's football team may be due partly to the fan support. Many students gathered in the parking lot to "psych up" the football players for their game against rivals Fairfield Prep.

"I really don't know much about yachting, I kind of thought it was a sport for the rich. But when we lost the Cup after having it for so long, I think everyone became interested, it became a matter of national pride to get it back."

-Dave Constantini

Dennis Conner, the man who lost the America's Cup in 1983, won it back four years later. The Stars and Stripes completed a 4-0 sweep over Australia's Kookaburra III in the race that took place in Australia.

Brian Barker and Ivan Lendl played at the Trumbull Tennis Club. The fundraiser was to support Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Fairfield County.

"I was both excited and nervous to see my brother out on the court with Lendl. I am tremendously proud of him and all his hard work," commented sophomore Liz Barker about her brother Brian, a former St. Joe's student.

On November 21, 1987, The Tennis Club of Trumbull sponsored a benefit appearance and exhibition match to support Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Fairfield County. Ivan Lendl, a resident of Greenwich played Trumbull's own Brian Barker.

The fund raiser was a huge success. The only problem the spectators had was trying to decide who to cheer for: World champion Ivan Lendl or home favorite Brian Barker.

Brian had to overcome his nervous jitters Liz said, "I knew he was nervous leading up to the match, he really wanted to do well in front of his hometown. I could tell that he started to loosen up as he started to play and it really showed." Although Brian lost 6-4, 7-5, he played his best and learned that the road that was in front of him was not an easy one, it would take a lot of hard work.

Today, Brian is one of New England's top ranked players. It is an overwhelming honor for St. Joe's to see the accomplishments of a former classmate paying off.

usic is considered the universal language. Through music, we at St. Joe's are able to form a union with the outside world. Popular musicians help to mold our attitudes and the impressions we want to make on others. Inspired by the likes of Bon Jovi and Whitesnake, Mark Turko and his band performed at The Strand in front of many St.

Joe's students. The musical year was full of comebacks; The Grateful Dead, Cher (without Sonny), and George (without the Beatles) all found themselves back on the charts in '87. Performers such as Billy Idol and Tiffany all re-released songs that had long gone "out", bringing them back "in". Although many musicians were looking back in time, present-day issues were not neglected. Various artists including U2, Whitney Houston, and Run-DMC teamed up to make a Christmas album entitled "A Very Special Christmas" with all proceeds going to the Special Olympics. Several students from St. Joe's also joined together to form a band which played at the winter sports assembly and at the Stamford Sheraton for an employee Thanksgiving party. Music influences our lives daily. It forms distinctions as students' tastes range from "Heavy Metal" to "Club Music", from "Pop Music" to "Classical". Yet at the same time it binds us together and often becomes the only aspect of our lives that we understand. Interpretations will always be unique and special to the individual but nevertheless music remains a "Universal Language".

Time in school doesn't always allow students to know the individual in each of their classmates. It also does not always provide the opportunity for a student to express him or herself. Outside the confines of St. Joe's is where one can really learn of the individuals that make up the student body, by the way they dress, act, and the activities in which they partake.

Mark Turko is one such student. He has always had a love of rock-n-roll music and last year joined a band named Teezer.

Q How did you become interested in music?

A Just through guitar lessons when I was eight years old. I stopped for a little while and then a friend of mine got an electric guitar and we really got into it.

Q Who are your musical inspirations?

A Rock and Roll bands, at first Led Zeppelin and most recently my guitar teacher, Ritchie Scarleta. Also Jimi Hendrix. I'll listen to anything once, and if I like it, twice.

Q What kind of obstacles did you have to overcome in terms of school and family?

A My family is pretty cool. They come to the show and support us. And as far as school goes, I sometimes wish I didn't have to go because I'm so tired, from practicing and all. I wouldn't mind just playing all day long.

Q All day?

A Yeah. I really enjoy playing in this band and hope it continues for a long time. I mean of course I'd like to reach stardom but you have to be realistic. Chances are against that happening. Basically I'm just having a good time doing something that I really enjoy.

THE HEARTBEAT WITHIN

PEOPLE

Deep in thought.

From the broad range of people who make up the St. Joseph Community, senior Stacey Lawrence knows something of the mystery of life, the tradition of sharing, as well as heartbeat that comes from within.

come back here and everything looks so different", remarked 1984 graduate Maureen Marsan during a recent visit. "Somehow you never seem to think of St. Joes as anything but the people that were here when you were."

And that is what makes it so special. The changing parents in the Touchdown Club, keeping the sidelines in order, packing sandwiches for away games and carpeting the weight room at the beginning of the year. In the Guidance Office, volunteer mothers keep senior applications moving along. At San Giuseppe time students, families, friends and alumni gathered for the 11th Annual celebration.

During '88 we took a special look from the inside out, at life's most embarrassing moments: foul ups, bleeps, blunders and other memorable details that made life at St. Joes something special. And for those lucky enough to have a special romantic interest during high school, it was time to give that a look, too.

Behind the scenes, the people who keep some of those special functions going each year in the Development Office were worthy of attention. In the far corners of the building, some hide out in what is referred to as The Great Escape: Nurse Fry's office (where tiny fake germs take refuge, from the inside-out).

Fake illness, we found out, is nothing new; it is a wonderful tradition - sometimes as much fun as a snow day!

In all, People made up the sweet mystery of Inside Life. No one would ever find life around here quite the same - not next year, or the year after, or one hundred years from now. In the thump-thump movement of day-to-day life, anyone who bothered to tune in would hear the heartbeat from within - loud and clear.

“All in all, People made up the sweet mystery of inside life.”

Pigging Out!

Pepsi, popcorn, and pizza pockets

Melissa Lucke waited four minutes in line to buy cheddar and broccoli soup. For another two minutes, she struggled with the Pepsi machine until it finally accepted her dollar and gave her a Diet Slice and 40¢ change in return. She stood in the "junk food" line three minutes for some chocolate donuts. Afterwards, it took her two minutes to locate her friends and squeeze one more chair up to the table. Melissa glanced at the clock. "I have exactly 9 minutes to eat all this!" She laughed to herself as she began to devour her lunch and talk with her friends.

The twenty minute lunch period is a chance "to get together with friends and talk about anything but school," says junior Tricia Cummings. Friends make plans for Friday night, recuperate from the test they just took, talk about the latest movies and albums, and eat.

The front caf. is most commonly reserved for the underclassmen. It is also referred to as the "junk food room." Often, underclassmen have a fear of entering the upperclass caf., and therefore are never able to buy the sandwiches, soup, and fruit.

As high school students are no longer under the watchful eye of mothers, the junk food counter is always surrounded by students anxious for popcorn, yodels, or chocolate eclairs. Many students combine the preceding items with a soda for "lunch."

The social use and the practical use of the cafeterias make a significant contribution each day to the time spent in school. Some enjoy the friendships it helps to develop. Others use it as a retreat from the monotonous work day. Most, however, find they have just enough time to finish eating before it is time to return to class.

Feeding Time

At times, students prefer the sweet taste of an ice cream or tangy zing of a barbeque potato chip to a healthy sandwich. Seniors Bruce Botti, Chris Caruba, Rob Donohue, and Steve Viola break for some junkfood.

In the 1980's, the term for "going steady" or dating is better known as "going out." As Allan York revealed, "I told my mother that I was 'going out' with somebody and they asked me if I was going to the movies or out to dinner."

Dating has always been a vital social experience for high school students. Some students start "going out" as early as freshman year. Others don't begin to date until their junior or senior year. A few couples have lasted since freshman and sophomore year, and those involved would agree that their relationships have been a growing, learning, and sharing experience. As stated by Lisa Laurella, "Even though I've been going out with John (Huber) for almost three years, I still think we can learn a lot about each other as individuals and our relationship just grows stronger because of this reason."

Dating someone fills the empty nights of the weekend and provides the security of having a girlfriend or boyfriend to walk with in the halls at school. In a more meaningful way, going out helps both people to mature as caring, loving, individuals. Dating allows teenagers to see both the good and bad qualities of someone in which they deeply care about.

Dating someone from another school poses several advantages and disadvantages. Oftentimes, some do not see their boy or girlfriend enough because of too much homework, or extracurricular activities. However when the couples do see one another, they appreciate the time spent together as being very special.

For some, going out is difficult because long distances separate a person from their boyfriend or girlfriend. Many are involved in relationships where one is away at college. Huge phone bills, daily letter writing and anticipating extended vacations, makes the separation more bearable.

Dating is vital to the growing process since it's a way to get to know and see the uniqueness of another.

Senior Hangout

The escape within

The seniors of St. Joe's have witnessed many changes since freshman year. New athletic fields, building additions, and computers have entered into the school environment during the last four years. The senior lounge, a study hall set aside for the use of the seniors, has also changed in look and attitude.

No longer sporting a living room atmosphere, the lounge

now has tables, chairs, and proctors, much like the cafeteria study halls. At one point, the lounge contained comfortable couches and a stereo. Some students find that the lounge inhibits their freedoms as seniors. Matt Sember commented, "This year's seniors don't possess the freedoms, like a comfortable lounge area, that those of previous years had."

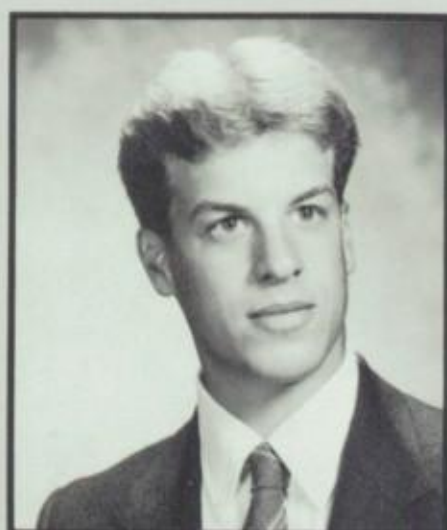

"It's nice to have a room set aside just for the seniors, and at least we have more freedom there than in the cafeteria. It's also nice not to have to listen to where the studies are after the morning announcements," remarked Erin Roach. Many seniors, like Erin, appreciate the fact that this year's lounge was not completely closed to use. They believe that this separate work area is much more relaxing and beneficial than the noisy cafeteria.

Most significantly, various individuals view the lounge as an ongoing tradition that allows the seniors to work together as friends in their final year together. In their opinion, it is essential to the social atmosphere of the St. Joe's community. As one student put it, "Although the lounge does not provide the relaxed atmosphere of previous years, it encompasses a tradition at St. Joe's that all students should appreciate."

Morning With Mom

Mothers and daughters spend cherished moments together.

A mother and her teenage daughter often find they have a small amount of time to spend together. Because of work schedules, school, and extra-curricular activities, when the time is found, it becomes somewhat special. Therefore, Mrs. Lorna Sullivan, parents, and other teachers planned the Mother-

Daughter Communion Breakfast, held in the school's gymnasium on the 8th of March.

The morning began with a mass, celebrated by Monsignor Richard Shea and followed by a lecture given by Mrs. Kathy Chesto. Mrs. Chesto is working on her doctorate in religious studies. She spoke about the special link between a mother and daughter and how important it is to maintain that relationship. Most agreed that she touched upon some very important topics in her speech. Amy McAndrews commented, "She gave an interesting and informative talk on the significance of being a daughter."

Following the speech the mothers and daughters proceeded to the cafeteria for breakfast. They found something special in the meal as they were able to share it together; a typically rare occasion. A copy of the poem "The Cross in My Pocket" was set at each plate for all to keep in remembrance of the morning. Kim Portocarrero explained, "The food was good, but it was even more important for me because my mother and I were able to take time out of our busy schedules and spend some quality time together."

After everyone ate the final bits of bacon and sipped the last drops of coffee they reflected on what a well organized and special morning it had been. Mrs. DiJulia recalled, "It's always a gift to attend liturgy with my daughter. The Communion Breakfast was particularly meaningful because of the familiarity of the setting and the support of her friends."

Seniors

Who are they?

A class united in 1984 as they entered St. Joseph High School. These students began a four year journey together through high school which would be remembered for the rest of their lives.

The class of '88 has a special ring to it. Not very often is a class distinguished by double digits. This unique situation would serve as a mark of their accomplishments.

The seniors began searching for every opportunity to leave a lasting impression on the school community. However, they encountered many setbacks. For the first time in fourteen years the long awaited privilege of the senior lounge was restricted. The furniture and stereo were removed and replaced by tables and chairs. Hopes for free parking were restrained by assigned spaces.

Nevertheless, the class didn't allow these mishaps to bring their spirit down.

With their determination and drive, the seniors survived the struggle of changing athletic leagues. After three years, they finally adjusted and brought back the strong athletic tradition for which St. Joe's is known. Perhaps the 1988 Winter Olympics gave them inspiration. Or perhaps they served as a motive to convert the pep rallies into sports assemblies with an Olympic theme.

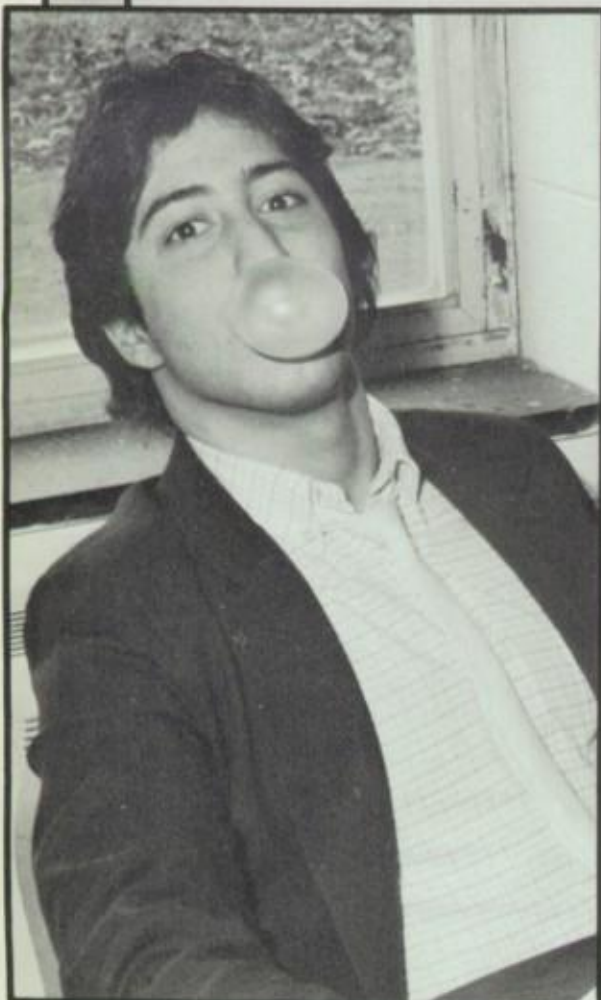

Despite the maturity that seems to accompany the senior class, in the soul of every student there remains evidence of the timid freshman, vivacious sophomore, and spirited junior. Whatever the case, and despite several setbacks, the seniors responded with a new sense of spirit and pride that seems to make the class of '88 unique.

The Home Team

Making sports a family matter

The St. Joseph High School Touchdown Club was founded four years ago by a group of parents and friends of the football team wanting to participate more actively in the sports program. The main purpose of the club has been to support not only the football team but also the school's entire sports community.

The Touchdown Club has made many contributions to St. Joe's. The fathers helped to line the football field in preparation for every home game. They built dug-outs for the new baseball field and assembled bleachers for the football and soccer fields. The parents also cleaned, painted, and carpeted the soccer locker room, which also serves as a weight room. The club prepared and served a dinner for the basketball players participating in the Northeast Christmas Basketball Classic. Senior Joe LoPresti commented, "The Touchdown Club has done a lot for us this year. They have come through with everything from a new weight room to continued moral support all year long."

The strength of the athletic program is due, in part, to the continued support of the parents behind the scenes. Their involvement is concrete with many tasks being the focus of their group. Practically speaking, the club takes care of much of the business to free up others to coach. The members have continually provided models of involvement and concern for their kids. "A steadily increasing membership indicates growing interest and, inevitably, also success," noted president Ken Weldon. Most sports members were in agreement that the Touchdown Club's constant support and generosity is greatly appreciated. Senior football player Steve Lako expressed his gratitude enthusiastically, "Their never-ending spirit and support for the team will hopefully continue for years to come . . . I feel they were a major encouragement in our recent success."

Guiding Lives

Moms Aid the College Search

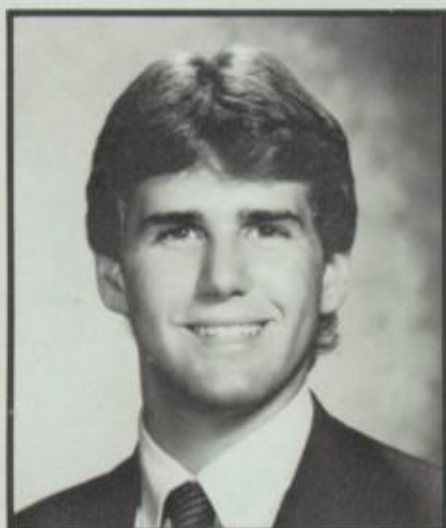

Each year disillusioned and confused upper-classmen congregate in the Career Center. The Guidance Department successfully helps students to decide among the numerous colleges, scholarship opportunities, and career choices.

The new computer system has aided the process of choosing a college. Students may fill out a questionnaire in which they may voice their preferences. This may help a student decide whether a college is right for him or her. Specific demands such as size, location, academic majors, and costs are taken into consideration. After digesting this information, the computer returns a readout giving new suggestions and narrowing down previous choices. A student may then have a better idea concerning his future

Volunteering to help in this mammoth task, mothers donated their time and energy to aid the students. Valuable volunteers included Mrs. Marge Tucio, Mrs. Jane McKeon, and Mrs. Lee Romano. They helped give direction and offer insight into the college world during this chaotic time.

A Little Italy

A Time for the Italian at Heart

The St. Joseph High School gym serves a myriad of purposes. It becomes a chapel during school-wide masses, a theater for drama productions, a home court for the volleyball and basketball teams, practice space for many other sports, and, of course, the "classroom" for phys. ed. students. Yet, once a year, in late March the gym is decorated with green, white, and red streamers and is transformed into a "Little Italy."

For three days, St. Joe's hosts the Festival de San Giuseppe. Italian foods, such as pizza, pasta, and pastries are provided by several local businesses. For ten years, the Italian folk group i Liguri has provided entertainment for the festivities. Those with an Italian heritage are able to enjoy the sights, sounds, and aromas of their home country while non-Italians appreciate a different culture. "Although I am not one bit Italian, I look forward to the delicious food sold at San Giuseppe each year, especially the pizza fritas," commented Doug Wilson.

The festival has been a tradition at St. Joe's since 1977. Coordinator Mr. Vito Montelli along with many volunteers work long hours for twelve months planning and preparing the festival. The gym is filled with tables and chairs while booths outline all four walls.

The back cafeteria provides the space for children's games. The weekend seems never-ending as there is always something going on inside the gym. Prizes are raffled off hourly, while i Liguri encourages dancing of attendants.

The students of St. Joe's annually elect a king, queen, and court of the festival. In 1987 Joe Violetta and Chris Silano were elected king and queen. Juniors Lisa Laurella and Ted York, sophomores Mark King and Jeanne Leso, and freshmen Stefanie Frasheur and Brian Ramundo represented the court.

As the gym door closes behind a student, friend, or family member, the excitement of the festivities and the music is cut off. Yet, the aroma of delicious food lingers. After visiting the festival de San Giuseppe anyone, Italian or not, finds themselves spirited with a great sense of Italian Heritage.

Embarrassing Moments

Foul-Ups, Bleeps, and Blunders

A freshman girl is hurrying down the hall, arms loaded with books, to her next class. Suddenly, she sees "him." That gorgeous senior she's had her eye on. And then it happens. Some invisible object takes her feet out from under her. Books fly everywhere and she hits the ground with a smack. Face red as a beet, she collects her belongings hoping to never have to cross paths with "him" again.

A sophomore boy strolls down the hall. Feeling he now comfortably fits in with the St. Joe's community, he stops to talk with some friends before entering the classroom. As the hallway quiets down, he saunters to his seat. Looking around, he thinks to himself, "I didn't know she was in this class ... him either ... oh no, I'm in the wrong room!" Head held low, he gets up and tries to figure out how he can explain this to the teacher who is ex-

A junior proudly ambles to his locker amidst what he feels is a sea of underclass admirers. He turns his combination and then ... nothing. Click, click. It just won't open. He thinks he hears a few snickers and, palms sweaty, he scurries away trying to pretend he had changed his mind about going to his locker anyway.

A senior girl struts down the hall, smiling with the self-esteem she receives from being a member of the oldest class in the school. She realizes people are looking and pointing at her, and giggling. Then she looks down and cries, "Oh my God! I want to die!" She quickly runs into the lavatory praying that no one else saw her with her vest on inside out.

It's moments like these that could appear on the show 'Foul-ups, Bleeps, and Blunders.' Embarrassing moments that produce red cheeks, shaky hands and a general feeling of

"I want to die!" They humble people just when everything seems to be perfect — these moments bring people back down to earth. Moments that some lose sleep over, others let linger in their minds for years and years.

And still, a pink shade will appear on their cheeks when they think of that one moment when they simply wanted to crawl in a hole and disappear. Embarrassing moments — they're all part of what makes people human.

The Vest Blues

It's crazy, but it happens, Aimie De-Zenzo experiences the ever so common wearing of one's vest inside out. Dark, cluttered lockers and hectic schedules make the reach for the vest a careless motion.

A New Look

Out with the old, in with the new

The 1988-89 school year will have a "new look". For the first time in fifteen years, St. Joseph's will "update" its uniform code. According to Msgr. Shea, "It's time for a change. Initially, we didn't commit ourselves to the change; we wanted to investigate our choices and find a way to meet the needs of the entire community."

The process of finding an appropriate look was long and involved. Wanting to get as much input as possible, Msgr. Shea established committees represented by the administration, teachers, parents, and most importantly, the students. Their goal was not easy: selecting a parochial uniform which reflects the fashion trends and style of the 80's.

The administration was concerned with standardizing the uniform code. The present code leaves a great deal of room to interpret the guidelines, especially for the boys. The girls seem particularly pleased that the boys uniforms will be more standard. "The boys get away with a lot", commented Lisbeth Pifko, "They can choose their own shirts and slacks and usually they just wear what they want."

Parents, who already make a significant financial commitment to St. Joseph's, were concerned about the additional cost of new uniforms. Addressing this concern, Msgr. Shea promises to introduce the new code over the next two years, giving next year's seniors and sophomores the option of the new code.

For one week during the winter, students of the committee served as living models for the uniform choices. Students began to voice their opinions very quickly. The girls in particular found the proposed skirt length too long and many of the color choices too conservative. In addition, the girls suggested that the wools and flannels might be too hot in the spring and especially in September when the warm temperatures remain.

Considering all concerns raised, come September, a new uniform will be introduced. The boys will have a choice: grey flannel slacks, navy or khaki Chinos, a sweater replacing the jackets, and a choice of oxford shirts and school ties. The girls will also have a new style of skirt, a choice of sweaters and blouses and all will have several shoe choices.

Students seem pleased that the new code allows some room for choice, while the school is satisfied that all students will be uniformly dressed. Although the outward appearance may change, the spirit of the community remains the same.

Working Out

Getting in shape

A bead of sweat rolled down his cheek and dripped from his face. Mike DeGregorio wiped his forehead and sat down to rest for a minute. "This weight lifting can get really exhausting," he said to himself, "but as they say — no pain, no gain!"

The 1980's have encouraged students in a "Get in shape — quick!" frenzy. Teenagers are spending hours upon hours a week working out in aerobics classes, bicycle riding, or swimming. It is not unusual to find a few boys in "the Pit" after school or some other students using the track to jog a few miles.

"I take aerobics classes during the summer. Track and cheerleading keeps me going during the school year, but aerobics is the most enjoyable way to stay in shape," commented Amy Rooney.

It is all part of the appearance-conscious phase during the high school years. "Teenagers like to believe they look good and also want to feel good about themselves. Working out is just one of those activities that builds up self-satisfaction and confidence," stated coach John Marusa.

It seems to be an extension of student life, a social activity that is healthy, exhilarating, and, oftentimes, exhausting. "But it all pays off in the end. After running ten miles, I feel I've accomplished some unimaginable feat — it's great!" said Dave Soligon. Despite the occasional need for ice packs, knee braces, aspirin, a day in bed for rest, and loads of Ben-Gay, the process is a rewarding one — working out to get in shape.

No Pain, No Gain.

The Great Escape

Mastering the art of imaginary illness

'Test? What test? ... period 4? No way!! Suddenly, I don't feel so good. Teacher, teacher, can go to Mrs. Fry's office, please?!" Recognize this plea? It seems to be a pretty popular one among students. A forgotten test, an incomplete assignment, or even just a lack of desire to attend class, leads students to resort to one thing: faking an illness.

Although Mrs. Fry's office serves as an infirmary to the sick and wounded, students always seem to refer to it as the "great escape." Shirking responsibilities isn't all that difficult. One can muster up a cough or slap the cheeks until flushed. If all else fails, just hold the stomach with an expression of great pain.

Upon entering her office, one can't help but sense the warm and hospitable atmosphere offered by Nurse Fry. Pretty note cards bearing excuses for tardiness or absence decorate the wall. Beyond Mrs. Fry's desk, three separate rooms to house the ill contain comfy green couch-like beds. Warm, heavy blankets accompany each bed. One might find one's self dozing off to sleep in the quiet, tranquil environment of this escape from the school community.

"Although most of the time I'm down at Mrs. Fry's office for passes for my illegal uniform, I do occasionally go to the nurse for a break from the regular school day," commented one student wishing to remain anonymous.

Be it a verifiable illness or a sudden sore throat, Nurse Fry is always there to comfort, cure, and heal, thermometer in hand. Whatever the reason, students find the comfort in knowing there exists a retreat on the inside of St. Joe's, just a cough and a snuffle away.

Out of Commission

After years of hearing students "cry wolf" Nurse Julia Fry still takes necessary precautions. Although Sean Sforza may be suffering from "didn't study-itis" a check-up doesn't hurt.

My Dog Ate My Homework

"Yeah, that's it . . . or, was it my cat?"

Patty Luczaj pulled into the school parking lot at 8:22 a.m. Okay, she's only twenty-two minutes late. On the way into school, she struggled to create a legitimate excuse. Smiling at her cleverness, she looked innocently at Mrs. Fry and said, "My car wouldn't start."

The scene is probably familiar to many, but it's just one of the several occasions when students find it necessary to muster up some credible excuses. Some may be believable, others outrageous, and a few simply the exaggerated truth.

Students can rely on the ordinary: "I got caught in traffic," or "I couldn't find my car keys." They can always blame it on a conveniently absent someone else, claiming, "My ride came late."

Due to the dire need to spread some gossip and to check out how the hair looks during the day, coming up with excuses for being late for class is necessary. "My locker was jammed," or "my teacher from last period held the class back."

Uncompleted homework either results in a "0" in the gradebook or, with a successfully delivered excuse, an extension. Common excuses include: "I didn't hear the assignment . . ." or "I planned on doing it in study and we had an assembly."

High school is a busy, busy time. It becomes almost impossible to complete everything in 24 hours that needs to be done in 24 hours. Therefore, students rely on white lies, heartfelt apologies, and extended truths. Whatever the la might be, the same old th exists — a trip to Burger K for breakfast, a long talk w friends in the hall, or a f good T.V. shows the night fore an assignment and, acco panying them? — Excuses, cuses, excuses!

In Search of Money

Turning pockets inside-out

Joelle Alva approached the teller with her bank book, a withdrawal slip, and a smile. However, when she had received her money and took a glance at how much money remained in her account, her mouth dropped open and a shocking sensation froze her in her steps in the middle of the bank. "Where did all my money go?" she asked, half to herself, half to the bewildered people standing in line.

"Oh, yeah, there was lunch at Villa Pizza on Sunday and 'Fatal Attraction' the night before. I had to pay for the flowers for the cotillion ... my shoes ... earrings ... and the application fee for Notre Dame." Well, there is no wonder students often find their cash flowing in one pocket and out the other. With today's expenses, the ability to keep even ten dollars for one week is considered a skill only the gifted have.

The high school years are ones of growing freedoms and therefore, responsibilities. Going out more means spending more money. The two just seem to go hand in hand. Claire Fettig commented, "Sophomore year we get a lot of new freedom which means more nights out, more dates, more clothes, and definitely more money is needed."

Part-time jobs seem to be the only dependable source. "There's only so much money you can borrow from your parents before they start to want some back. And besides, now that I'm a junior I should be able to at least pay for some of my expenses," said Jen Devine.

Somewhere between the school work, extra-curricular endeavors and social activities, part-time employment becomes a necessity. It's all part of the growing process. Mental, physical, and emotional developments occur throughout high school and financial demands accompany these growths until students find themselves turning their pockets inside-out praying there will be a buck or two among the movie ticket stubs, notes from friends, and the lint.

Out At Twelve

The greatest thing since holiday vacation

Give a student two extra hours on a weekday and they'll find something to do with the time in a wink of the eye. Half-days have come to be the greatest thing since holiday vacations. They give the students a chance to sit back and relax, go out to lunch at Burger King, catch up on the mid-day soaps, or those lost hours of sleep, perhaps go shopping at the mall. The list goes on and on. Not only are half-days a break from the monotonous six-hour school day, they also provide the free time greatly missed by students and teachers alike during the week.

"Every half-day, my friends and I like to go to Happy Family for lunch. With sports, activities, school work, and jobs, we don't really see each other during the week so it gives us something to look forward to," commented Kari Koritko.

Just as well, teachers pounce on the chance to have an enjoyable lunch with fellow faculty members away from the St. Joe's cafeteria. "A bunch of us usually get together and go to Connelly's," noted Mr. Patterson.

For those in over their heads with homework assignments, tests, and term papers during the week, half-days are a chance to catch up after inevitably falling behind.

Despite Mr. Bishop's continual half-day pleas, some students enjoy the opportunity to visit friends and old teachers in neighboring schools.

St. Joseph's students are able to enjoy half days often school days on the first Friday of every month are shorter because of faculty meetings. It becomes a mini-weekend night. Students are overcome with the sense of freedom. When it comes right down to it, it's only two extra hours, but give a student two extra hours during the week, and they'll fill the time in just a wink of the eye.

Inner Spirit Of St. Joe's

Living out the Christian faith

Any one taking a look at St. Joe's from the outside-in can see that it's an institution based upon the Christian faith. A statue of Saint Joseph which stands in the front of the school, makes a clear statement of the school's Christian commitment. Behind the school patron is the chapel. In every classroom a cross hangs on the front wall. And every morning, Father Ray blesses the school community with a prayer for the day.

However, what this outsider might not get a chance to see is the inside religious activities in which St. Joe's participates. During lunch period a silver can is placed on the "junk food counter" for students to donate their change to the poor. "It really makes me feel good to know that the change I have left over from my lunch can help benefit the poor instead of just spending it on more food," commented Allan York.

Every Thanksgiving, the student council runs a food drive for the poor. Counselors collect $1 from each student in their designated homeroom that will add to the school's contribution for holiday meals.

As the Christmas season rolls around, Mr. Mayo, head of the religion dept., commences a project in which all students donate money and/or gifts towards a previously assigned needy family in the Bridgeport area. The ages and sizes of each family member is noted so that the presents can be useful and practical. "Something like this truly makes you appreciate the real meaning of Christmas. Here we are asking for presents, presents, and more presents ... just to think of how happy that family will be ... that's what Christmas is all about!" said Mary Mahoney.

Religious activities like these are performed at St. Joe's in the spirit of giving. A selfless act from one Christian to another is what helps faith and the appreciation of life grow stronger. This is what the school administration has in mind when encouraging a well-rounded education. Taking a look from the inside out, one can see St. Joe's is not only a parochial high school, but a Christian community that can take pride in its generosity and selflessness.

"Oh 'Benji' Tree"

With the spirit of Christmas in full bloom, Sr. Janice gathers up donated gifts for delivery to friends in the surrounding community. A Fica Christmas tree, affectionately referred to as "Benji," served as a drop off zone.

Cramming It In

All night study sessions pay off

It starts with pangs of anxiety, nervousness, and fear. Even the diligent students dread the arrival of midterm and final exams. "The timing is the worst aspect. I either have Santa Claus and Christmas on my mind or lying in the sun in the lazy summer heat," commented Jackie Shannon. Midterm and final exams — those exams are most often associated with marathon study periods, queasy stomachs, and lots of cramming.

Some prepare for them

weeks in advance, assisted by schedules and organization of notes. Others dedicate only a few hours the night before. Several remain awake the entire evening beside a pot of coffee, a jug of iced tea, or a can of Pepsi. "Midterms and finals stress the importance of studying well for individual tests beforehand," stated Melanie Lysik.

Monsignor Shea describes their purpose as a "means to test how well students have mastered their subjects throughout the year. They constitute an important part of preparation for college." After the knees have stopped shaking, the head has stopped pounding, and those lost hours of sleep have been restored, an optimistic student might venture to say the self-gratification experienced makes it all worth it. Leigh Papaleo summed up her feelings on exams, "It's a tough week. I dread it lots, but when exams are finally done, I get the feeling of some great achievement."

Keeping In Touch

Alumni remain informed and involved

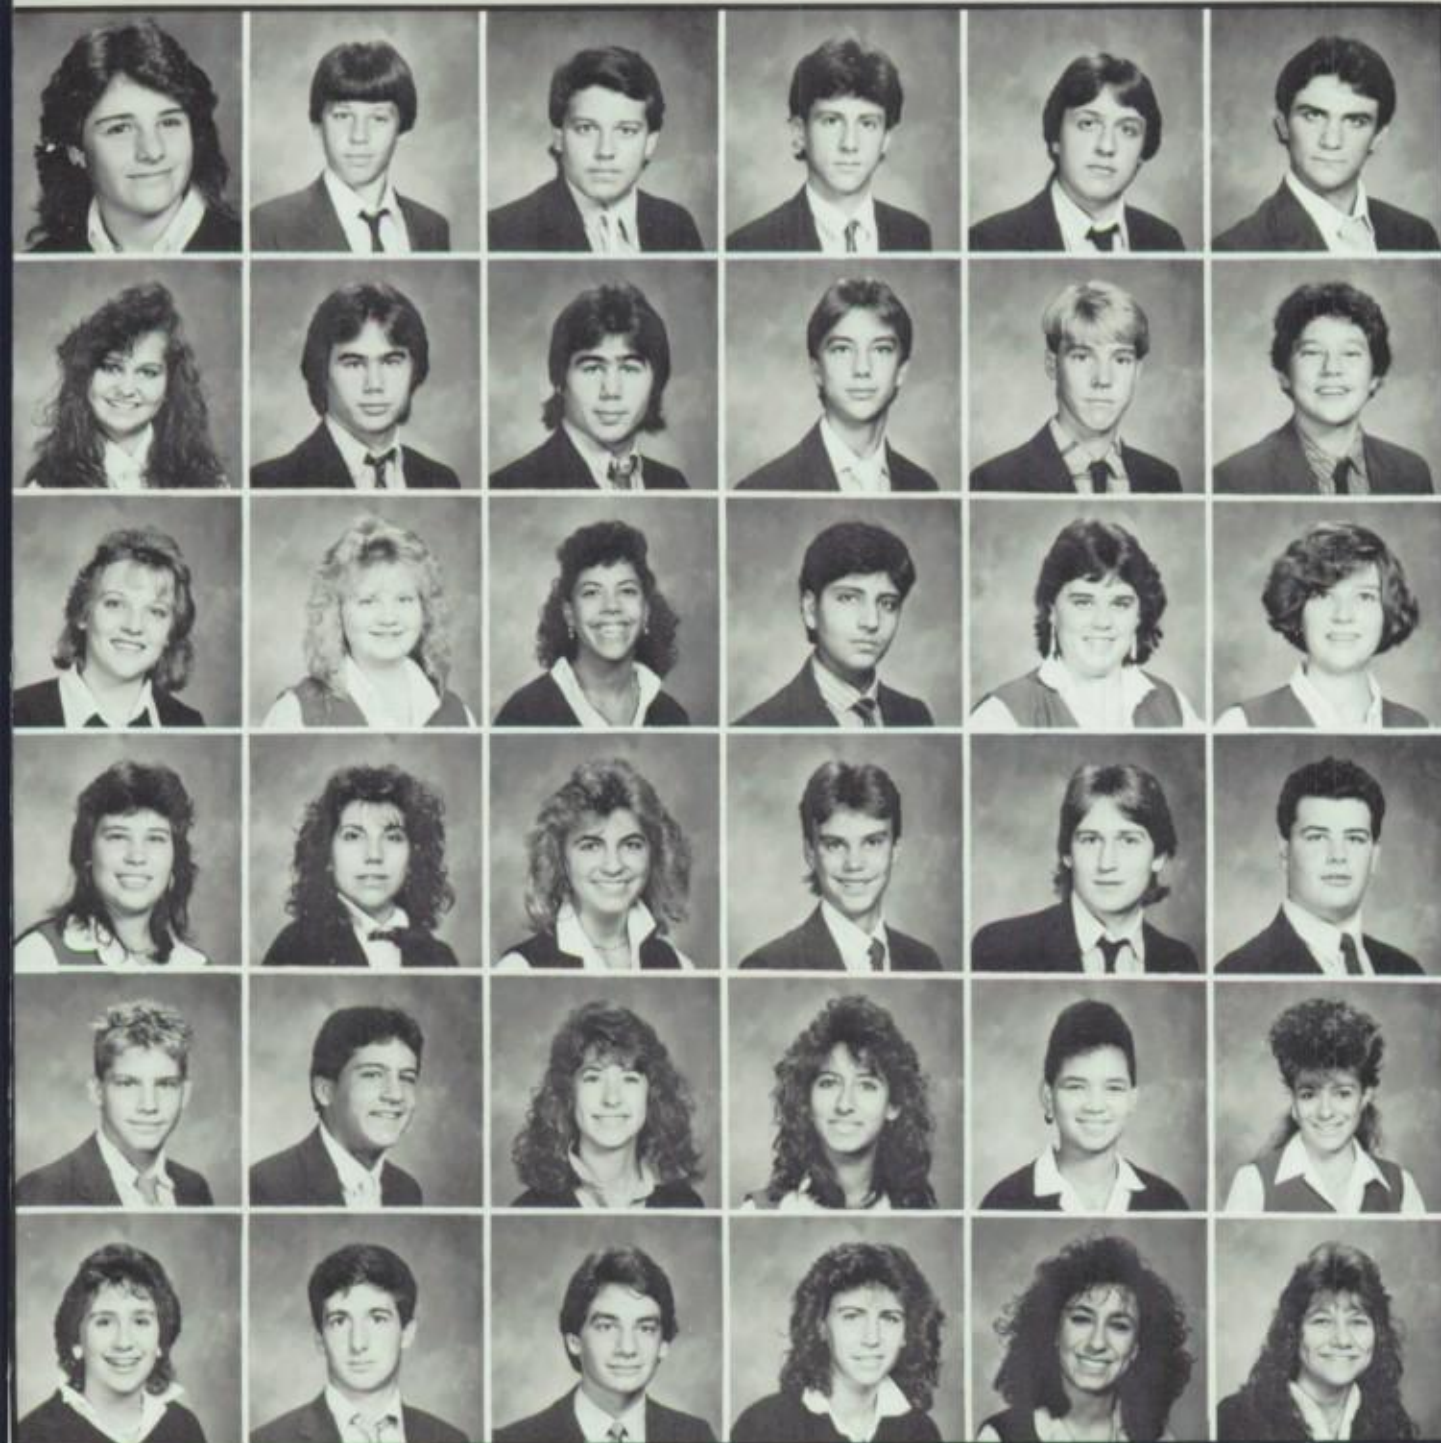

Seniors who wonder where they will be, where all will be, in twenty years are in it. Seniors who sense that special bond formed with their class during the high school years become involved in it. Seniors who like to keep in touch with past acquaintances enjoy it. It is the Alumni Club.

The Alumni Club is a relatively new program at St. Joe's. It began as a direct result of the restructuring of the Alumni Office. Monsignor Shea asked Mr. DeTullio to involve seniors in alumni functions. This way seniors would be able to get an idea of the continuing connections to St. Joe's, even after graduation. Amy Beckert and Deanna Osorio both agreed on their reasons for joining, "Because twenty or twenty-five years from now we want all of us, the class of 1988, to be together again even if it is just for that one last time."

The club, open only to seniors, helps organize alumni functions. The major activity of the year is the Alumni Appeal, a phone-a-thon which takes place during three weeks in March. Other major activities include the annual basketball game and Homecoming. All were invited to the Homecoming game on October 31. Many former players usually attend. There is always a picnic at the end of the year. Members of the club help in organizing, greeting, and cooking. Last year they also ran an off-year re-

Mr. DeTullio described the members as a "certain kind of kid — quiet kids who have a deep and abiding affection for the school. They are expected to bond the class together." He also commented he feels the school will be able to call on them in a special sort of way. These seniors grow to realize the importance of alumni. They are already looking now to what they can do for the school in the future. Mr. DeTullio added, "It's an exciting bunch because it does think to the future. It jumps ahead. It doesn't dwell on what was or sit around thinking what we did in high school; we'd rather think to what we can do, and I think that is what is important."

Inside Another World

Leaving a life behind

At first glance, the lives of most St. Joseph students appear normal. Most students come from hard-working families with varied ethnic and racial backgrounds: Irish, Italian, Polish, Black, and Asians, to mention a few. For most students their families have been in America for several generations. They enjoy the security and stability this country brings. Although most don't acknowledge it since its just their "way of life". For other students, they themselves being first generation immigrants, America's freedoms and way of life are greatly appreciated.

For sophomore Alina Barbulescu, being in this country is something she doesn't take for granted. "I came to the United States five years ago from Romania via Germany," she recalls with a searching look. "My family fled secretly to Germany in 1980." While Alina speaks of her struggle for freedom, her usually undetectable accent grows more noticeable. "My parents left for a vacation in Germany and never returned to Romania. I stayed with my grandfather for a year until the Romanian government issued me a passport to let me join my parents in Germany. Eventually the United States issued my family a visa, and we arrived in New York." The Barbulescus are intending to be granted U.S. citizenship this spring.

Praveena Nallainathan, also a sophomore at St. Joe's, came to the United States when she was two and a half years old. Praveena was born in Sri Lanka and she and her immediate family left their home in 1974 because of racial discrimination. "Almost every year we returned to Sri Lanka to visit relatives and friends, but recently racial tensions have increased so much that it would be dangerous to return. My uncle was shot when he attempted to leave and a few months ago grandmother's house burned when we tried to get out."

Although they are only teenagers, Alina and Praveena have experienced leaving behind what they had behind and beginning a new life in a foreign country. They have come to realize the value of their pasts while acknowledging the freedoms they now enjoy.

Step Back In Time

A look into the life and poetry of John Keats

"The spirit is eternal ... I have been on an uncharted quest to find the spirit of John Keats." Actor Mark Stephenson has been portraying Keats, a 19th century poet, for over one decade. He took his one-man production to Britain in 1977 performing at the Keats House, the Edinburgh Festival, and at London fringe theaters.

Following his British tour, Stephenson premiered at New York's Repertory Theatre in 1977. Since this appearance, the show has been produced several times off-Broadway, including performances at the Player's Club and Lincoln Center Library. During the course of his performances, Stephenson altered the show's format from pure monologue to a dramatic production revealing Keats more personal traits.

Today Stephenson continues to perform for high schools and colleges nationwide. He also performs scenes from Shakespeare's Hamlet, Romeo and Juliet, and Macbeth.

Stephenson hopes that his performance will inspire the love and respect in his audience that he himself feels. He commented, "John Keats has given me a voice, and by using his experiences and intuitions of truth, beauty, and the higher realities, I hope to help us, in some small way, along the path of enlightenment."

In the spotlight

In his powerful performance of "A Visitation from John Keats," Mark Stephenson acts out the life of this legendary romantic poet. This program helped enrich the scope of literary knowledge among the students at St. Joe's.

St. Joe's Now

Throughout time, Bishop Curtis' support and belief in the programs of St. Joseph High School helped to create a place for individuals to learn and grow.

Congratulations!

Celebrating graduation with seniors is one of the many ways in which Bishop Curtis, has personally touched the lives of the students at St. Joe's.

Out Of The Spotlight

Still in service to God

On November 23, 1987 the students of Saint Joseph High School were called to the gymnasium. The students rehearsed a medley of psalms, songs, and prayers, until they were performed perfectly. The day brought with it an atmosphere of anticipation, as Brother David stressed the importance of the up-coming event. The Most Reverend Walter W. Curtis S. T. D., bishop of Bridgeport, celebrated mass with the Saint Joseph community the following morning.

As the Bishop walked down the aisle, students and faculty were in awe. Senior Ted York commented, "This was the one time I truly forgot I was sitting on a folding chair in the gym. The Bishop made it easy to get involved in the spirit of worship."

Bishop Curtis spent the entire day at school speaking to the senior religion classes. He addressed many of the topics which interested the students, such as AIDS and the ordination of women for the priesthood. Vicki Hawkins stated, "He was easy to talk to and very insightful."

Bishop Curtis was born in New Jersey and raised there. He attended St. John's Grammar School, Saint Peter's High School, Fordham University, and Seton Hall University. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree.

He completed his seminary training at Immaculate Conception Seminary in New Jersey, and the North American College in Rome, where he was eventually ordained.

Soon after, Bishop Curtis not only pursued graduate studies in moral theology, but was granted a doctorate of sacred theology from Catholic University in Washington D.C.

On June 27, 1957, he was appointed Titular Bishop of Bisica, and Auxiliary Bishop to Archbishop Thomas A. Boland of Newark. In September of that year, he was ordained Bishop of Sacred Heart Cathedral and pastor of the Sacred Heart Parish.

Finally, on September 23, 1961, Bishop Curtis was appointed Bishop of the Diocese of Bridgeport, a position he would hold until his retirement this year.

After a lifetime of such impressive achievements, it was no surprise that his celebrating mass at Saint Joes before his retirement was a special honor for the school. During the mass, a painting of the Irish countryside was given to the Bishop by the Saint Joseph community, as a sign of thanks and appreciation for his years of dedication to the diocese and our school.

Bishop Curtis' career was also marked by his involvement in the life of the people. Clearly he was a Bishop in the best sense of the world; he served his church. Bishop Curtis attended all sessions of the Vatican II.

Also, from his commitment to parochial education, he initiated a "high school building program" which "ensured a seat for every Catholic child in the Diocese." Included in this program, 25 years ago, the new educational institution of Saint Joseph High School was founded. He also founded the Sacred Heart University in the fall of 1963. This diocesan, co-educational college was the first Catholic university in the United States to be staffed entirely by the laity.

Bishop Curtis called his five decades of work a time to "have seen grace piled upon blessing, topped by God's enduring mercy to me." He claims to owe his vocation "to the prayers of others, especially my family and friends," and added, "for me, as for all priests, the privilege of celebrating mass has been a grace beyond telling."

St. Joe's Then

Twenty-six years have passed since the Bishop first addressed the families of St. Joe's. This rare photo, taken in 1965 at the dedication in the gym marked the official opening of the school. (Photo was taken prior to the installation of the old wooden bleachers which have since been replaced.)

Teacher's Pets

Furry, feathered and scaly friends

Do teachers have pets? Of course they do. No, not those pets that willingly run errands, answer questions, and complete extra-credit assignments in a desperate quest for the teacher's favor. They have pets in the literal sense. Many teachers have an interesting assortment of pets which they care and tend for long after they have left their student "pets" at school.

Mr. Walsh has perhaps the most unusual collection of furry, feathered, and scaly friends. His pets are so important to him that he has set aside an entire room in his house for them. His zoo includes snakes, bats, various reptiles, and mice. Why all these unusual pets? Mr. Walsh explains, "I'm interested in studying the behavior of animals and I use them to further my research."

"Yeah, I have a pet, Cheetah, my cat," commented Mrs. Duff. "She's very important to me. She's not an unusual pet, but having her has changed my life."

Perhaps teachers find comfort in coming home to a pet that will not talk back, forget assignments, or disrupt class. Simply, a pet that relies solely on its owner for food, shelter, and love. This dependency is something a teacher does not often encounter in school and therefore greatly appreciates. Thus, the phrase — teacher's pets.

Man's Best Friend

Although probably not the most common pet, a raccoon makes for a very interesting companion. Mr. Walsh collects animals as an interest as well as a tool to further his research.

Quack, Quack

Pets come in a variety of shapes and sizes. Even though this is not truly her pet, Mrs. Brouard was paid a birthday visit by this special pet.

involvement. That is what makes high school life so special. From the antics of the hundreds involved in the Spring musical to the camaraderie of the Southbury Group in Social Action, it was simply a matter of being a part of something.

Amid all of this, many found themselves somehow connected to new worlds, new ideas, new adventures, new friendships.

Although most of the clubs from previous years remained intact, several new ones cropped up. When Mr. Walsh announced the formation of the Wildlife Club in the Fall, some showed up at the first meeting expecting an explosion of party life to overflow into the otherwise boring weekends. No such luck. It was animal wildlife, the likes of which most only experience on Public TV. No wildebeasts roaming the Serengeti Plain here, but plenty of insight into the world of rattlesnakes, owls, night critters and bats. For many it was great fun and great relaxation.

Formalized debates emerged out of the new Law and Government Club. Once again, it was another way of getting involved.

For some, involvement did not necessarily mean donuts and sing-alongs and ventures into the wilderness. For some it was more a matter of pulling together all of those special details of creative work for Portfolio. The real world outside St. Joseph was close at hand. "I felt the pressure all year long," commented Kathy Marsan, "putting together all of my best work was one of those top priorities that never seemed completed."

In the world of organizations, after all, that's what working together with friends was all about. That's what seemed to make high school life in 1988 so special.

“Involvement. That is what makes high school life so special.”

Members of the Committee prepare to launch balloons signifying the beginning of the day. Brother David and Nancy Aborne lead the group on their walk.

STEERING TOWARDS THE GOAL

Okay guys, let's go out there and get some serious Walk-a-thon pledges," cried out Phil Golino while instructing a freshmen homeroom on the joys of Walk-a-thon. Phil, like many juniors, seniors, teachers, and parents, volunteered his valuable time to psyche everyone up for this year's walk. This special group of students and adults, recognized as the Walk-a-thon Steering Committee, proved to be essential to the entire fund-raising process.

Sure it's tough to go out during those "blah days" of fall to collect pledges for the Walk-a-thon, but the results of the walk were tremendous and results were what the Steering Committee strived to attain.

"This year, I had a lot of fun working at the pit stop up on the hill, and everyone enjoyed the free donuts and juice we gave out," commented Dina Cowden. In addition to the free refreshments, the committee performed jobs ranging from blowing up balloons and collecting prizes from local businesses, to publicizing the event and attracting guest speakers. Nancy Aborne from Channel Eight News and mayors from the neighboring towns attended the opening ceremonies to excite the walkers.

"I got a package of razors and a frisbee during the walk, and my friends received lots of stuff, too," reported Jehan Bonin.

The prizes that the committee collected this year were incredible. Free McDonald's coupons, shampoo, soap, hair gel, and key chains among others, were given out along the route. Bigger prizes such as free gas certificates, free tuxedo rentals, prom bids, and hair-cut coupons were awarded to those collecting the most pledges.

Thus, the Walk-a-thon Steering Committee strived to make the walk more enjoyable and rewarding for the entire St. Joseph's community. Behind the hard work of Brother David, these individuals made overwhelming efforts for the good of the school. Their relentless motto? "Go for Joe!"

LEADERS WITHIN

What group invented a jelly doughnut eating contest without using hands or kitchen utensils? Which organization plans such events as The Freshmen Social, the Junior Ring Ceremony, and Homecoming for the seniors? The answer to these questions is obvious. Our Student Council has successfully kept St. Joe's hopping with school dances, assemblies, and days of fun and athletics like Field Day.

Under the guidance of Sister Catherine, the Student Council meets every Tuesday to discuss new matters. Vicki Hawkins noted, "Our work does not just begin and end on Tuesdays. The Council is always open to new ideas, and we are constantly working toward new goals."

Most importantly, the Student Council represents the students of Saint Joseph High School. Lisbeth Pifko feels, "We try our best to follow through with student requests. The most essential part of our work strives to make the year more enjoyable for everyone."

Being elected to the Student Council is indeed a tremendous honor. At the end of each school year, council members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes are elected. New Freshmen counselors are selected in September. Since the members are chosen by their own classmates, made up of students, and organized by students, therefore, the council is a special group.

In order that the council runs more smoothly, four students act as officers. These positions are filled by Tom Montelli, President, Doug Wilson, Vice-President, Jamie Mazzoleni, Secretary, and Stacey Laurence, Treasurer. They work with the rest of the council members to plan things for the school that benefit Saint Joe's as a whole.

Kathy Marsan summed up the council's ideals when she stated, "Doing I.D. pictures and handing out candy canes are really fun. But it is also good to know that I am helping out my peers in a positive way. The council allows me to meet new people every day. I am most happy when I am doing things for others."

Performing one of her responsibilities, Alicia Lipnickas helps put together a student ID card. The Student Council aids the student body in a number of ways.

One job of the council is to welcome nervous freshmen into school on opening day. Jamie Mazzolini helps a student decipher her schedule.

Joelle Alva, coeditor of the yearbook, sacrifices many hours a week working against deadlines. Here she spends another long afternoon editing articles and checking layouts.

Ads supply the greatest revenue for the production of the yearbook. Lisa Pogoda and Karen Timmeny crop and layout pictures for their section.

Planning, writing, and producing a 280 page book can drive a person crazy! On several occasions, the yearbook staff was out of control as is evidenced by our craziness on Mrs. Reid's blackboard. Room 110 will never be the same.

GETTING IT TOGETHER

'Kathy, where is my copy fitting sheet?" "I don't know, Cindy, where is the Academics divider?" "It's over here with the girl's basketball article." "What's it doing with the sports' stories?!" "Who knows?!"

It sounds like lots of confusion. Take a look at room 110 any day after school, or on any weekend, and it also looks like lots of confusion. Amidst the chaos, however, there is some organization. And the product? The school yearbook.

The yearbook staff begins its work in September and does not stop until mid-March. It is a long process which demands devotion, responsibility, and a load of creativity for the 290 page result. It involves an average of 3-4 hours daily during the week. The staff also found it necessary to sacrifice their free weekend time to work on the book. The workers took room 110 and, literally, turned it inside-out. The sound of pounding typewriters, the aroma of Villa pizza (with onions!) for lunch, and simply the utter chaos of papers everywhere perfectly describes the atmosphere on the weekends.

"Fun" seemed to be a required element in the yearbook. "If the yearbook isn't fun, then it is not worth it," coordinator Mr. DeTullio constantly reminded his workers. He always encouraged them to, of course, be responsible with the book but at the same time, treat it lightly.

As the weather gets a little warmer outside things seem to quiet down just a bit inside. The final captions are written, typing is checked, layouts are bagged and with a huge sigh of relief the box is sent out. There are great expectations in mind for the final product. Awards and most importantly, the satisfaction of the school community, remain as hopes in the workers mind. Kathy Marsan commented, "If we could just let everyone know even the tiniest effort & chaos that went into our yearbook I think they would be surprised! I think we all got a little closer because we struggled through it together. I used to ask myself if it was really all worth it . . . looking back on it now I would have to say yea, it was. The theme is perfect, too. To make sure everything was right, we really did' turn our brains 'inside-out!' "

Members Jori Keogan and Alison Noroian use the time after school to create quality work to add to their portfolios.

EXPRESSION FROM WITHIN

"I'm not sure whether or not I'd like to go into graphic design, but whatever I choose, being involved in the Portfolio Club has improved my drawing," Darrin Duford recently commented. In the past few years, the art department at St. Joe's has exploded, providing more and more opportunities for those students with an artistic talent inside them to express themselves. Even those that simply wish to enroll in classes such as drawing and design, painting, and sculpture, among others, for enjoyment had new doors opened to them. The new addition provided the space for the art room. And also, the Portfolio Club was formed.

The Portfolio Club serves two purposes for the group of artistic students which belong to it. Students planning to apply to art college must assemble a portfolio of original art. Mrs. Bramble helps these students to develop their creative ability. Other students, uncertain of their future careers, attend for recreation, simply to draw and paint in the appropriate atmosphere.

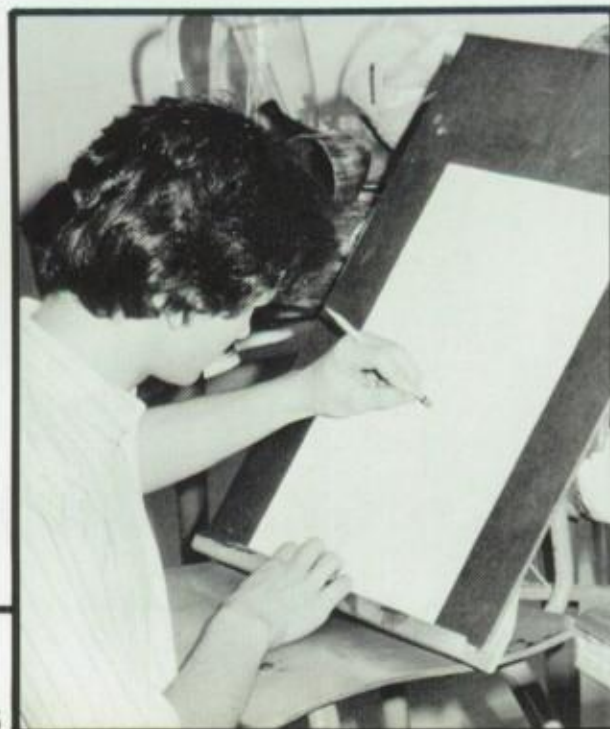

"I definitely have a talented group of students, both in my classes and in the club," remarked Mrs. Bramble, who teaches virtually all the art classes. "There are a substantial amount of students already involved in the art program, but hopefully next year, we can expand even more and help a broader range of students with their own expression of art."

A few Thursdays a month, the club meets. Because of its nature, only about eight budding artists usually attend meetings at a time, though the total enrollment is around fifteen. A trip to an art gallery to observe the works of others is scheduled for some time in the spring.

"Mrs. Bramble and her critical eye helped me out a lot. I'd like to study some sort of art next year and the club not only helped me put my works together, but gave me an opportunity to learn from other students as well," said Kathy Marsan. Artistically inclined or not, the Portfolio Club helps students to learn about the expression from within themselves, how they can make these expressions, and how they can properly present them.

Sitting comfortably on the floor, Darrin Duford concentrates on the arrangement he is sketching.

BRINGING OUT A SMILE

It's hard to imagine yourself not being able to understand a television show or a simple joke. For most of us, this is easily done. But for others, namely the mentally handicapped, this problem is addressed every day of their lives. Many people have the tendency to get involved in their own problems to such an extent that they easily overlook the needs of others around them. Volunteering time at the Southbury Training School provides St. Joe's students with the opportunity to help others who are less fortunate in many ways but it also gives them the time to reflect on how fortunate they and their families are.

A group of St. Joseph students travels to Southbury usually the last Tuesday of each month to spend time visiting with the residents. Those who have taken the time to visit have established meaningful friendships with these men. For the residents, they greatly appreciate the visits and even look forward to seeing their friends each month. Junior Amy McAndrews says, "Going to Southbury is so much fun for those men and for us. We make them feel happy in a small way which makes us feel great."

Many times, the St. Joe's group plans something special for the Southbury residents like a dance or a party. Other times are spent singing, playing bingo, and simply talking.

Anyone who has been to Southbury would agree that it is a special experience. Karen Luchun says, "I know that it's hard for some people to go that first time but afterward they can't wait to go back." Junior, Patty Condon sums up with this thought, "We give a little of ourselves and everyone gains. We know that they are thankful for the company, and they realize that people do care."

Each month a group of dedicated members travel to Southbury for a two hour stay to cheer up the residents. Front Row: Marie Maiocco, Sarah Schlegel, Jen Kruzynski, Patty Condon. Back Row: Karen Luchun, Tom Matthews, Doug Morabito, Sean Mayo, Greg Bushman, Dave Constantini, Santa Claus, Mark King, Jeff Pisacreta, Tony Pagano, Mary Mahoney.

The Law and Government Club gives the students a chance to discuss current events and Political issues. Thinking about what has just been said, Junior Kyle Cunningham prepares his rebuttal on the Gary Hart scandal.

One meaningful aspect of the Law and Government Club is the interaction between the members and the sharing of their opposing views. During an informal discussion, Cathy Sheehan argues her point as Mike Gutowski and Lisa Sachs listen in.

INSIGHTS INTO THE OUTSIDE WORLD

I think George Bush will be the next President," Paul stated confidently. "You're crazy," Cathy countered, "Michael Dukakis has proven himself in Massachusetts." Darrin interrupted, "WAIT . . . you're both wrong. It'll be Bob Dole because . . ." "Michael Dukakis," "Bob Dole" (Volume mounts) "Dukakis" "Dol" "Du . . ." "Dole" "Time Out!" shouts Mrs. Duff.

You have just witnessed a common exchange between three politically minded and informed students who frequent St. Joseph's Law and Government Club. Perhaps they won't be able to agree on the next President of the United States, but this is half the fun, agreeing, disagreeing, and usually coming to no conclusion at all.

Last year students felt the need to come together and discuss, well really, argue the meaning and importance of relevant political issues and current events facing our world. The need gave rise to the Law and Government Club. In its second year, the club enjoys the reputation of being the most argumentative student organization at St. Joes (although even this is a point of dispute).

The agenda or topics of discussion for the weekly meetings depends on what's currently in the news. Students enjoy sharing their insights into the significance of events which affects us but more importantly, they appreciate the time to listen and talk about what's on their minds. The club's President, Cathy Sheehan explains, "I've always loved politics and I especially like arguing my positions with anyone who'll listen." For others the club provides a time just to be with friends. "I enjoy meeting, talking a little about current events, or skiing, or cars, whatever," comments Paul Federico. For all, the weekly meetings provide time to exchange views or deepen friendships.

Perhaps the only other student organization which rivals the Law and Government Club in its argumentative nature is its spin off, the Debate Club. Many of those who attended Law and Government meetings discovered an interest in formally learning the tactics involved in debating issues, hence the Debate Club. Although much of this year's activity centers around organizing the club, Mrs. Matthews, the club's moderator comments, "Next year we intend to compete with other high schools. I think what debating does is extremely important for students. It allows them to critically analyze issues, formulate, and defend a particular point of view. It's learning at its best."

Both the Law and Government and the Debate Clubs provide St. Joseph's students with unique alternatives to the usual extra-curricular activities. They give students the opportunity to sharpen their critical skills necessary for college as well as giving them occasion to share time together.

KEEPING IN TUNE

The pure love of music drives more than one hundred students to climb the steep hill to "the house" three times a week for classes in band and concert choir. Their practice and performance can be heard throughout the day. "Hearing the band and chorus perform is certainly more peaceful than hearing the electronic music class Mr. Marchitelli used to teach," Mrs. Marcucci, who also teaches classes at "the house", laughed.

"This year the band and chorus are both the biggest that they have ever been in the school's history," Mr. Marchitelli remarked. The chorus has grown to about 90 members and the band to about 20. "I'm also really optimistic that they will continue to grow."

At the Christmas Concert, flutists Abigail Wood and Maya Mackiewicz concentrate on the sheet music. Along with the flutes, the band consists of clarinets, saxophones, trumpets, and various percussion instruments.

More opportunities now exist for the band and chorus to perform for the school than when the classes were held once a week during long period. So far, they have played at school masses, the eighth grade open house, the senior baccalaureate mass at St. Catherine's Church, and Christmas and spring concerts. This year's concert was unusually well attended, filling one side of the bleachers with parents and spectators. Shannon Devitt was greatly admired for her rendition of "O Holy Night."

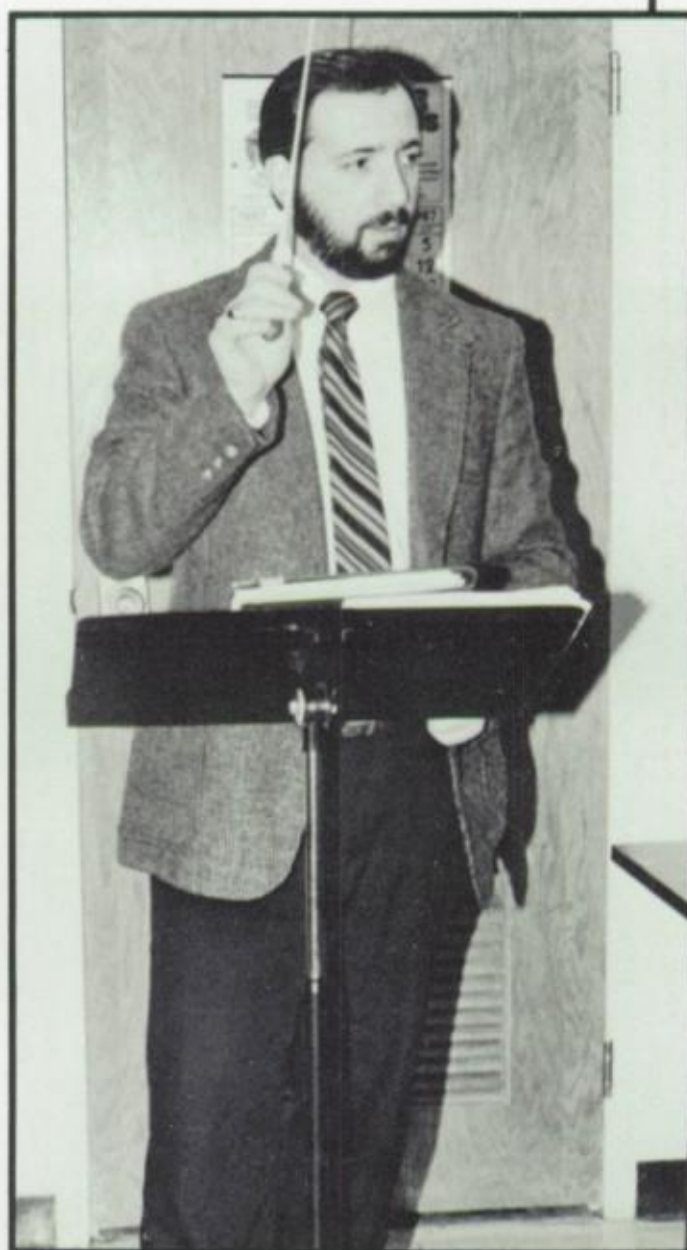

The high point of this year's band season was being invited to play at a conference at the Stamford Sheraton. "It was really exciting, finally being treated like real musicians," remarked Randy Santosio, a drummer.

The chorus was also invited to sing with the Notre Dame Glee Club at the Teacher's Institute in November at South Catholic High School in Norwalk. "Obviously their baritone section was a little stronger than ours," joked Paul Cipolla, one of the two boys in the St. Joe's choir.

One of the biggest problems both of these organizations face is the lack of membership over the span of four years, since credit is only offered to freshmen and sophomores. However, about ten juniors and seniors opted to stay in the class this year.

Everyone involved in the music program looks forward to the future continued success of the band and chorus. The band is scheduled to play at the Festival of the Arts in May and several members of the chorus will perform. Despite a few drawbacks, increased participation and growth in music seem inevitable.

With the increasing size of the band, the job of the conductor becomes more important. Band leader Mr. Marchitelli helps the members keep precise timing.

One of the highlights of "The King and I" was the dance between Alex Katreczko and Lynn Ciuci in "Shall We Dance?" They carried it out with professionalism and an enormous amount of energy.

Toni Delgado had a main role playing Princess Tup-tim, the king's unhappy young mistress. She expressed her discontent in her moving ballad "My Lord and Master".

ROYALTY IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Saint Joseph can't quite compare to the Royal Bangkok Academy but for three evenings in May 1987, the Rogers and Hammerstein musical "The King and I" came to life on the St. Joseph stage, under the direction of Mrs. Farrell, the production of Mrs. Brown, and the musical direction of Mr. Marchitelli.

The entire theatrical process commenced in February with days of grueling dramatic and musical auditions, followed by callbacks for those considered for lead roles. Practices started immediately and continued on an almost daily basis for three months. Mrs. Farrell remarked, "Because of the large number of children and dancers required, we were able to involve a larger number of people than usual."

Alex Katreczko and Lynn Ciuci, both of whom graduated last year, procured the lead roles of the King of Siam and Anna Leonowens, a British schoolteacher hired to teach the King's children. Other main roles were played by Kevin Degnan, seniors Kathy Marsan and Toni Delgado, and junior Hugh Welch.

One scene of the play consisted entirely of a ballet and thus utilized an eighteen member dance chorus. The "Small House of Uncle Thomas" ballet was choreographed by Christine Donahue, who also danced the lead. The dancers practiced diligently, often at homes or in classrooms.

To create an authentic Siamese atmosphere, steps had to be taken. Under the tutelage of Mrs. Marusa, the makeup committee learned how to create the illusion of oriental eyes. Elaborate backdrops and scenery had to be created and painted and costumes, including hoops skirts for Anna and the wives, had to be rented. "The sets for 'The King and I' were definitely more involved than previous plays, but I think it was worth it," admitted Matt Hubner, stage crew manager.

The audiences were extremely responsive and the gym was filled to near capacity every night. Spectators were almost overwhelmed by the professionalism exhibited by the actors. One commented, "Alex's performance was so authentic even Yul Brynner would have been proud."

EXPANDING FRENCH CULTURE

A huge sign proclaiming "Bonjour" and posters and signs of French things greet the visitor to Mrs. Marcucci's classroom at the House. Many St. Joe's students have never seen this portion of the school and are surprised to find a classroom so colorfully decorated. About thirty students make the trek up the hill voluntarily to expand their knowledge of French culture four times a year at French Club meetings. Mrs. Marcucci is the advisor of this organization.

The French Club year traditionally starts with the induction of new members in October. A French proverb is assigned to each student, who must memorize, recite, and translate it in front of the other members. Pins proclaiming "J'aime le français" meaning "I love French" are distributed.

With the Christmas season comes the French Club Christmas meeting. After an explanation of French customs surrounding the holiday, one shoe is left behind as the members proceed to the music room to learn French Christmas carols. "It was kind of interesting finding out that they sing a lot of the same songs that we do, but with different words, of course," commented Sharon Laidlaw. Upon returning to the French room, the shoes have been filled by Père Noel, the French equivalent of Santa Claus, with stockings containing candy and other treasures.

A holiday world-renowned because of its great celebration by the French is Mardi Gras. The French Club celebrated its own smaller version by making masks of French characters and playing French word games.

David McMahon, treasurer, admitted, "I had no idea how much work the officers of the French Club do. We are one of the only clubs that sends out letters to its members and collects dues personally in home-rooms, but I enjoy the personal interaction."

Spring 1988 brings a new idea for an activity: a trip to a French restaurant. Although only in the planning stages, this trip is greatly anticipated by the members and will hopefully start a new tradition.

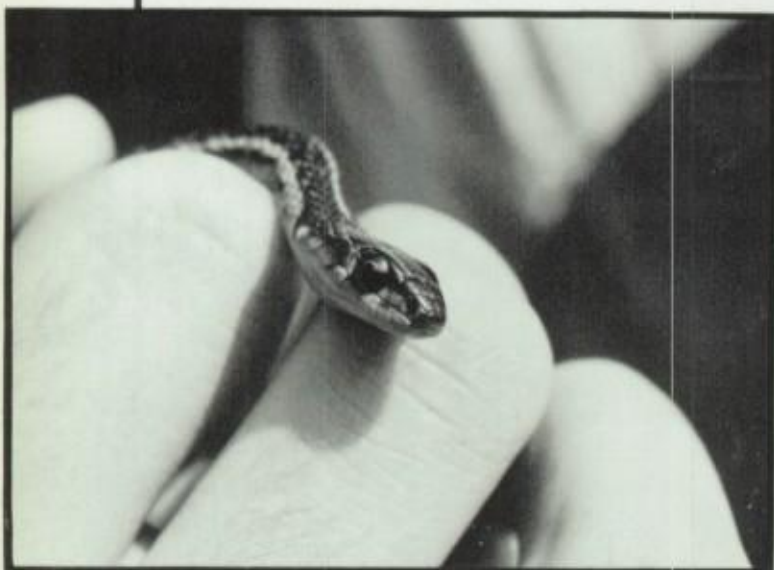

The final meeting of the year and the send-off for the Seniors was "le pique-nique", held on the lawn outside the House. Members contributed French bread, French candies, and other assorted foods to polish off their "French year".

At the Mardi Gras meeting, sophomore Michelle Blanchard holds her mask in front of her face. Part of the meeting consisted of having the other members guess the identities of the masks.

During an informative wildlife meeting Sheila Cummings and Dina Cowden are fascinated as they hold and pet Mr. Walsh's pet owl.

This snake, found on St. Joes' Campus, provides one more specimen for observation. The Wildlife Club gives its members the opportunity for hands-on experience with animals.

BRINGING THE OUTDOORS IN

Pizza and snakes. Chips and hawks. What do these things have in common? One can find them at any meeting of the Wildlife Club. Even though this is the first year for the club, it has become very popular among the students. Many students feel this is because of Mr. Walsh, who originated and organized the club. As Clare Rose said, "What really makes the club work is Mr. Walsh. He goes out of his way to make the meetings entertaining as well as informative." Mr. Walsh brings many animals or slides of animals to the meetings. This helps the students appreciate and learn about the different types of animals. Mr.

Walsh commented, "The purpose of the club is to promote an interest in wildlife and its conservation. Students receive first-hand experience handling wildlife and become involved in outdoor activities like hiking."

Each meeting has a theme, such as owls and hawks, reptiles, turtles, or snakes. Mr. Walsh explains the habits of each type of animal including how each survives and functions. The students are allowed to touch and hold each of the different types of animals. Dorothy Keane noted, "I like this club because it is new and unusual. It exposed me to many strange animals I wouldn't normally have gotten the opportunity to see." The club has planned some trips to go hiking so that the students may see animals in their natural habitat. They also hope to visit the Mystic Aquarium to observe various sea animals.

An important goal of this club is to show students the great losses that are occurring because of extinction. As Tricia Cummings said, "At the meetings, Mr. Walsh calls our attention to animals that are on the verge of extinction. Not enough people take ecology seriously and many animals are paying for it." Mr. Walsh has proven that he knows a great deal about biology and animal life since he cares about animals. He has given the members of his club a greater understanding of "the outdoor life" — Wildlife.

INDUCTION TO A NEW CULTURE

The room is divided by a huge gap. Old and new are separated. One by one a candidate steps forward into the barrenness with trembling fears. Aiming for perfect pronunciation, each offers his proverb, first in Spanish and then in English. Taunting "elders" ask for a repetition, louder and clearer. When satisfied the old members consent. The new member, the former candidate, crosses over the bridge to community and belonging.

Traditionally the first official meeting of the Spanish Club begins with this induction of members. After all have said their proverb, the president of the Spanish Club touches the new members with the Sword of El Cid, Spain's national hero, saying: "Usted es un miembro del Club de espanol," meaning "You are a member of the Spanish Club." From here the festivities begin. There is always a party with a table full of refreshments. This year the ceremony took place around Halloween. The new members dressed for the occasion. The best costumes won the opportunity for a strike at the piñata. Maureen Dully, sophomore, dressed up as a raisin. She said of the ceremony, "It was nerve-recking, but worth it because the party afterward was fun." Finally Mary DiJulia, dressed as a cat, broke the piñata and there was a scramble for scattered candy.

The Christmas party is also a tradition. This year students made presentations on Christmas in various countries around the world such as Germany, Italy, Puerto Rico, France and Spain. Mrs. Vazquez, the director of the club, considers it an extension of the classroom. She tries to incorporate culture and learning into the meetings.

This year the officers, president, Amy Beckert, vice-president, Jen Smith, secretary, Chris Guarino, and treasurer, Jodi Raithel, along with Mrs. Vazquez are planning a trip to New York City. Mrs. Vazquez would like to bring one bus load of students to see a Spanish play, hoping to bring enrichment and appreciation to our understanding of the language.

Also in the spring they plan to have an "international food day." This project will take much work and strong participation from the members to be a success.

The Spanish Club is one of the largest organizations in the school. The meetings are both educational and fun — a time to turn the students' understanding of Spain inside-out to enjoy the language and the culture.

A tradition at the Spanish Club's initiation party is the piñata. Mary DiJulia attempts to be the first to break it open and begin the festivities.

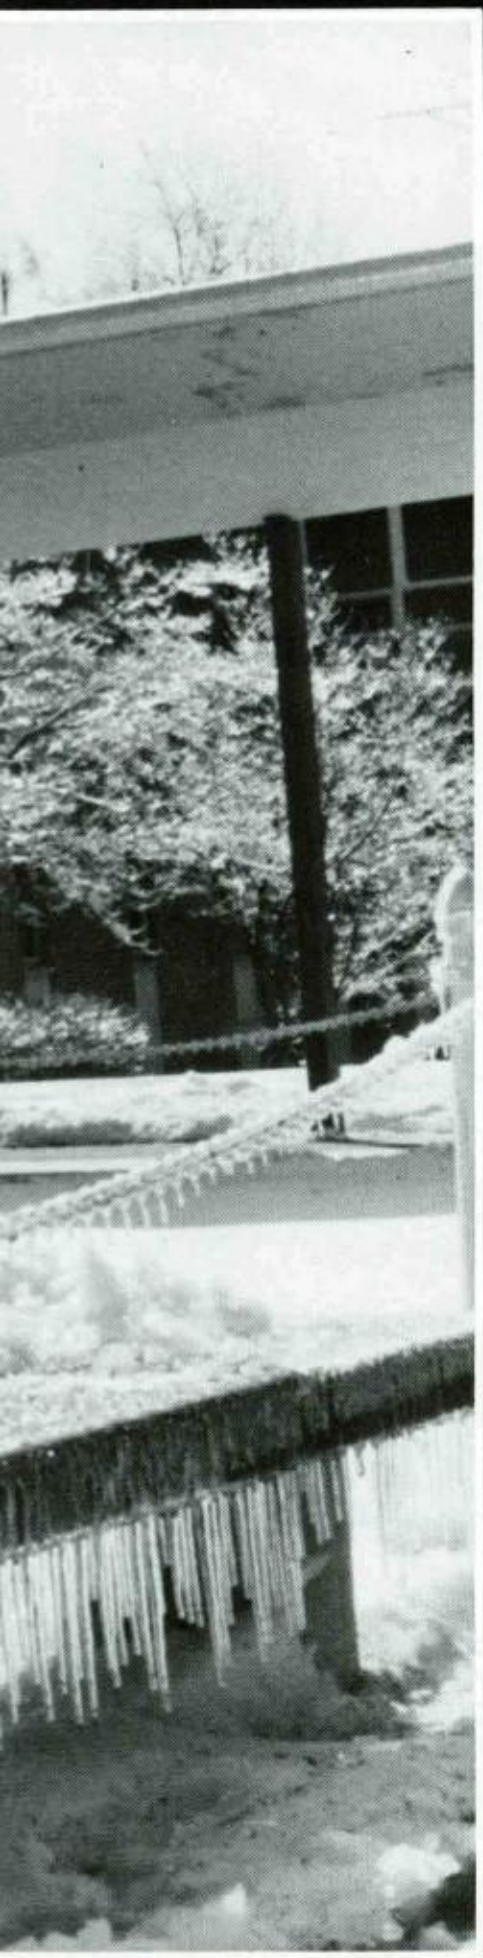

Relieved after having completed a phrase in Spanish, Claire Fettig smiles as she gains membership into the Spanish Club at the Induction Ceremony.

Winter weather sometimes brings with it a cancellation or a delay. Being out of school, students usually miss seeing the beauty of the campus that comes just after a fresh snowfall.

Outside Support COMMUNITY

Installing new bleachers this past summer was a process that turned the gym inside out. Joe Dzurenda, Rich Ondek and Rick Viola worked hard to finish the job by the opening of school.

Outside the halls and beyond the boundaries of campus life, a very special segment seems ever present these days. They are the silent supporters.

The bankers. The shop owners. The small businessmen and women. The corporations.

But from an inside point-of-view, the largest support for this publication seemed to come from within.

Over 90% of all ads sold this year were in some way directly related to student efforts.

All thirty-two home-rooms purchased some space in the ad section while countless groups pooled money to buy up photo space, crack one smile and find themselves immortalized in print. This year's Senior Sign Out section was another success. Thousands of cryptic remarks filtered into the ad department around Christmas time. In most cases, they were final goodbyes between high school friends who knew they may never see each other again until some distant reunion in '93 or '98 or 2003 or beyond.

"Gathering up ads was one of those jobs that never seem to end," remarked Mary Mahoney, ads editor, as the deadline closed in at Christmas time. For others it was an endless detail of billing, recording, laying out and photographing. "It's hard to believe so many kids support our year-book. I guess that's why it's so huge a book" commented Karen Timmeny.

But what seemed to make it so very special this year, unlike any other year before, was the glitter of the Inside Scoop. This segment, flopped into every other corner of every other spread, seemed to say it all from 4th Lunch Blues to Hurtin' So Good.

It was a special thank you from everyone in here to everyone out there.

"Thousands of cryptic remarks filtered into the ad department around Christmas time."

HURTIN' SO GOOD

“Slowly as I peel off the layers of sweats from that cold spring afternoon, my body aches with pain. Softball practice has begun. Taking off my jacket doesn't seem to cause a problem, but when I get to my socks- look out! Sharp, excruciating pain bursts from every muscle. It's a feeling that means 'let's play Ball!' ”

"All things
excellent are as difficult as they are rare."

Quote from the 17th Century

Your car is important to you. It represents a large investment. Knowing this we would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the trust you showed in us by choosing our company to restore your car.

The exacting performance of excellence is as rare today as it was back in the 17th century. We take pride in the combination of our experience, our judgement and our technical-artistic skills. If you have need of our service in the future, we will do everything in our power to justify your continued trust.

TESTING DAZE

“Entering the classroom exhausted and confused, I realize the six hours of long and rigorous studying I engaged in last night were a total waste of time. As he places the test on the desk, I search frantically for just one problem that I may have some clue how to do. And, of course, I can’t even find one.”

THE FALL

“Opening the door revealed the icy path from the house to the school. Mentally denying the possibility that I would be yet another victim of winter’s wrath, I started down the path at the pace of an injured turtle. Inching along, pressures mounted and the last thing I saw before the Fall was the shocked and helpless faces of my peers.”

“As I race into the parking lot, I keep thinking, ‘If I’m late Mr. Roach will kill me.’ Closing my door, the bell sounds and I pick up my pace, praying its only first bell. Finally reaching the hall, I see that its empty, though my homeroom door is still ajar. Too late, for the door slams shut, banishing me again to Mrs. Fry’s late line.”

4TH LUNCH BLUES

“As the teacher drags on about some algebric expression, my stomach reminds me that last lunch is only a few minutes away. Class is dismissed and I drag my lifeless body into the crowded lunchroom. Today's Thursday- that means croissants. But as I finally reach the front of the frustrating line, my eyes fall on a barren tray. Looks like a dried-out hamburger again today.”

THE ROAD SHOW

“Although you’ve stocked up on all the bare necessities- this month’s issue of ‘Glamour,’ a one pound bag of Hershey minatures, and a couple of Diet Pepsi’s- nothing quite prepares you for a two hour ride to St. Bernard High School on a bus that smells like old sweatsocks. However, as soccer managers, the ride gives us a chance to know the players better, as well as the entire Uncasville McDonald’s staff. ”

12 O'CLOCK RUSH

“Rushing to my locker, I blindly grab a few books, hoping at least a few are ones I need for homework. Then I grab a few friends and race out to my car. Driving recklessly over the hills of Primrose and through not-needed stop signs, we finally arrive at our destination-Burger King- only to find no parking spaces and a line out the door. I guess it'll be Villa pizza again.”

BEING HEMMED IN

“As Sister Catherine turned the corner, I realized that there was no way out . . . time to improvise. I give my skirt a quick tug and a wiggle and bend down at the nearest available locker. ‘Dear, come here!’ I pray that the skirt has miraculously lengthened, but I’m doomed to that all-too-familiar cry, ‘Look at that skirt!’”

Our dearest Dana,

CONGRATULATIONS We are so very proud of you, as always.

God has blessed you with many special gifts, and your accomplishments speak for themselves. As your parents, we are especially thankful for the beautiful, caring person you have become. Your laughter brightens the room, and your ability to laugh at yourself shows a strong sense of self esteem that will get you through many of life's trials.

Success will be yours, of that we have no doubt. Our prayer is that the love and happiness you generate to others will come back to you.

Thank you for the joy you have brought to us. We love you.

year we'll do the gondola. I'm going to miss you guys! You're the best friends I ever had We've walked both sides of every street. Through all kinds of windy weather. But that was never defeat as long as we could walk together. So there's no need for turning back, cuz all roads lead to where we stand and I believe we've walked them all, no matter what we may have planned by Don McLean-(on C.D. Kate) Thanks Mom and Dad

Summer practices can prove to be both an exhausting yet exhilarating experience. Tom Dalling takes advantage of a free moment to share a laugh with his friends.

INDEX

FOCUS ON DEADLINES:

Always the hub of some activity, the Alumni Office serves as the focal point for getting a number of activities completed on time: yearbook development, prom plans, alumni gatherings as well as the countdown to graduation. Mr. Norman DeTullio chats with Junior Phillis Nicolai.

FOCUS ON SUNSHINE.

As the final days of Indian Summer closed in, the school community allowed the traditional Field Day Events to serve as a final celebration of a summer activity. For Mr. Ken Mayo, Religion Department Chairman and football coach, it marked the beginning of another busy season.

FOCUS ON SETBACKS.

During Junior year John Campbell was a standout as one of the football team's most valuable players. An injury during the '87 season cut into his playing time. Kevin Geigetter checks out the new cast.

FOCUSED IN...

Spring, 1988. With the last of the film allotment spent and the final details of the index put aside, nothing seemed to be forgotten.

Plenty of changes had taken place. From an inside-out point-of-view, we had gotten the picture (over 5000 photos in all) and one thing was certain: inside out was probably nothing more than an angle in the brain, a crooked smile that started in the soul and worked its way into the spirit of things.

As senior Cindy Evanko put it: "Seeing things from the inside is all in the mind. You only see what you want to see. But the harder you look, the clearer the next task seems to be."

Spring, 1988. Many had taken advantage of seeing the world differently, if only for a moment. For those who took life seriously enough in that same razor sharp moment what they were probably seeing was a brightly colored vision of themselves.

From day one with dust on the lens and the summer sun just over our shoulder, reflection was one of those unpredictable things that could only be imagined.

Now, twelve months later, the blur of details still lingered. Nothing was ever really clear.

But from somewhere deep in the heart of this high school year - the picture of 1988 was clearer and focused in.

"inside-out was probably nothing more than an angle in the brain ..."

FOCUS ON DILIGENCE.

For some the school day did not end at the sound of the 2:00 bell. John DeHart, found himself pushing the mop long after his classmates had departed.

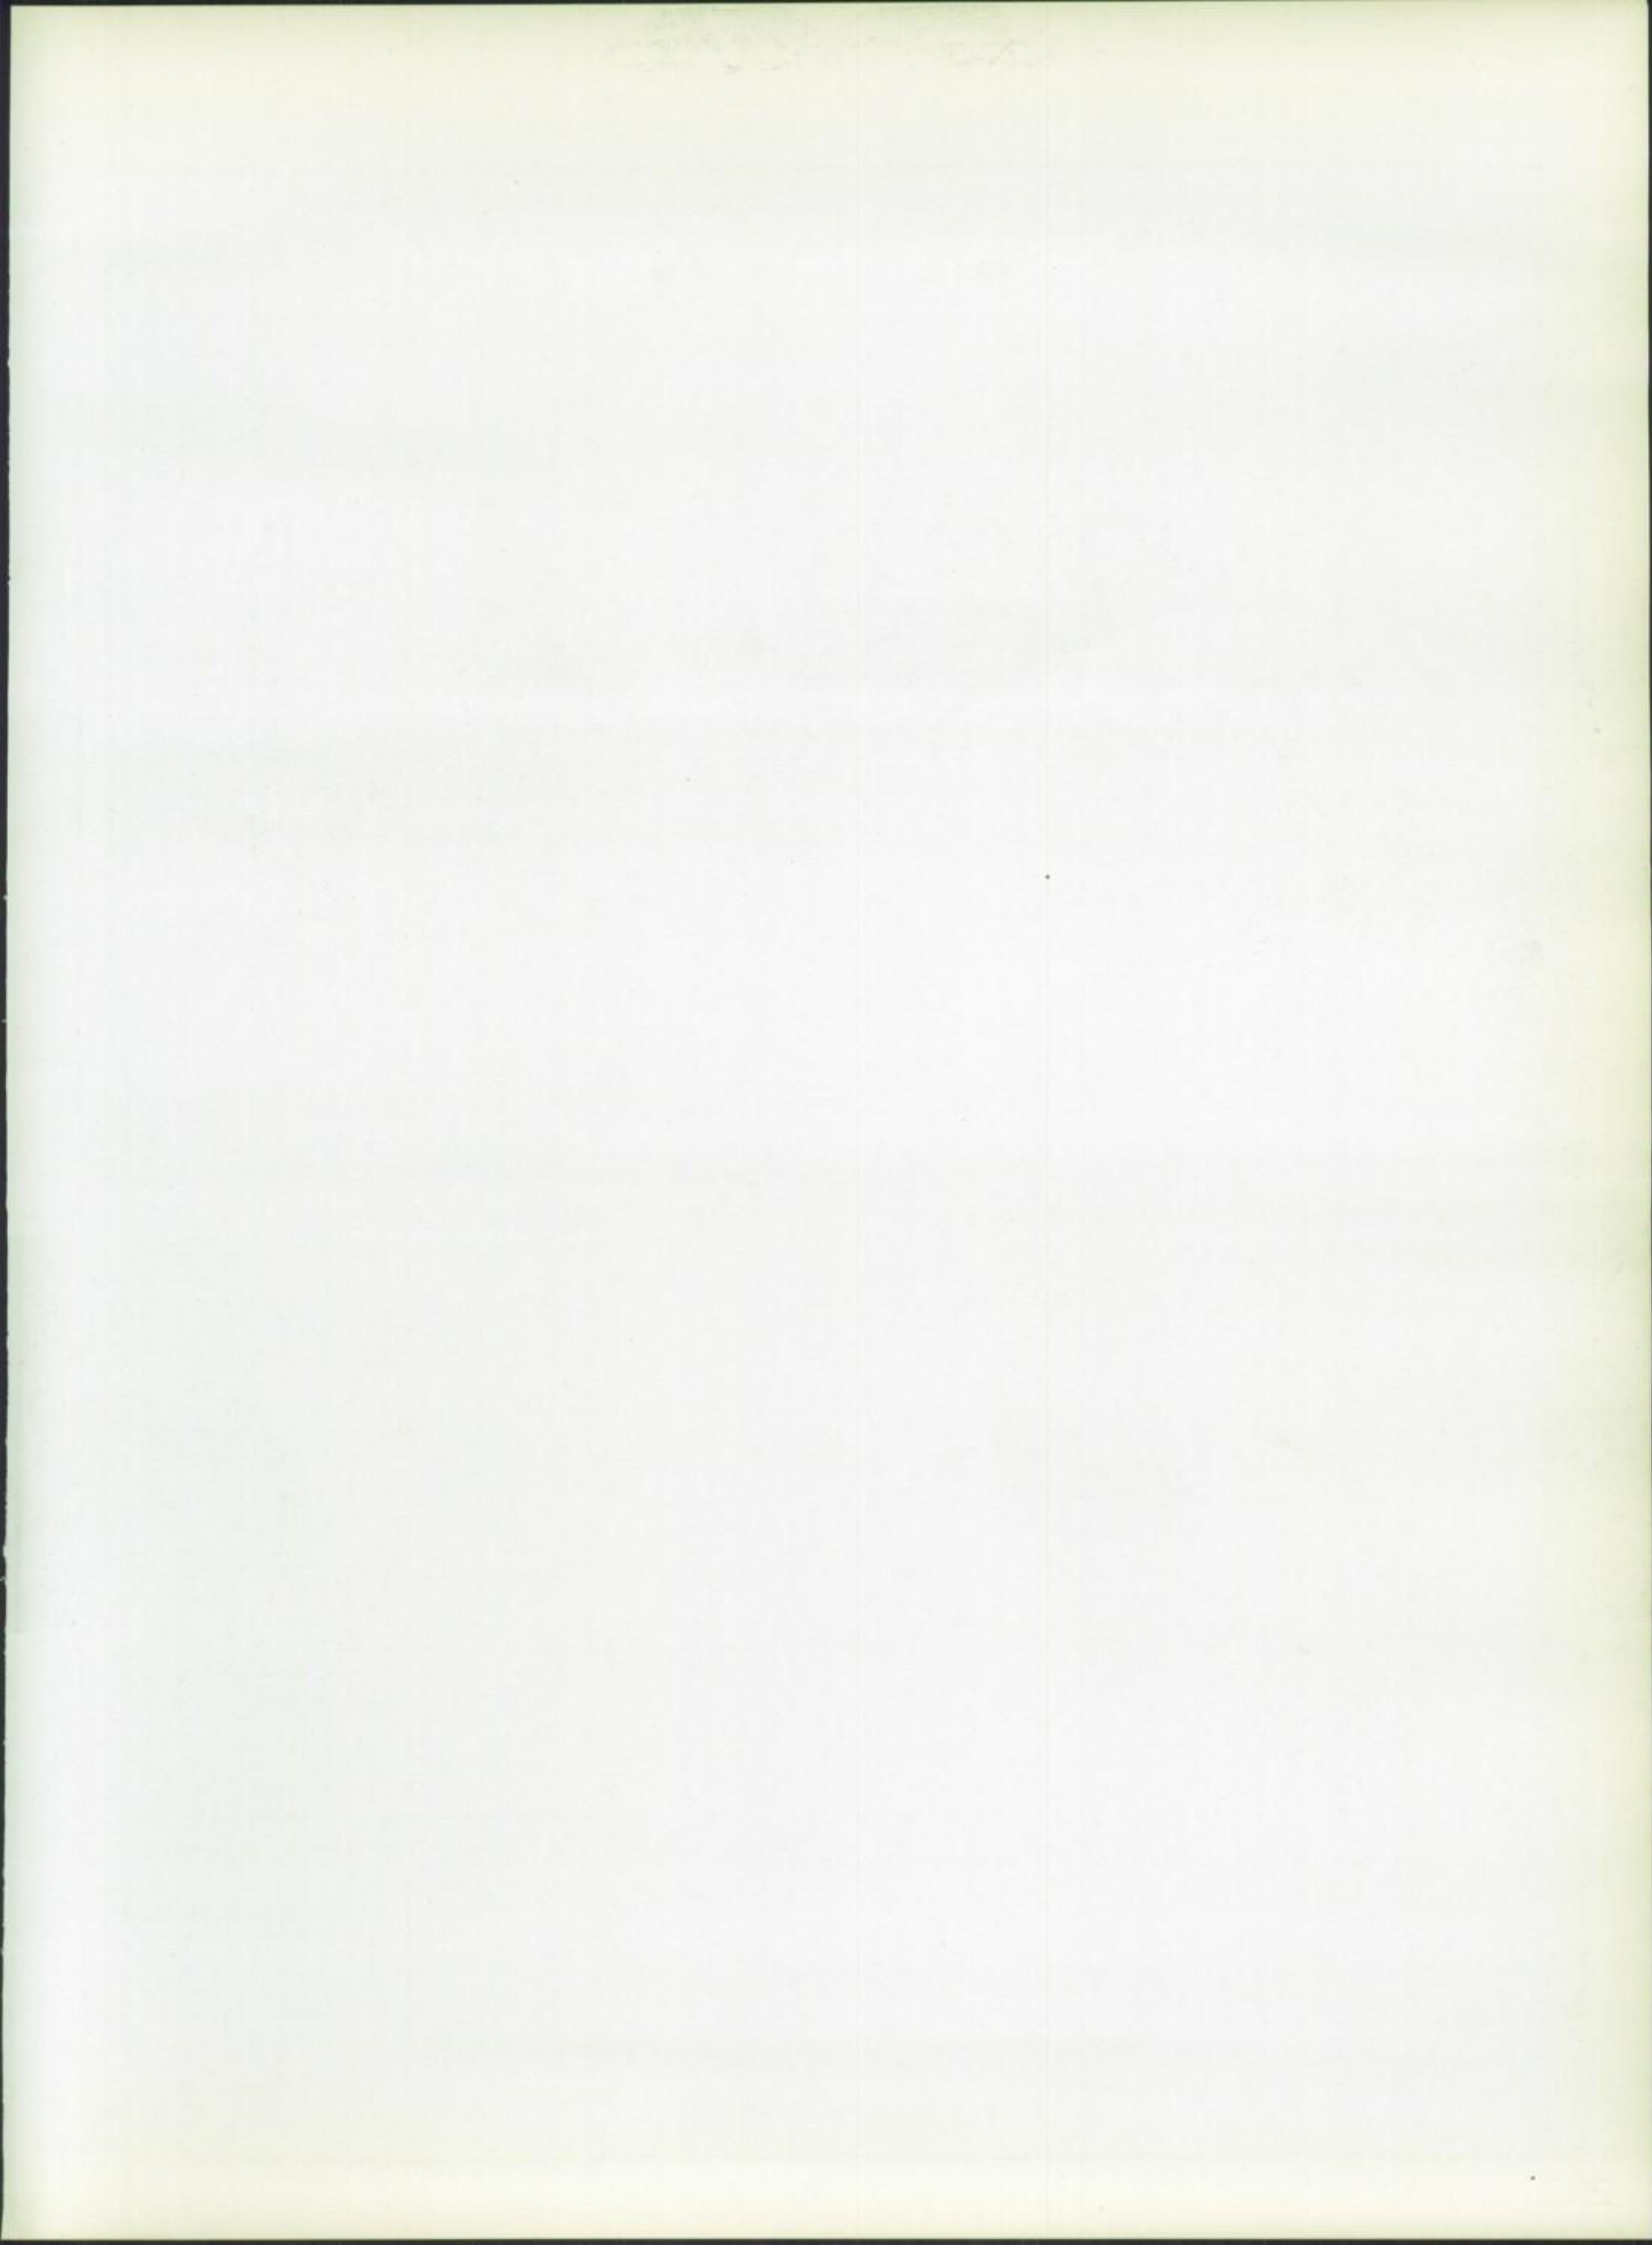

FOCUS ON SMILES.

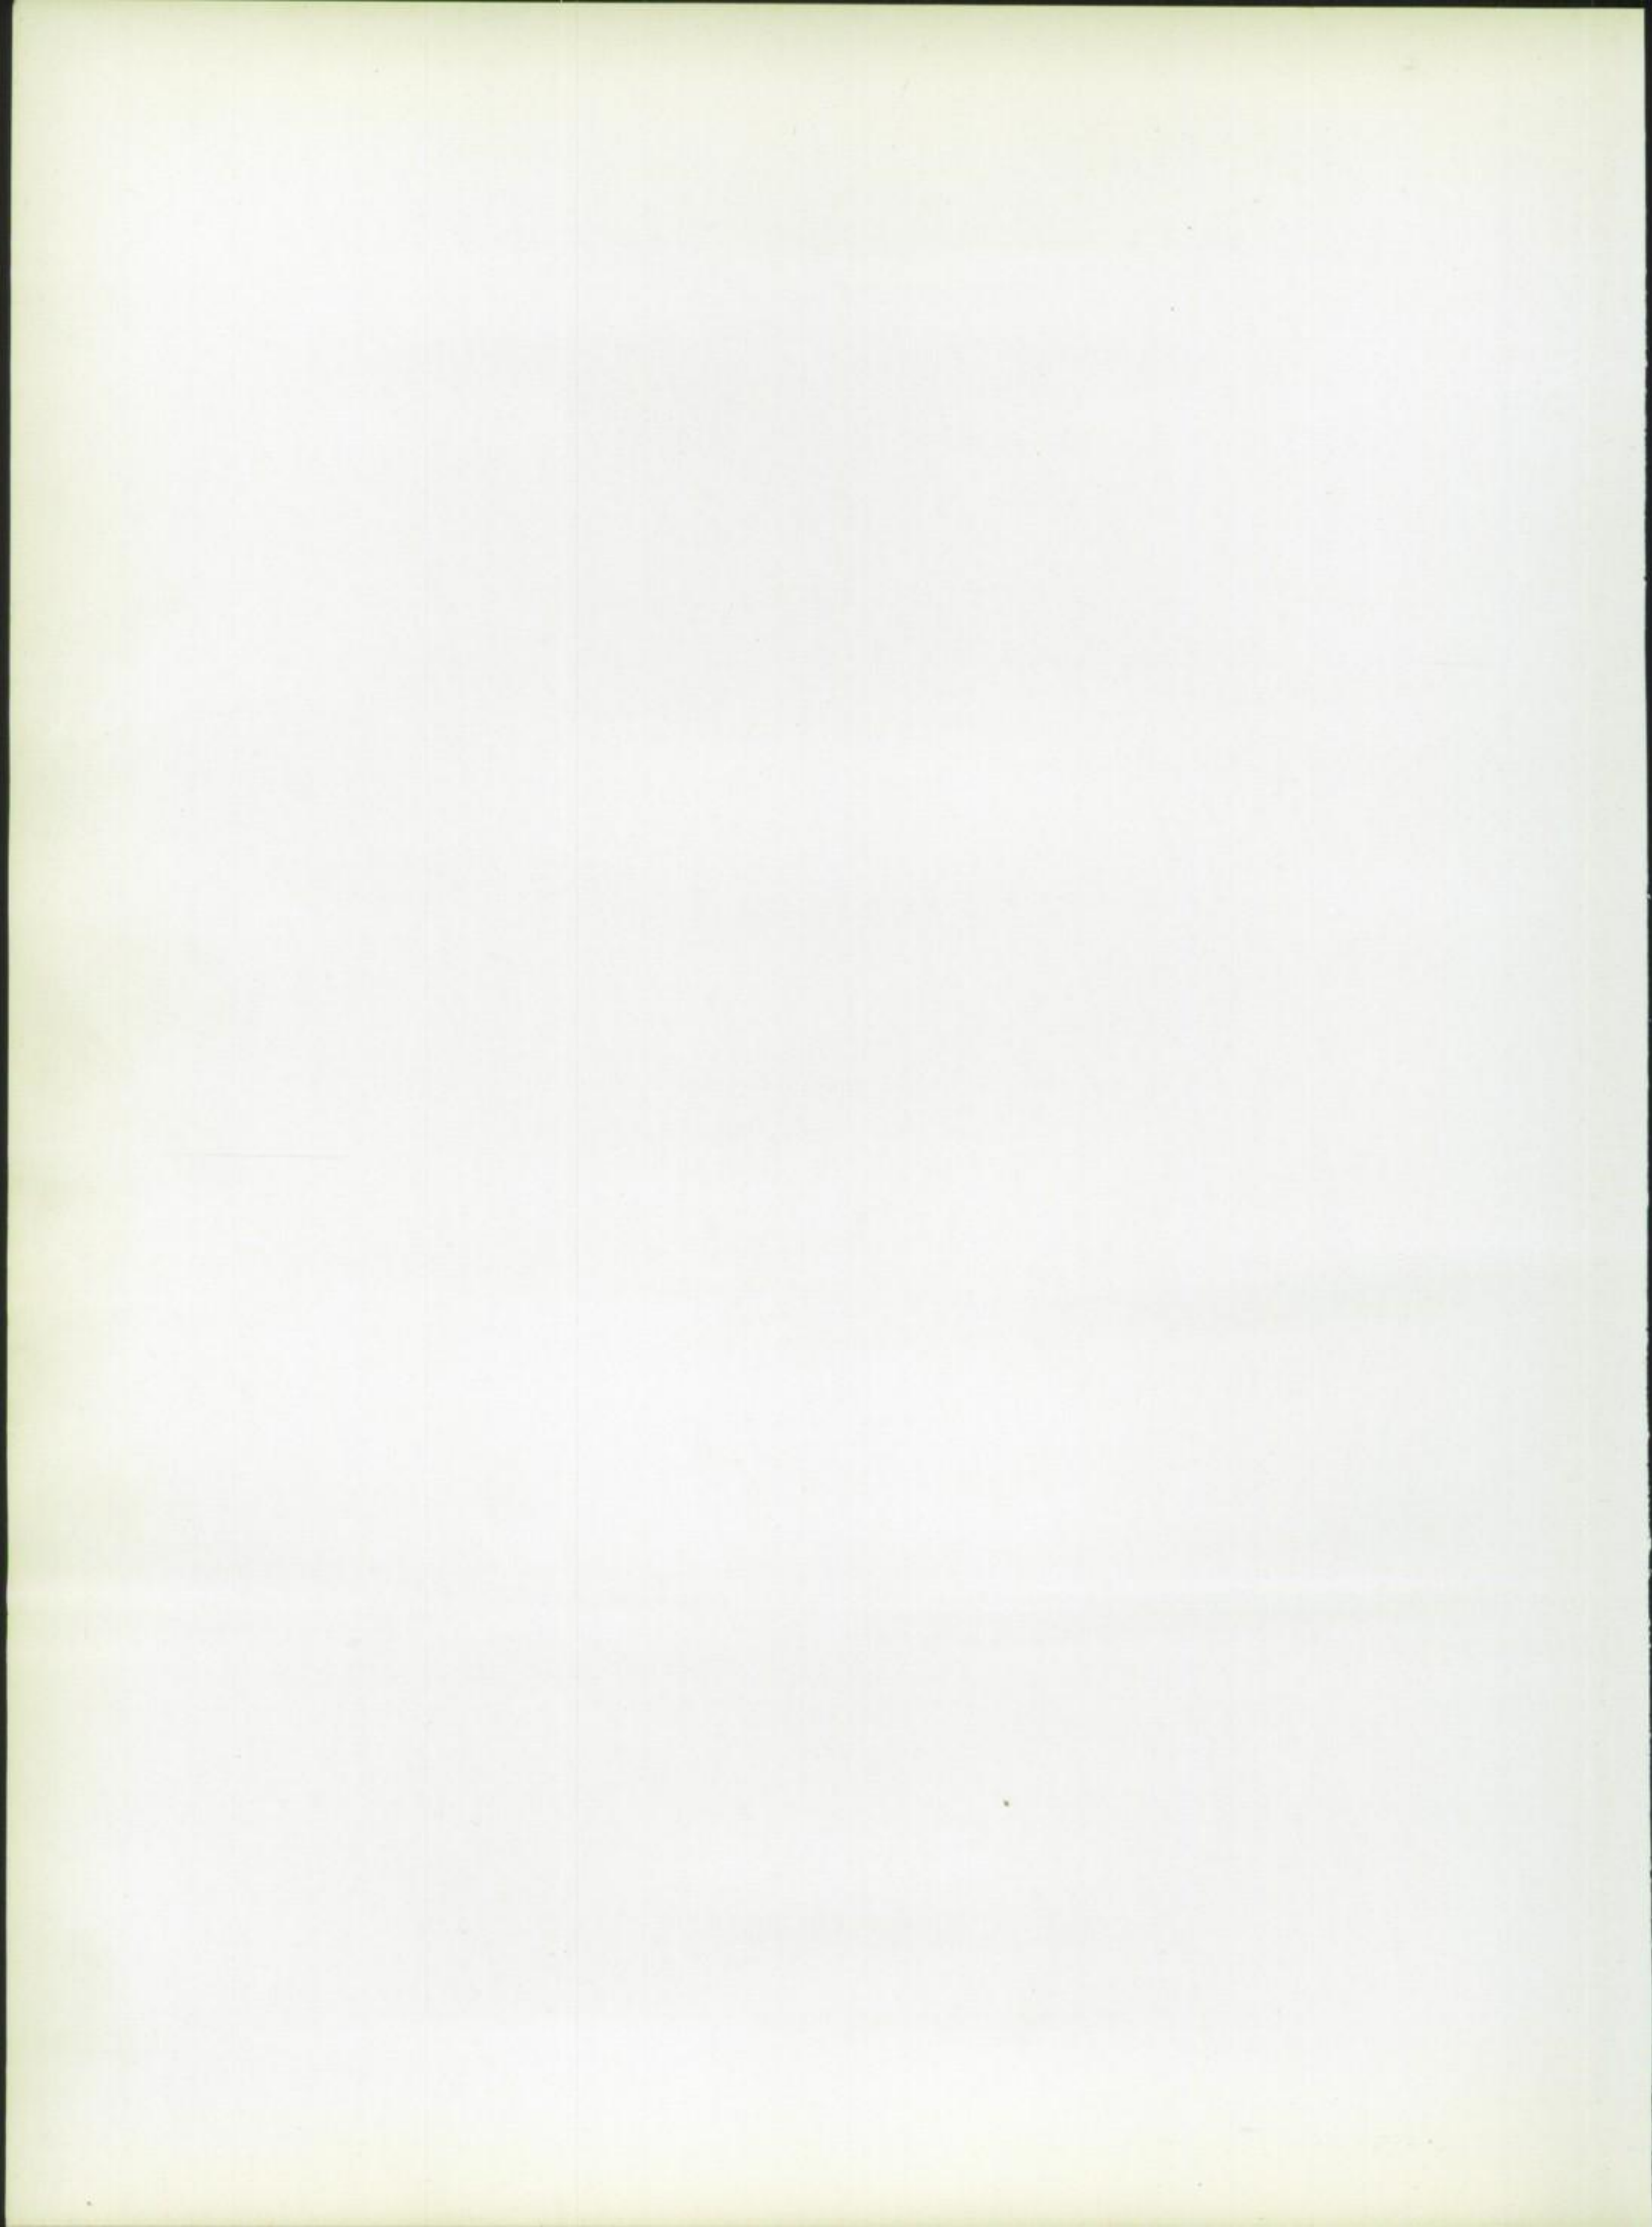

For Sophomores Sharon Donohue and Jessica Janczewski getting the picture was simply a matter of attitude. Like so many students, friendship and everything else associated with school life made life in the learning lane a bit clearer.

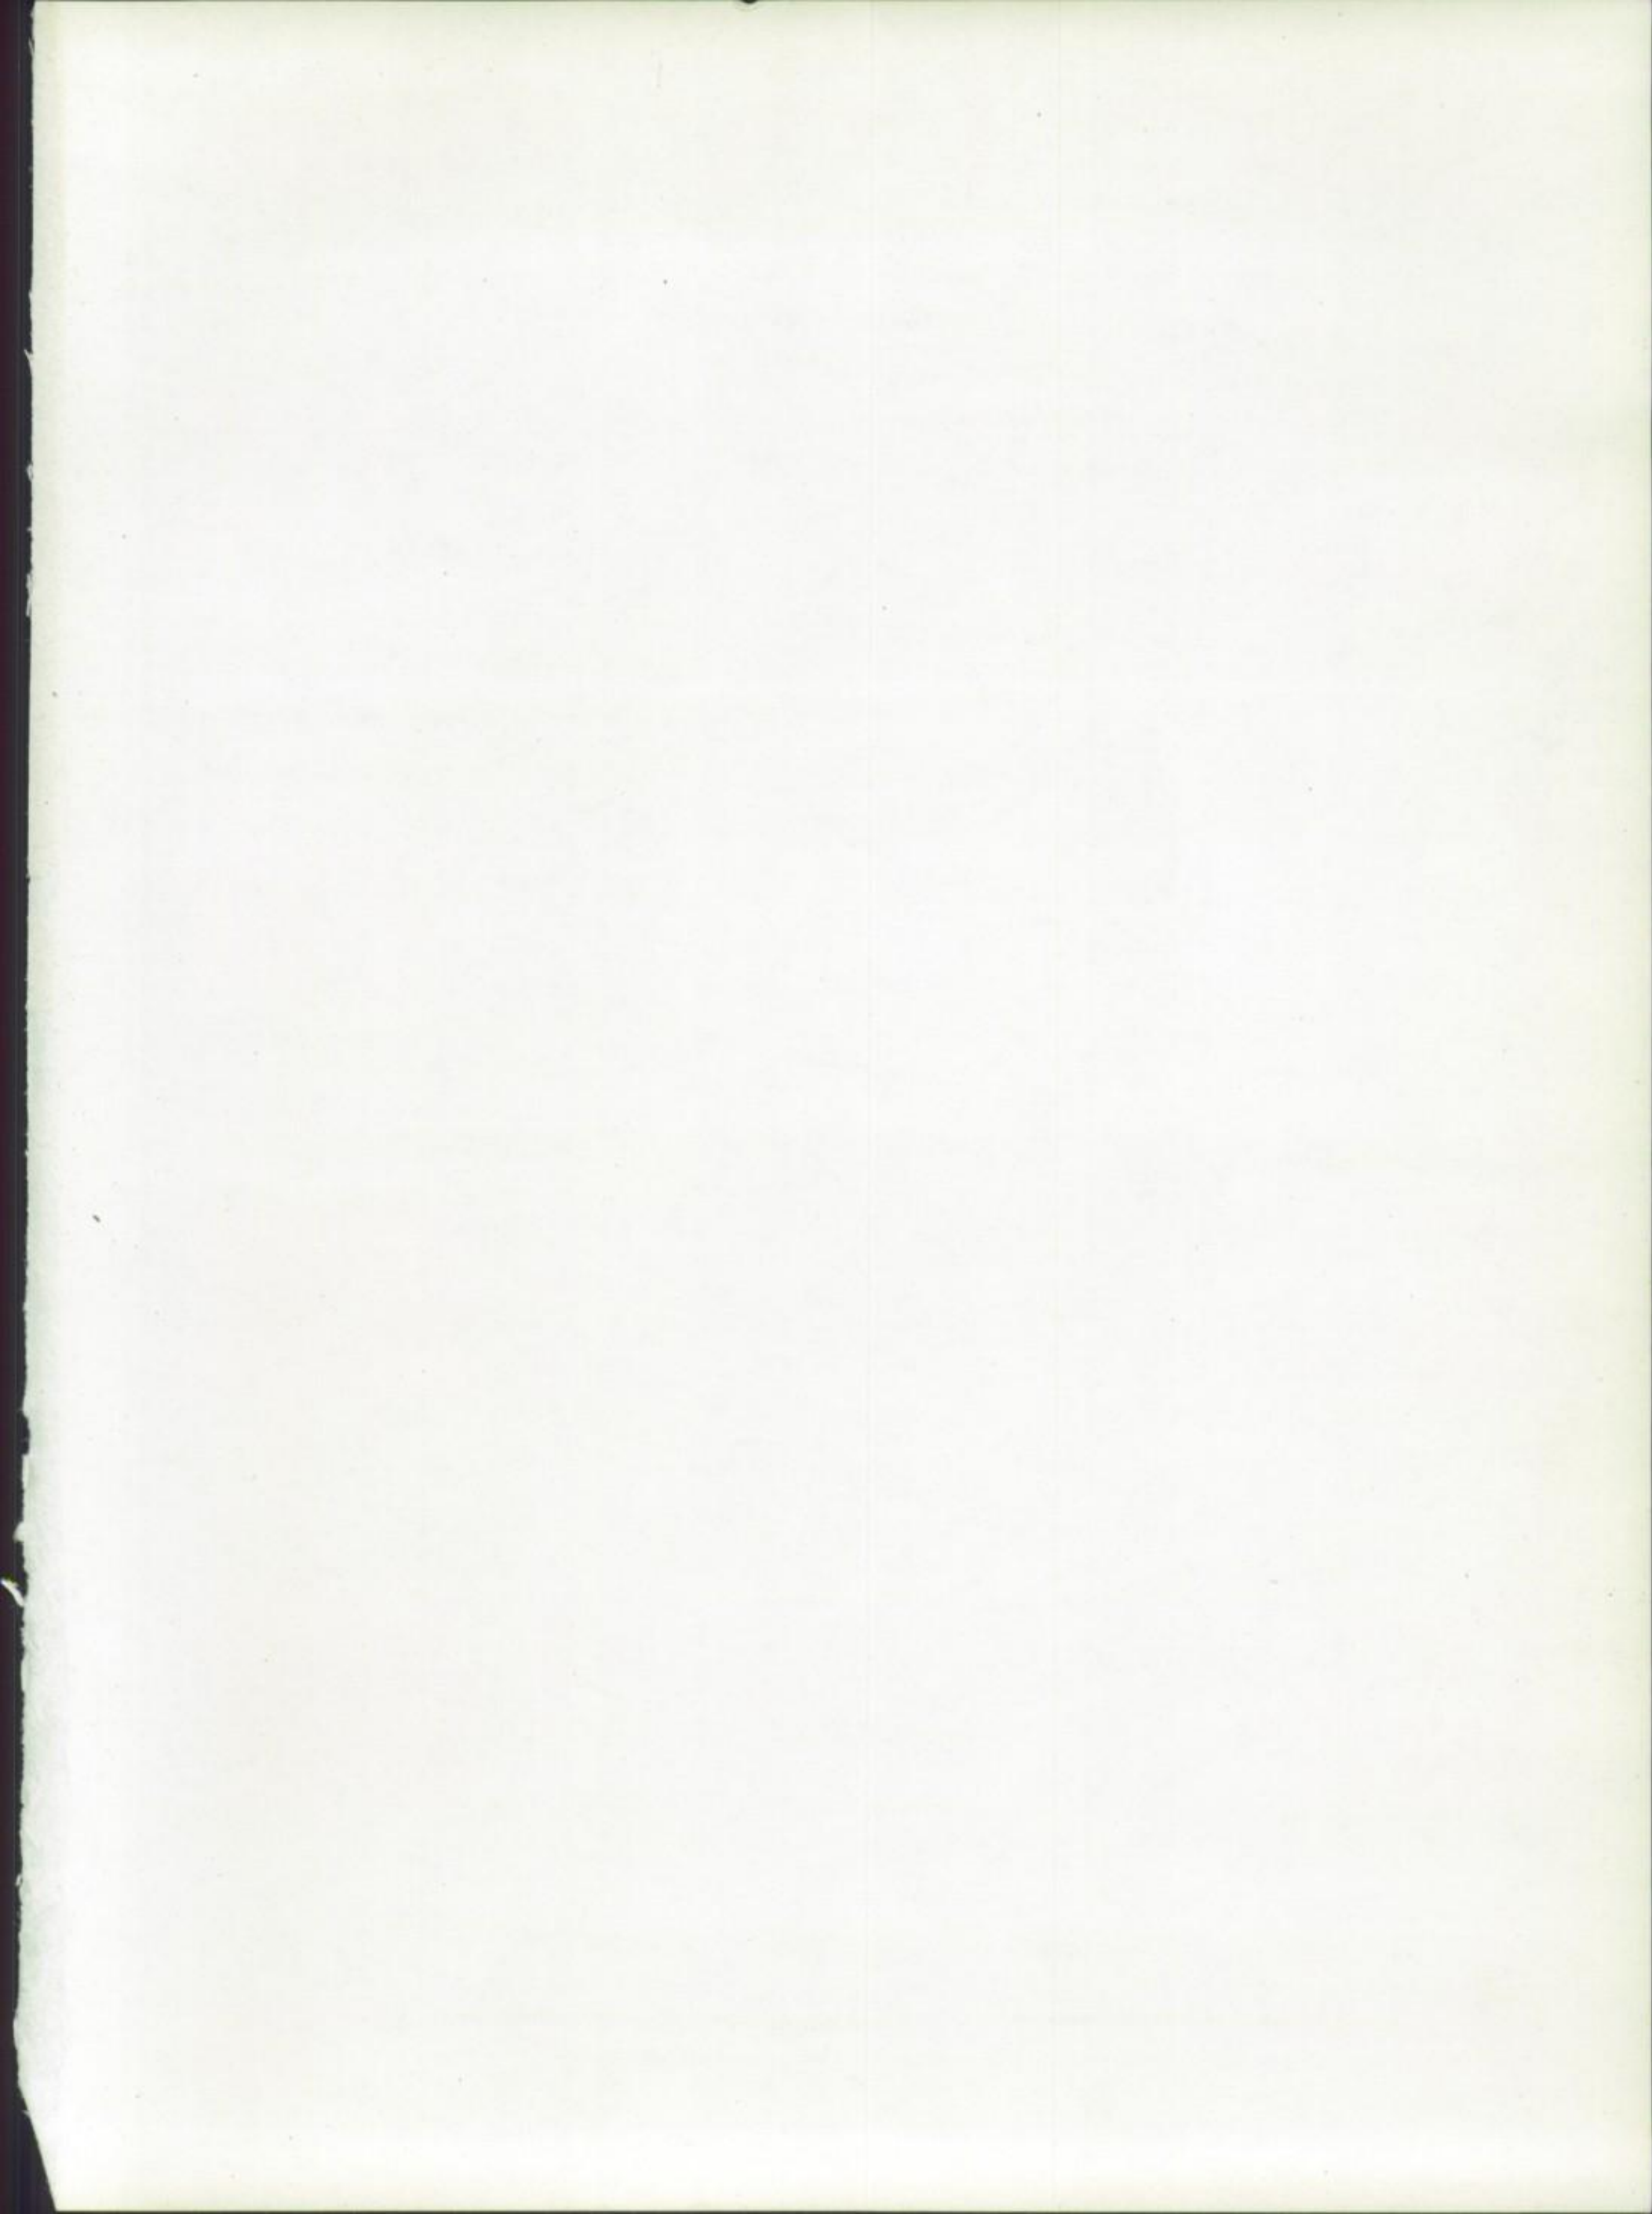

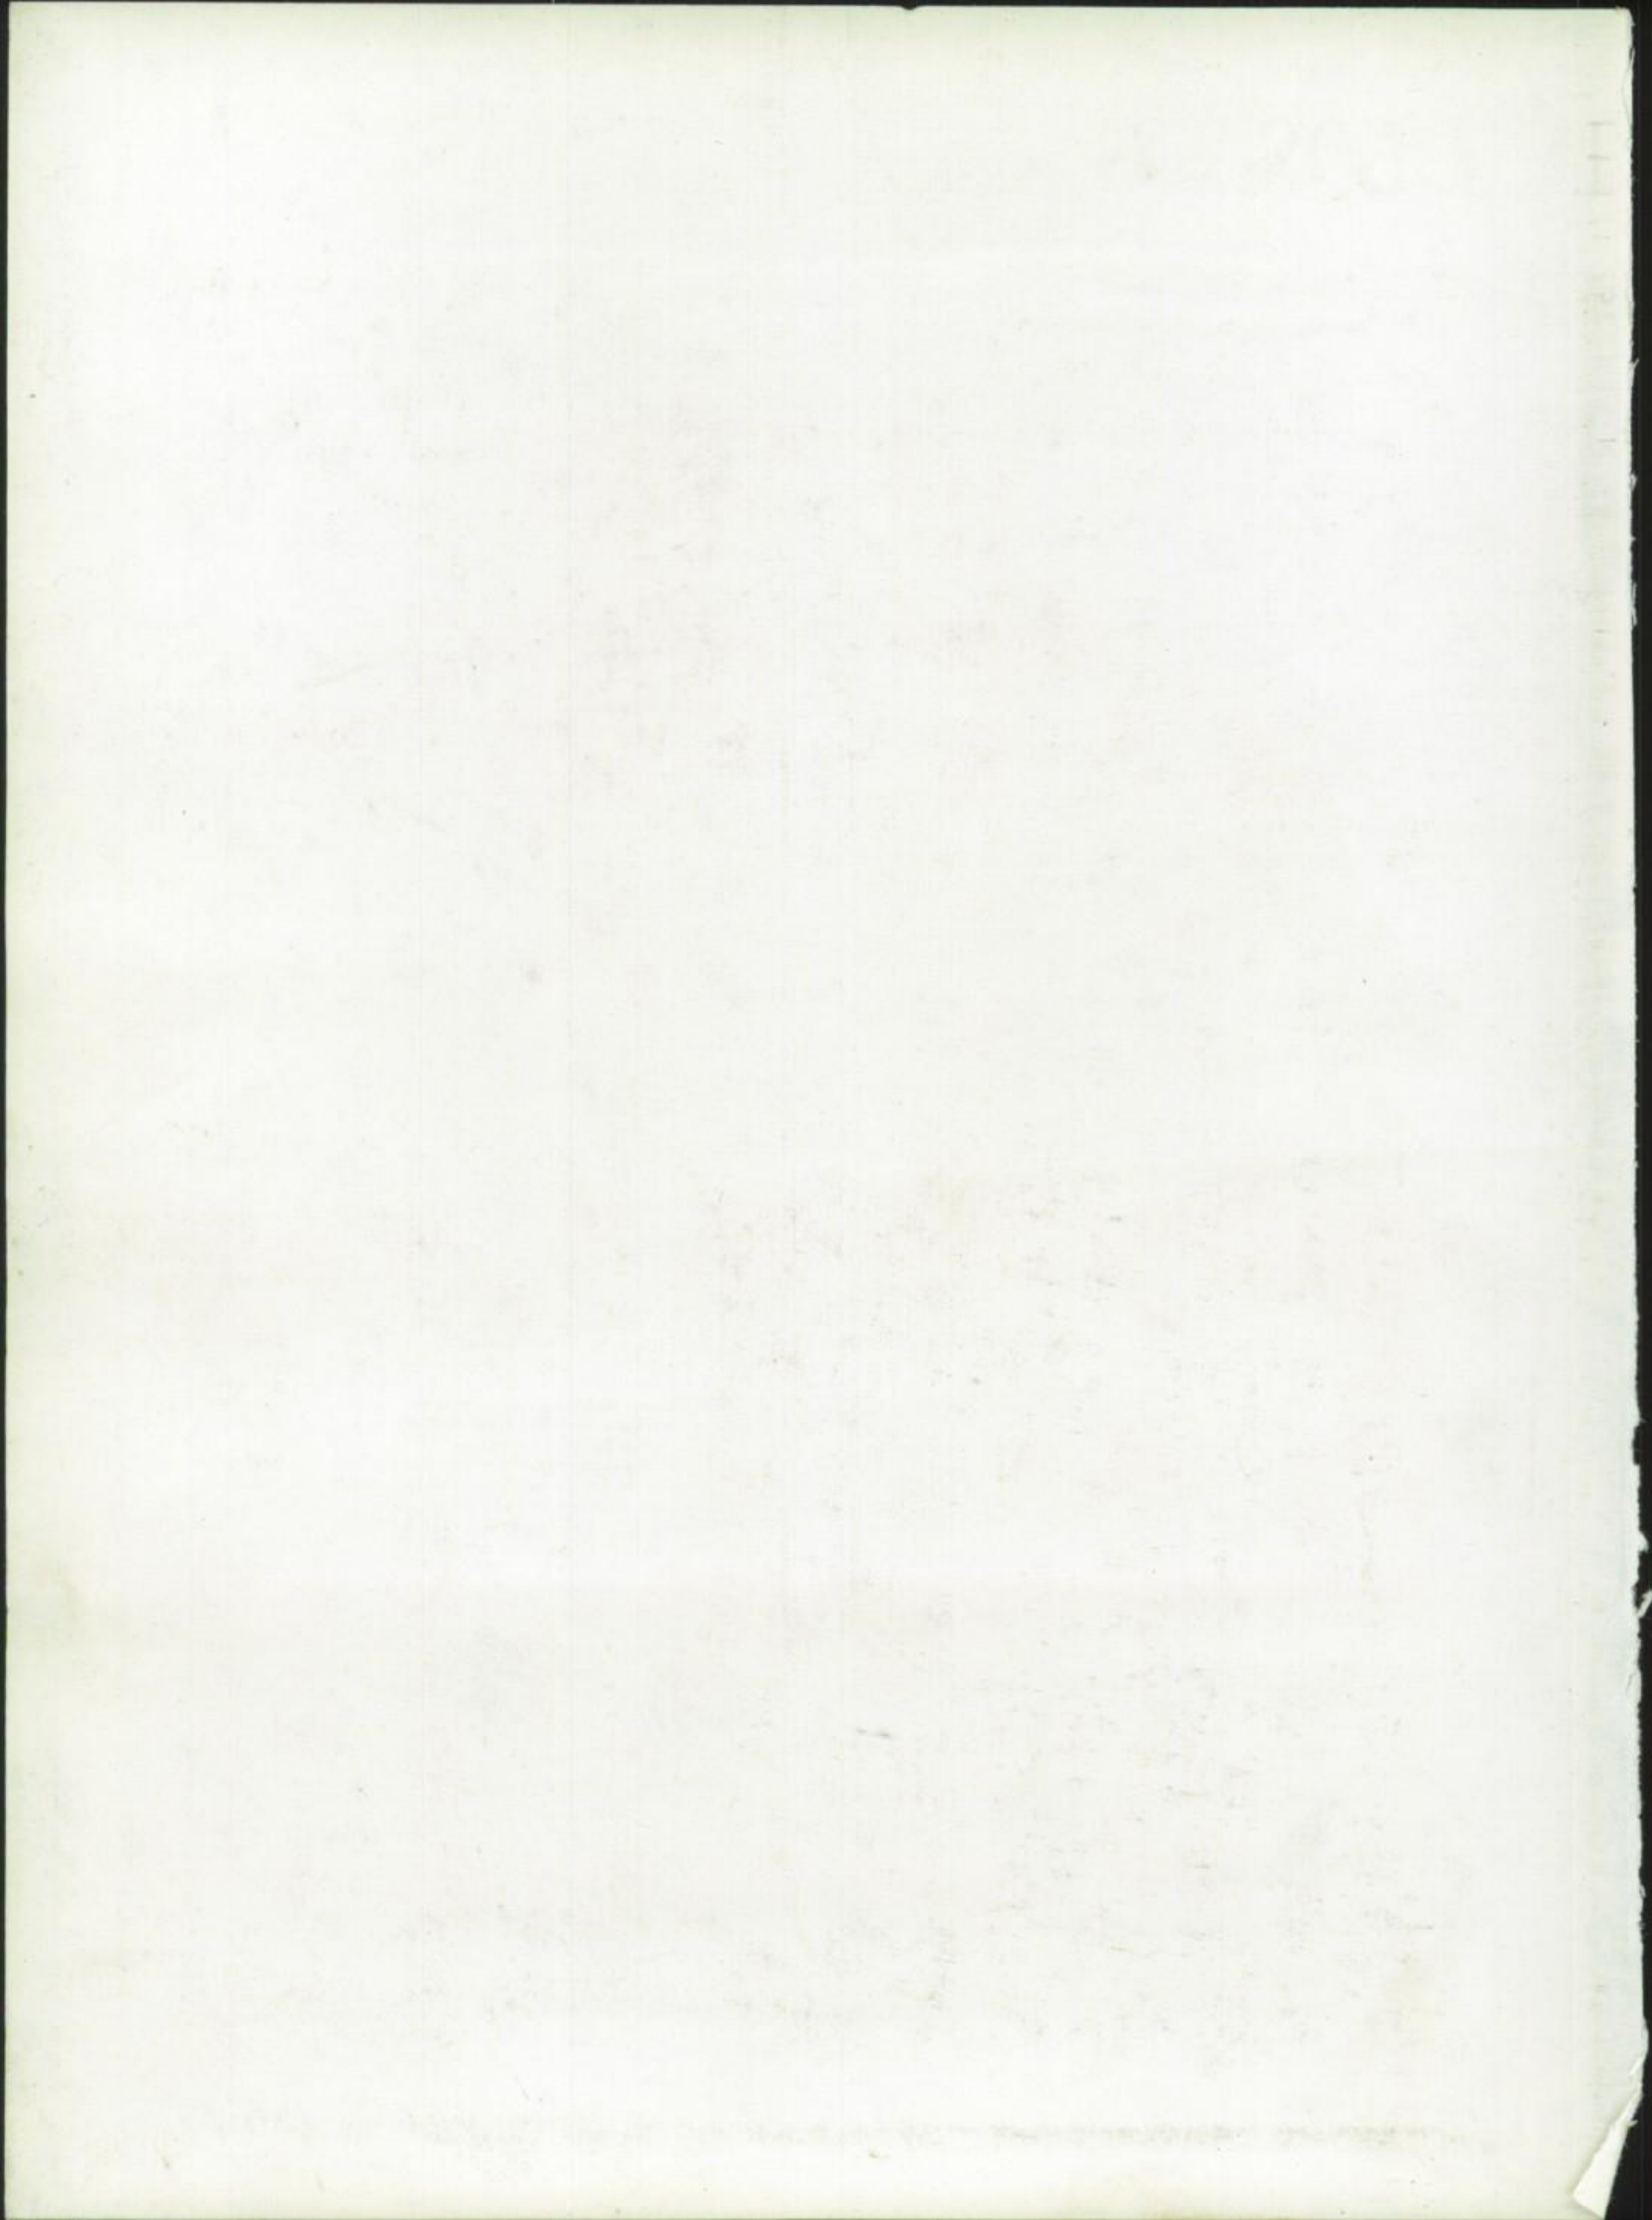

FINAL FOCUS.
"... reflection was one of those unpredictable things that could only be imagined."

Category awards have never been awarded in all areas on any single publication. Spectrum has also received First Place with Special Merit for the past several years from The American Scholastic Press Association.

NOTE

The 1988 Spectrum "Getting the Picture from the Inside-Out" provides another look into the life at St. Joes between Spring '87 and Spring '88. Its focus is not only on the events of this period but also on our perception of them and how they touch our lives. Following the 25th Anniversary issue, the 1988 Spectrum staff felt it was an appropriate time to step back and reassess life at SJ, to look at it from a point of view which is often lost in the midst of daily routines. While presenting the traditional aspects of SJ for all to see and reacquire the sometimes lost sense of appreciation, the '88 Spectrum also places the focus on the new additions to our school and community: the computers, the gym, the uniforms, the soda machines, the parking system, the band, the classes, the teachers, and so many other little changes that turned this year inside-out.

The production of the 1988 Spectrum would not have been possible without the help and support of many special people:

-Mrs. Reid who fearlessly donated room 110 as our home away from home. -Laurie Duff who ventured to help out in all areas, find organization amidst the chaos, and urge us on with her "crank-worker bees" chant.

-Raymond Patterson whose "Inside Scoop" idea helped develop the theme and whose presence reminded us of his support and understanding, especially in panic times.

-Tom Collins who always seemed to come through with the extra needed photo and who introduced the fish eye photo to add yet another perspective to our book.

-Kathy Rubano who was always willing to type and lend us her typewriter when we needed it.

-The Loring photographers, especially Steve Miller, Allen Bilodeau, Frank Papa, and Rene Noury who often responded to our last minute requests for a photographer.

-Mr. Montelli, Mrs. Rafferty, and Mrs. Ruddy who somehow put up with all of our special needs.

-Mrs. Rose Autori who made more photocopies for us than we could count. -Jim Toomey and Dave Gift who offered sound advice throughout production.

-Our teachers who understood when we had to leave class "for the yearbook" -The yearbookulars whose involvement and effort made the job a lot of fun, especially Cindy for her lasting dedication (was your name supposed to be in 160pt Korinna?). Many thanks to Karen Luchun and Joe LoPresti for supplying breakfast at early Saturday morning yearbook sessions (complete with toaster, waffles, butter, syrup, and OJ). The phrases that have been immortalized in room 110 will always have a special place in our hearts: "donned", "the 2:00 bell", "Crossing the Rubicon?", "Books out of slammed lockers", and of course "We have SO Much To Do".

-Mr. Norman DeTullo, whose enduring enthusiasm, guidance, friendship, and candy kept us going through the long and challenging struggle. We may not have made every deadline (we may not have made any!) but, Mr. D. "It's a homerun." Thanks for everything, "We can do it, we can do it: we did, WE DID!" Sincerely, Kathy Marsan & Joelle Alva
